Four Quentin Inmates Fail In Escape Swim

Try Ends Within Grounds

A swim for freedom by four convicted murderers at San Quentin Prison ended short of breath last night when one was spotted staggering ashore within prison confines after the quartet escaped its cell block using a prison-made rope.

Associate Warden Albert R. Jacobs said today all four men, serving life sentences for first degree murder, were captured shortly after the first was spotted at 10:30 p.m.

"They were damn cold and willing to give themselves up," another prison official commented after the prisoners were apprehended near a bayside parking lot.

CUT VENT

Jacobs said the men escaped by cutting through a vent in the ceiling of the east cell block, a medium security section, then crawling over the roof of the yellow building and lowering themselves to the ground with a braided denim rope. A hacksaw was found below the air vent on the walkway of the building's fifth level.

The inmates waded into the bay and were swimming parallel to shore about 25 yards out, trying to get beyond a prison fence protruding into the bay near the parking lot, when a guard spotted one tired swimmer, Jacobs said.

Other guards, who rushed to the parking lot to pick up the swimmer, spotted the others in the bay. A cell block head count, in progress at the time of the escape, indicated the four men as missing.

FOUR IDENTIFIED

The escapers were identified as Rex Spross, 38, committed in 1969 from San Diego County; Charles Beckett, 26, committed in 1968 from Sonoma County; Dennis Hanson, 25, committed in 1968 from Los Angeles County, and Victor Carrafa, 27, committed in 1967 from San Francisco County.

Helicopters' Marin Service Might Be Cut

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — San Francisco-Oakland Helicopter Airlines asked the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday to approve a temporary halt in service to Marin and other parts of the Bay Area, effective Aug. 15.

SFO president Joseph A. Young said the cutback was sought to give the airline "a chance for successful survival." He added the company hoped to undertake a general reorganization soon.

No proposed time limit on the suspension was given.

The cutback also would affect Berkeley, San Jose and Palo Alto flights, but the airline will continue a daily schedule of 52 trips between San Francisco and Oakland international airports. Forty daily trips would be temporarily eliminated under the proposed discontinuance.

Young said 14 of his 22 pilots were notified of their pending layoff and added his 225-employee operation would be reduced to about 90 under the proposed reorganization.

"SFO finds itself unable to continue operation of its present schedule and consequently must move to a position commensurate with its ability to serve the public and satisfy its fiscal responsibility," Young said.

"We are curtailing our general operation to concentrate on our most productive route, in the hope that the national decline in airline passenger traffic will be of a temporary nature," he added.

Young said a complex captial-raising venture undertaken in July was abandoned because declining national air traffic ticket sales cut deeper into SFT's income. SFO depends on major airlines for most of its business.

Last spring, SFO was granted a $1 fare increase for North Bay flights. A $2 boost for San Jose trips was approved in May.

The company uses the Richardson Bay Heliport for Marin service.

ACTION CALLED 'TOO HASTY'

Sausalito Trustees Pick Principals For Two Schools

The Sausalito School District board today chose two out-of-county educators as principals of Martin Luther King and Central schools, despite objections from spectators and the board president that the action was hasty.

On a 2-0 vote, with president Nathaniel Johnson abstaining, the board hired Armando Renzullo as principal of Central and Henry E. Hopkins, a black, as principal of troubled Martin Luther King.

Renzullo, whose last job was as a principal in the Las Virgenes Unified School District in Los Angeles County, and Hopkins, the only black candidate for the two posts, is vice principal of a Beaumont, Tex., junior high school.

Trustee Jerry L. Whitcomb moved that the men be awarded one-year contracts each at a $16,591 salary.

Johnson said his abstention "does not reflect on Mr. Renzullo or Mr. Hopkins," but he felt that "the board is moving too hastily."

He cited three reasons to delay filling the positions: discontent in the district, especially Marin City, over the quality of the applicants; the large number of students transferring to other districts and the request by Rev. A. Cecil Williams of San Francisco, who had been asked by the board to help in the selection, that all five final candidates be rejected.

"In light of these facts, I don't believe we should choose the principals now," Johnson said.

Eleanor Dixon, a former work-study employee of the district, questioned "the purpose of today's absurb deadline" in choosing principals.

"You seem to have taken a week to choose two principals for a year," she said, "after getting rid of one of the most highly qualified principals in the country."

The reference was to Sidney F. Walton Jr., fiery black educator dismissed by the board as Martin Luther King principal in May.

Interim Supt. Robert E. Spain explained today's date was not a deadline. "The board in June accepted a time-line for appointment by Aug. 1 in order to give them (new principals) 30 days to find out what's going on in this district. They could use a year," he said.

"Every minute that they have

ASKS CENSORSHIP

Hargis Attacks Liberal Senators

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—The founder-director of one of the nation's most conservative, anti-Communist organizations Saturday called on the country to "literally repudiate" and "politically censor" four powerful United States senators.

Billy James Hargis, in his annual "state of the union" message to the 12th annual session of the Christian Crusade, said if America didn't take action against "our new left isolationists . . . we can expect to see our military alliances destroyed within the next five years and face an armed invasion coming at us from the north, east, south and west."

Fulbright is chairman of the foreign relations committee. All are strongly opposed to the Vietnam war and have called on President Nixon to bring American troops home.

"These liberal politicians of both political parties, and their liberal counterparts in church and educational circles, are America's fifth column during World War III in which we are presently engaged," Hargis said.

"Having hypocritically forsaken their former internationalist stance, the outspoken 'soft on communism' liberals push their isolationist schemes with utter disregard of the inevitable confrontation between free world forces and communist slave masters.

"Demanding that our military missions be withdrawn from Southeast Asia without a military solution, they now pressure this administration to further dishonor our NATO and SEATO commitments and call for wholesale abandonment of our military bases in the Philippines, Korea, Taiwan, and even Portgual and Spain.

"The student anarchists and dissidents merely follow the orchestration of their liberal leaders in politics, religion and education."

Hargis told a packed cathedral audience the thinking of a growing majority of Americans is "switching to the right or conservative position which demands a military solution in Vietnam and a get-tough-with-communist policy internally."

He called it "the most heartening and promising hope of this year."

"These extreme political expedient liberals who gamble for their own political aggrandizement, have had their day, and the November elections will undoubtedly indicate that, as has the recent British repudiation of the socialist regime of Harold Wilson," Hargis said.

Towns Under Enemy Siege In Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Three Communists units totaling 3,000 men launched a thrust into northern Cambodia today, attacking the provincial capital of Kompong Thom and two other towns and cutting Highway 6 between Kompong Thom and Phnom Penh in several places.

A Cambodian commander near one of the besieged towns said the defense of it was "hopeless."

Military spokesman said three Communists units estimated at 1,000 men each drove on Kompong Thom, 80 miles north of Phnom Penh; Skoun, 38 miles northeast of the capital, and on the village of Pralay Meas, between Kompong Thom and Skoun.

Capt. Chan Than, commander of a 150-man government company 12 miles from Skoun, a town of 3,000, said Commu-

Israel Drafts Reply, Cabinet Crisis Seen

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

An Israeli ministerial committee today drafted the nation's formal reply accepting the U.S. Middle East pecae plan. Political sources said the acceptance portends the most serious Israeli cabinet crisis since the 1967 war.

Arab nations reacted cautiously to Israel's positive response to the U.S. proposal but Palestine guerrillas vowed to step up the fight against Israel to try to frustrate any peaceful settlement.

In Moscow, the Soviets today criticized Iraq's ruling Baathist party for opposing the last Middle East peace proposals, but failed to take public notice of Israel's acceptance of them.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, discussed the peace plan in a report from its Cairo correspondent. The initiative was described as being the work of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, not of the United States.

As the politicians conferred, Jordanian troops clashed with an Israeli patrol on the Jordan River cease-fire line in the north Jordan Valley Friday night. A Jordan military spokesman said the fighting lasted an hour and was without Jordanian casualties.

The Israeli cabinet adjourned after recommending Friday to accept the American proposal, including a 90-day cease-fire on all fronts.

The right wing Gahal party threatened to quit the cabinet if the government accepted the plan. Gahal leader Menahem Begin said the decision meant "a repartition of the native land. It is Gahal's duty to leave the cabinet." He said the party would decide whether to pull out of Premier Golda Meir's 24-member cabinet in a meeting Monday.

Even if Gahal did withdraw, Mrs. Meir still would have a comfortable parliamentary majority of 76 on which to base any new government, political sources said.

The Israeli cabinet's recommendation to accept the American peace plan was approved by a 17-6 vote Friday.

A cabinet spokesman said Israel would "appoint at the appropriate time, a representative for talks under auspices of the United Nations representative, Gunnar V. Jarring."

Announcing the approval Friday afternoon, Government Secretary Michael Arnon said the cabinet had named an eight man ministerial committee under Mrs. Meir to write the Israeli reply to the United States.

Despite Gahal's rejection of the plan, the government invited it to name two nominees to the committee.

Shifts Avert Month's Delay On Medi-Cal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Controversial Reagan administration changes in the Medi-Cal program went into effect today after getting the approval of a superior court judge.

Judge Irving H. Perluss Friday revoked a one-month delay in the implementation of the new regulations when a disputed clause was revised to conform with federal law.

The California Rural Legal Assistance had asked for a restraining order to stop the Medi-Cal revision on grounds they would adversely affect 50,000 recipients in the medically indigent category. Perluss Thursday delayed action on the request until Sept. 1 to give both sides time to work out a compromise over the measure.

In a surprise move, Dr. Earl W. Brian, director of the State Health Care Services Department, appeared in court Friday and said he was changing the controversial clause to bring it in line with standards set by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

As originally proposed the clause said a single person earning more than $150 a month in net income would have to pay part of his medical bills before getting full benefits. The changes raised the level to

Lobbyists Join Campaign To Break Loose Tax Deadlock

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A dozen lobbyists, representing interests ranging from oil to horseracing, having joined the campaign to break loose Gov. Ronald Reagan's deadlocked $1 billion tax shift plan.

On a separate front, the governor aided hometown pressure campaigns directed against 12 Democratic senators and one Republican who have blocked the proposal on the Senate floor only two votes away from approval.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, chief author of Reagan's tax program, disclosed Friday that he has "asked literally a dozen legislative advocates (lobbyists) to help me round up votes in any legitimate way possible."

"We are doing everything in our power to bring the necessary pressures to bear and by 'we' I mean the governor's office, too," the San Rafael Republican told newsmen.

Included were lobbyists re-

Landowner Beheaded

NEW DELHI (UPI)—A band of 25 Communist-led Naxalite guerrillas invaded the home of a landowner in Kerala state as his family was eating dinner, sacked the household then beheaded the landowner, the Press Trust of India said today.

The dagger-wielding Naxalites broke into the home of Narayana Nair, 63, Thursday night and robbed the house of jewelry and cash then dragged Nair from the house and cut off his head before his screaming wife and daughters, PI said. The attackers escaped into the night.

No Firing Orders

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A Ohio National Guard investigation into the killing of four Kent State University students reports that guardsmen fired without orders but believed their lives were in danger, Scripps-Howard newspaper said today.

The newspapers said the investigation revealed there was no sniper fire as first reported by the state adjutant general S. T. Del Corso and other guard officers.

The students were killed May 4 during a campus confrontation with National Guard troops. Nine other students were wounded.

NEW YORK (UPI)—At least one person, a woman, was killed today and 50 to 60 passengers were reported injured in a subway fire in Manhattan's financial district.

The fire occurred in a tunnel 200 feet from the Bowling Green station of the IRT Lexington Avenue line.

Transit Authorities said the Brooklyn-bound train was evacuated after fire erupted at 7:20 a.m. The injured were taken to Beekman-Downtown and Bellevue hospitals.

Soviets Fire Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has fired two intercontinental ballistic missiles into the Pacific Ocean, apparently testing a system designed to fool antimissile defenses, sources said Friday.

Pentagon officials said that the two improrved SS11 missiles were fired from deep in South Russia on Monday and Tuesday, but the officials refused to say how the firings were monitored by the United States or what the purpose of the firings was.

Second Quake Hits

LIMA, Peru (UPI)—A strong earthquake capable of causing great damage shook Latin America from Mexico to Argentina, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Friday, exactly two months after a quake of similar intensity killed more than 50,000 persons in Peru.

The quake's epicenter occurred more than 400 miles below the Amazon jungle at the sparsely inhabited juncture of the Peruvian, Ecuadorean and Colombian borders, the Peruvian earthquake observatory said.

Little damage and no victims have been reported.

Shrine For Those Killed In Toyotas

TATESHINA, Japan (UPI) — The president of Japan's Toyota Motor Co has put up a $445,000 shrine for the repose of the souls of persons killed in Toyota cars.

The shrine, a 600-square-foot building made of ferro-concrete and painted red, stands in this mountain resort community where some Toyota executives have summer homes. Inside is a statue of Kannon, the Buddhist deity of mercy.

"I have been feeling very sorry for the persons who died in traffic accidents and who might have perished on the roads in vehicles made in our factories," said Toyota president Shotaro Kamiya, 72.

He said that after years of soul-searching he finally decided to put up some money for the shrine. Toyota dealers, Kamiya's personal friends and an American oil company were among other contributors.

Residents of the neighborhood call the statue in the shrine, which is a little over three feet high, "Kotsu Anzen Kannon-Do" — the traffic safety Kannon.

There is no shortage of souls to pray for. Japanese automakers will turn out a record 5 million cars and trucks this year and the traffic death toll now runs close to 18,000 lives a year — this in a nation where cars were relatively scarce 20 years ago.

The Japanese are supposed to be a fatalistic people, but they have not yet achieved the American public's resignation to traffic deaths as a price for speed and mobility.

Families of accident victims are organizing to campaign for higher damage settlements and to force the automakers themselves to do more about safety. Most of their ideas would cost the manufacturers money.

Some anthorpologists think the ancient Japanese had fears of reprisals from the dead and there are several modern survivals of this belief.

Japanese farmers, for instance, formerly provided Buddhist funerals for cows they killed for beef. In prewar Japan, some companies held religious services for wornout machinery that was about to be junked.

Even today, tailors in Tokyo gather each year at a temple for a Buddhist mass for needles that were worn out that year and thrown away.

Syndicated Columnist Doris Fleeson Dies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doris Fleeson, a syndicated political columnist for 25 years, died today on the 12th anniversary of her marriage to Dan A. Kimball, former Navy secretary who died just 36 hours earlier.

The reporting career of Miss Fleeson, 69, dated from the 1920s when she graduated from the University of Kansas. Beginning in 1945 she wrote a five-times-a-week column distributed by United Feature Syndicate until her semi-retirement in 1967.

Cause of death was listed as "massive thrombosis."

She was a champion of women's rights and led a battle for installation of rest room facilities in the Senate press gallery during the 1940s.

An intimate friend of the Franklin D. Roosevelt family, Miss Fleeson covered the terms of five presidents, including John F. Kennedy who wrote on a picture taken of the two of them talking on the White House lawn in 1963:

"Dear Doris: There are many presidents who can read your column, but it is only a happy few who have it delivered to them in person. Sincerely, John Kennedy."

A columnist colleague called Miss Fleeson "a great perfectionist and absolute professional. She never missed a deadline."

Born May 20, 1901, at Sterling, Kan., she took her first newspaper job for a suburban Chicago newspaper in the early 1920s. Her next was for a Great Neck, N. Y., paper, but she made daily train trips into New York City to get a job on the New York Daily News.

She finally won a job on the News as a police reporter and later established her reputation with her coverage of the Seabury political scandals in New York.

From 1927 to 1942, Miss Fleeson was Washington correspondent for the News. For the next two years she was a war correspondent for Woman's Home Companion. In 1945 she began writing her syndicated column.

She was recipient of several journalism awards, including the Raymond Clapper Award, Theta Sigma Phi Headliner Award and the Missouri Journalism Award.

Miss Fleeson's marriage to John O'Donnell, a colleague on the News, ended in divorce in 1940. They had one daughter, Doris, surviving of New York City.

On Aug. 1, 1958, she married Dan Kimball, a World War I Pilot with Jimmy Doolittle who later became Navy secretary in the Truman administration. He had recently retired as head of the Aerojet General Corp. Cause of his death Thursday has not been determined.

Kimball's burial was set for Arlington National Cemetery at 10:30 a.m. EDT. Funeral arrangements for Miss Fleeson were incomplete.

Five Killed In Head-On Crash

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI)—Five persons died early today in a high-speed, head-on collision between a station wagon and a car 24 miles east of this northern Idaho city.

State police said the victims apparently included two teenagers and three construction workers headed for the Dworshak Dam Project on the Clearwater River.

Names of the victims were being withheld until families of the dead could be notified.

Four of the victims died at the scene and a fifth died a short time later at St. Joseph's Hospital here.

Rioters In Belfast Defy Peace Pleas

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—Rioters attacked British troops with steel-tipped arrows, bricks and bottles today in a Roman Catholic district, ignoring appeals for peace from the father of a youth shot to death by army riflemen in Friday's disorders.

Gunfire broke out early today along barricades separating Catholic and protestant districts.

A British army spokesman said troops were ordered to shoot to kill anyone throwing Molotov cocktails as shots fired by unidentified civilians rang out along Crumlin Road.

Several shots were heard along the barricaded road soon after troops moved in shortly before dawn and dispersed rioters manning the blazing barricades.

A British Marine opened fire today at a man preparing to throw a gasoline bomb. An Army spokesman said the would-be bomber fled without throwing the bomb, pursued by rapid fire shots aimed by a Marine crouched behind a barbed-wire barricade.

Six persons were arrested, a police spokesman said.

About 300 troops replied with CS nausea gas and water cannon, sealed off the area and moved in to remove the barricades while holding their fire and avoiding direct clashes

ICC Official Admits Fraud, Resigns Post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It took H. Neil Garson 21 years to climb through the ranks to the Interstate Commerce Commission's top career post as ICC secretary. Friday, his $30,000 a year job crashed around him in a moment of tears at a congressional hearing table.

"I want to say that I did a very foolish and improper thing," Garson said through tears that blurred his glasses. His short, chunky body squirmed in the witness chair as three members of a House Commerce subcommittee, staff investigators and a small crowd of newsmen and spectators looked on in embarrassment.

Only two days earlier, Garson sat at the same table and told the same committee that several months before, he had reimbursed industry groups who had picked up his tab at their conventions. He presented the dated check stubs to prove his point.

But on Friday, dabbing his eyes with a handkerchief and speaking in a barely audible voice, he admitted that he had painstakingly rewritten almost three months of stubs in an effort to disprove subcommittee charges he was guilty of accepting money from the ICC-regulated rroups while in at least one instance accepting government expense money.

reputation, without having the counsel, I prepared substitute check stubs," Garson said softly.

"These later prepared stubs were for the purpose of supporting a date of payment which I believed, and still believe, to be correct, but for which I have no written record. The actual check was one out of my wallet and not from my check book."

Almost as an afterthought, he said, "It is my intention on Monday to tender my resignation as secretary."

Rep. Torbert MacDonald, D-Mass., acting subcommittee chairman, said Garson's action could open him to perjury charges and a contempt of Congress citation.

"It is obvious Mr. Garson lied to us under oath," MacDonald said.

In a sworn statement introduced before Garson's admission, Miss Norma L. Iser, executive secretary of the Association of Interstate Commission Practitioners, said that Garson offered to pay hotel bills which the association had picked up and asked her to backdate receipts for the payments.

Miss Iser said Garson gave her between $200 and $300 and asked her to date a receipt back to Jan. 1, 1970. She said the offer was made on June 11

ALL OF A SUDDEN, A TIGHT SQUEEZE

Motorists through Sausalito are often surprised as they head North on Bridgeway from downtown to find the wide, two-lane street narrow sharply into one tight lane for a few hundred feet, then blossom into two lanes. According to City Engineer Norman Wohlschlaeger, the bottleneck will be eliminated as soon as the Northwestern Pacific Railroad takes steps to grant a city request for an easement west of the present narrow strip of road, between Easterby and Olive streets. Until the railroad acts, he said, the city is trying to lessen the hazard by leaving open a planned city island to create what amounts to a second emergency lane. (Independent-Journal photo)

July Classified Ads Hit Record 38,018

The Independent-Journal last month set a record in the number of classified advertisements.

During July, 38,018 advertisements appeared in the I-J's classified columns, reported Carl R. Lehman Jr., classified advertising manager. This exceeded by nearly 700 the former record of 37,349 classified advertisements in one month, set in July 1965.

Ten years ago, the July total was 21,964, Lehman noted.

"This represents the confidence of the people of Marin County in the I-J and in its ability to supply their needs and help them dispose of items they no longer want," said Lehman. "It also testifies to the result-getting power of I-J want ads, due to the penetration of the market by the newspaper."

Advertisements placed by private parties in the I-J "want ad" columns outnumber those by commercial firms about 4-to-1, he commented.

Marin's 'James Bond' Fired From Post

I - J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Sausalito's "James Bond" has been fired as night head of San Francisco's Juvenile Hall for "questionable judgment."

Kenneth Theodore Chelton, 41, who received mail at his 370 Ebbtide Avenue apartment under the fictional British spy's name, was dismissed Wednesday because he was arrested for possessing a machine gun, because he was involved in a brawl and because the Internal Revenue Service has placed a lien on his salary, Robert Botka, chief juvenile probation officer, said.

Botka said Chelton would not be reinstated even if he is found blameless. "The basic charge against him was being intemperate and getting involved with the police so often," said Botka who held disciplinary hearing July 15 in which the charges were made.

Chelton's problems began April 13 when Sausalito police, responding to complaints, found him lying in a pool of blood in his apartment badly beaten with an Aztec war club.

Investigating the brawl, police found a machine gun and charged him with illegally possessing it although he said it belonged to a roommate.

Less than a week later tax collectors filed a lien against his wages alleging nonpayment of taxes.

Puppetry Group Sets Plays In San Rafael

The Puppet Government, a Marin puppetry group, will present performances of humorous puppet plays at two playgrounds in San Rafael next week.

Performances are scheduled at 2 p.m. Monday at Hartzell School playground and at 2 and 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at Albert Park.

Public Presentation Of Novato Study Set

The first public presentation of the downtown Novato study prepared by consultants Sedway and Cooke will be made to a joint session of the Novato City Council, planning commission and downtown study committee at 8 p.m. Monday at Hill Junior High School.

The study, begun in 1968, makes comprehensive recommendations on the structure and development of a downtown section of Novato to solve present problems and assure future development.

Acquisition by the city or by a specially created private corporation, closely guided by the city, of more than 100 acres of downtown Novato and building a major shopping center are recommended in the report.

Other recommendations concern housing, parking, streets and business development other than the center.

The downtown area contemplated in the report is largely west of the future Highway 101 bypass, south of the proposed Atherton Avenue - Highway 101 interchange and northeast of Novato Boulevard.

The name Oahu, capital island of Hawaii, means "the gather place" in Hawaiian.

Hub Superintendent Search Down To One

San Anselmo School District trustees have narrowed selection of a new superintendent to one candidate, but it may take an unusual effort to find out if he will be the man ultimately selected.

Board president Elmer A. Weden Jr. said today he and another board member are considering a trip into California's mountains this weekend to question the applicant, now on a backpacking vacation.

"We have narrowed the field to one," Dr. Weden said, "but that doesn't mean we have tentatively selected a superintendent."

Weden said two board members have some "reservations" about the man who is the last of 60 applicants still being considered for the position following the board's closed session yesterday. Weden would not disclose the candidate's identity.

He added that the remaining three trustees, including himself, are satisfied with the man's qualifications, "but I will not vote in favor of him if any board member still has serious reservations."

A new superintendent is being sought to replace Stephen L. Parodi, who is stepping down to serve as assistant superintendent in charge of business administration.

Should Weden and the other board member reach the applicant tomorrow, the board president said he would arrange a public meeting of the board with the candidate on Monday.

Linda Denies Life-Saving Manson Story

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Linda Kasabian, the witness whose testimony could send Charles Manson and three young women to the gas chamber, was asked Friday if she was telling the story of the Tate-LaBianca slayings to save her own life.

"I'd give my life if none of this had happened — for the people who were killed," she said.

In an emotional exchange with Fitzgerald, Mrs. Kasabian admitted she knew she would be granted immunity from prosecution if she told the story of the seven slayings.

Fitzgerald asked if she knew what might happen if she did not testify for the prosecution. She said she presumed she might be prosecuted herself.

"Do you understand what the penalty is?"

"Yes, the gas chamber."

"Are you testifying in order to save your life?"

"I'd give my life if none of this had happened—for the people who were killed."

Earlier she told Fitzgerald she "felt like a blind little girl in the forest and I took the first path that came to me" when he asked if she considered herself still impressionable, naive and innocent when she came to the Spahn Ranch.

She said she "loved Charley" when she first joined the family and she thought of him as a "messiah. . . the second coming of Christ."

Fitzgerald asked her how many girls were at the ranch when she first came there and she replied there were about 20.

"Did he divide his time equally among them?"

"Not equally."

"Did some get more attention than others?"

"Yes."

"Were you one of them?"

"At the beginning I was. He would talk with me and tell me about his philosophies and make love to me."

"How many times did he make love to you?"

"Four times. Once in the cave, once at the waterfall, once in the trailer and once in the house."

"Why do you remember them?"

"I don't know why. They just stick in mind."

Fitzgerald asked when she made love to the other men at the ranch.

"I can't remember the dates," she replied. "I eventually got around to making love to all of them."

Mrs. Kasabian testified that Manson talked with her at length about his philosophy, parts of which she said she did not agree with. But she said she never questioned Manson because "the girls told me that everything he did and said was always right."

ESCAPE

the men after their capture and said they would be referred to the Marin district attorney's office for possible prosecution on escape charges.

It was the first major attempt at a prison break at San Quentin since New Year's Eve in 1969, when six inmates tried to escape with a makeshift rope. The prisoner's were caught when the rope snapped on the prison's south wall.

In January 1967, four condemned prisoners failed in a escape try after sawing their way out of cells.

TAXES

presenting oil companies, manufacturers, Los Angeles County and horseracing, Bagley said.

In exchange for support of race track interests, he said he agreed to use of one of his own bills as a vehicle to give the horseracing industry a $13.5 million revenue break.

"I'm using every bit of legislative strength that I have, including the assistance of any legislative advocates who I can ask to help me if they have some particular friends in the Senate," he said.

"This is the norm," he said. "It's par for this kind of course" in seeking to overcome "deliberate, overt obstructionism" of the 13 intransigent senators.

Bagley agreed to use a minor technical bill he was carrying and accept the race amendments in the Senate Governmental Organization Committee which increased from 14 to 16 per cent the take-out of each dollar bet at the tracks.

Of the additional annual revenue produced, $6 million would go to the tracks, $5.5 million to horse owners and breeders and $2.1 million to the state.

The horserace bill had no direct connection with the stalled tax revision programm

"It's not a deal," Bagley said. "It's not a quid pro quo. A good dozen legislative advocates have been helping me — not as a transaction but as a courtesy."

He said that representatives of the horserace industry and officials in the State Department of Finance agreed months ago that "the industry needed an economic shot in the arm" He said he was told that the "industry is making less than 5 per cent on their money."

Meantime, Reagan assistants reported details of the measure, aimed at shifting $1 billion away from the property tax in the next four years, were provided to Republican State Senate candidates and local county officials for use as ammunition against the holdouts.

Included is veteran Republican Sen. Clark Bradley of San Jose who voted against the program because he said it unfairly required sales taxpayers to finance relief for property taxpayers.

"We are making every attempt to make sure that we can get the word out as widely as possible who the people are that are holding up the bill," said George Steffes, the governor's legislative secretary.

"And that goes for everyone of them, including Clark Bradley," Steffes said.

He said in Bradley's case Santa Clara County officials were provided with "impact" details about the package and now supported it. But in the case of Sen. Walter Stiern, D-Bakersfield, his election opponent was handed the information.

Steffes said that Bill Park, the Republican nominee for Stiern's seat, "has requested and received from us complete information on the impact of the tax bill and is making it a major issue in the campaign."

Stiern led the Democrats Friday in redeclaring their opposition to the program. Bradley issued a separate statement recommending his opposition "based on principles and not on politics."

One feature of the bill, increasing the state sales tax from five to six cents on the dollar, was to have taken effect today and would have provided $1.3 million daily.

Bagley said the measure will be "adjusted" to compensate for that loss and reported that another vote on the bill probably would not be attempted Monday unless the impasse broke suddenly.

Big Search For Victims Of Kidnap

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI) — Police and soldiers sealed off the Uruguayan capital today and raided suspected hideouts to search for Latin America's latest political kidnap victims, an American diplomat with a bullet hole in his chest and a Brazilian envoy abducted before the eyes of his wife and child.

Two other Americans nursed sore heads inflicted by pistol whippings during frustrated kidnap attempts.

Authorities announced one arrest in the massive manhunt but withheld comment on the kidnapers' demand for release of fellow terrorists in exchange for the captive diplomats.

"At the moment we're making raids and taking advantage of tips," Interior Minister Antonio Francese, Uruguay's chief of security, said early today.

He appealed to the people to join the search and warned of "severe measures" to combat terrorism in this nation of 2.5 million.

The kidnap victims were identified as Dan Mitrione, 50, of Richmond, Ind., a U.S. aid mission police adviser who is the best informed U.S. official on terrorism here, and Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide, 41, Brazilian consul in Montevideo.

The two who escaped their assailants were Gordon Jones, 27, of San Luis Obispo, Calif., U.S. Embassy second secretary, and Nathan Rosenfeld, 48, of Herkimer, N.Y., the cultural attache.

Jones, bound and bleeding from head injuries, flung himself from beneath a blanket onto the pavement while his abductors' car was traveling through a working-class district of Montevideo.

Rosenfeld, who was also bleeding from head injuries, fought off his kidnapers in an apartment building garage.

Mitrione's car was rammed by a pickup truck while he was en route to work and six men with machineguns and revolvers leaped out and grabbed him.

Witnesses did not report shots but the kidnapers said later Mitrione was shot in the chest during the assult.

Dias Gomide was taken from his home in the presence of his wife and three-year-old son by 10 armed men who gained entry posing as a telephone repair crew.

Rosenfeld and Jones were jumped in the garage of Jones, apartment house by Tupamaro gunmen. Rosenfeld fought free and ran for help. Jones was forced into the car from which he later escaped.

Authorities announced the arrest of Sergio da Rosa Silveira, 24, an agriculture student suspected of participating in the attack on Jones and Rosenfeld.

A Tupamaro communique demanded "immediate release of political prisoners to be identified opportunely in exchange for the freedom of diplomatic officials detained by our organization."

Car Crashes Into Building, Driver Killed

NEW YORK (UPI)—A man driving a large car on the sidewalk at high speed crashed into an apartment house in lower Manhattan Saturday, shearing a support beam that caused part of five floors to collapse.

The driver of the car was killed instantly and at least eight residents of the 100-year-old apartment building were injured.

Witnesses said the car mounted the sidewalk a block from the apartment building at 137 Forsythe Street, hit a fire plug and broke it off, knocked down a maple tree, ripped an apartment house bannister and then crossed the street and crashed into the building.

Residents who were outside the house said the car was traveling "on the sidewalk at a high rate of speed." The car exploded in flames when it hit and the crash brought the corner of the brick building down, exposing living rooms and bedrooms and throwing some residents to the street below.

New Base Store Building Begins

Construction of a $894,800 base exchange store across the street from the commissary near the north gate of Hamilton Air Force Base is underway, with completion expected in mid-November, the base information office reports.

nist guerrillas had blown up a bridge on the northern side while a large Communist force in the Prey Kong jungle blocked the southern entry. Hundreds of residents were fleeing the town, he said.

"No reinforcements can get in," he said. "It is hopeless to defend."

Lt. Col. Mon Cheng, commander of the Kompong Chnang military district said 30 recruits defending Pralay Meas surrendered or fled in an attack Friday by some 100 Viet Cong guerrillas.

"The Communists are attempting to drive their way south of Kompong Cham," a Mekong River provincial capital 30 miles due east of Skoun, the spokesman said. He said the Communist attackers appeared to be fresh troops well equipped with 120mm rockets and 82mm mortars.

The heaviest attacks were reported around Kompong Thom, the important communications center which has been under siege for weeks. The commander there reported the Communists "are attacking from every side."

Cambodian troops supported by tanks and armored cars, in the meantime, swept down Highway 4 linking Phnom Penh with the nation's only deepwater port of Kompong Som in an effort to reopen the highway over which the capital gets much of its supplies and fuel.

The Communists cut the roadway three days ago after siezing the Kirirom Plateau, 56 miles west-southwest of Phnom Penh. Cambodian commanders were in the process of sending reinforcements to the counter-attack against the plateau.

HEALTH

$158 a month, as required by federal standards.

Levels were changed correspondingly for persons with dependents.

The regulations also included one which brought 150,000 persons into the full Medi-Cal program for the first time. Previously, they only received partial benefits. The CRIA did not dispute this change.

A spokesman for the department said all the changes, many of which were administrative, would result in a savings of $7 million the first year. As originally offered they would have saved the state $9 million.

Brian said telegrams were sent to all county welfare administrators informing them the regulation is take effect today.

Despite his change in the controversial revision, Brian said he did not agree with the federal formula. He said the maintenance need formula of HEW was "being misinterpreted in Washington."

"But in the interest of saving the system and to avoid confusion among the medically needy, we are willing to raise the income formula a few dollars for each person."

At a public hearing in June, Medi-Cal recipients vigorously opposed the changes affecting the 50,000 persons.

Abdel Nasser called an emergency meeting of the Arab Socialist Union's higher executive committee today. The committee, Egypt's highest policy making body, will study Egypt's next move in relation to the Israeli acceptance of the plan.

In Amman, a spokesman for the Arab guerrilla central committee said, "the Israeli decision does not affect us.

"We are not bound by any agreement and we shall continue to escalate our attacks."

"The Commandos will keep fighting until full liberation (of Palestine)," the guerrillas said.

Guerrilla leader Yassir Arafat told thousands of Palestinian demonstrators in Amman Friday, "the Palestinian revolution is determined to liberate all of Palestine. We will fight the war with all our strength."

Syria, the Sudan and Iraq led the opposition in the Arab world to the American peace plan.

Authoritative sources in Washington said today two of the four Egyptian MIG21s shot down by Israeli planes over the Suez Canal Thursday were flown by Soviet pilots.

The sources could not say what happened to the downed Soviet pilots. An Israeli announcement Thursday said the three pilots were seen parachuting out of their stricken craft over Israel territory.

Housing Shortage Solutions Offered

To ease what has been described as a critical housing shortage, Marin should protect older homes from commercial takeover, allow more prefabricated homes, open up second floors of shopping centers as living units and even permit single family homes to add living units or convert garages.

These recommendations are made in a housing report entitled, "Countywide Initial Housing Element," prepared by the county planning department for the city-county planning council.

The council will receive the report at its meeting at 8 p.m. Aug. 6 in the planning commission chambers at the Civic Center.

Albert Solnit, chief of advance planning, said local action must be taken on several fronts to ease the housing shortage. Recommendations made in the report include:

1. Raise income ceilings and remove residence restrictions for the leased public housing program.

2. Require each new private housing development to have some low income units, through local regulations and review.

3. Provide elderly housing in locations such as over central city parking lots and second stories overlooking shopping centers.

4. Encourage more moderate income homes through density bonuses, planned unit zoning and support of nonprofit developers.

5. Use surplus public lands for housing, allow prefabricated housing, and open mobile home parks to families with children.

6. Protect older homes near business districts by zoning so that they will not be razed for commercial use.

7. Provide tax rebates to low and moderate income homeowners through new legislation.

8. Seek federal urban renewal funds.

"A radical idea, but nonetheless worth exploring, is to allow some single family homes to add a second unit or to connect the garage for use by the elderly," says the report.

Marin Bridge Players High In Tournament

Marin County bridge players captured several near-tops yesterday on the first of a three-day tournament at the National Guard Armory in Santa Venetia.

In the men's pairs, Court Smith and Ian W. Miller, both of San Rafael, took second overall, behind Fred Carpenter and Frank Fee of Berkeley.

Harry Lees of Greenbrae and James Myers of Kentfield were third overall, and James F. Price of San Rafael, teamed with Leslie H. West of Oakland, came in fourth overall.

In the women's pairs, Mildred Mazza of Greenbrae and Marguerite Tognoli of San Rafael took third overall, followed by Shirley Smith and Janet London of San Rafael. Marie Marcelli and Sandra LeVine of San Rafael placed sixth overall.

First overall in the women's pairs went to Jeanie Salvato of Glen Ellen and Jackie Portoian of San Bruno.

In last night's mixed pairs, Alan Hewett and Augusta Stillson of San Rafael were the top Marin performers with a sixth overall. Ruth Bertauche of San Rafael, teamed with Ron Von Der Porton of San Francisco, captured a section first. Winners of the mixed pairs were Buote Madave of Walnut Creek and Mrs. J.E. Mitchell of Orinda.

In the evening junior event, Jay and Marilyn Segal of San Rafael captured first overall, followed by Ronald and Maureen Studen of San Anselmo.

Many other Marin players won points by placing in their sections.

Play resumed this afternoon and a two-session open pairs was scheduled for 8 p.m.

The tournament, hosted by the Marin unit of the American Contract Bridge League, will wind up tomorrow with a double session team-of-four event.

Side games are scheduled for each afternoon and evening session.

Narcotics Charges Dismissed For Four

Assorted narcotics charges against four persons arrested in a Jan. 23 drug raid in Fairfax were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court, at the request of the district attorney.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said a principal witness in the case was not available to testify. The charges were dropped against Carl Romona Victoria Gomez, 25, accused of possessing amphetamine; Richard William Snyder, 35, possessing amphetamine and marijuana; Lynda Louise Jupp, and Alec Arthur Jupp, both 26, charged with possession of pot and amphetamine as well as a hypodermic needle.

Two Teen Suspects Face Juvenile Court

Two teen-agers accused in the July 16 burglary of a San Rafael liquor warehouse have been accepted for further action in juvenile court.

Donald Albert Johnson, 18, and Jack Llewelly Keith, 19, both of Corte Madera, and a companion, Donald George Riley, 17, of Tiburon were arrested by police outside the Trobetta Liquors warehouse. Riley was processed through Juvenile Hall.

Hub Man Guilty Of Ring Theft

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A San Anselmo man has been given a six-month suspended jail term and placed on two years' probation by Municipal Court Judge Charles E. Goff for stealing an expensive diamond and emerald ring from a San Francisco home on June 9.

Kenneth S. Grove, 37, of 356 Redwood Road, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of petty theft. He had earlier been accused of grand theft.

Irate Taxpayers Plan Questions

Candidates for public office in November will be asked to answer written questions prepared by the Irate Taxpayers of Marin.

Philip Maley, recording secretary of the group, said a committee was formed at Thursday night's meeting of the Irate Taxpayers to formulate the questions.

He said the questionnaire will allow voters to grade the candidates on their answers.

The group will not meet in August, Maley said, and the next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Sept. 24.

Reed Trustees To Study Budget

Reed School District trustees will consider adoption of a 1970-71 operating budget of $2,284,046 Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Del Mar School.

The board will also hear a report from Interim Supt. Stanley H. Friese on organization of sixth, seventh and eighth grade programs at Del Mar and Reedland Woods schools.

Friese said trustees will meet in closed session at 4 p.m. Tuesday with members of a screening committee to interview two candidates for the post of superintendent.

Suspected Molester Hearing Scheduled

Preliminary hearing for Ronald Paul Rowell, 23, of Novato, accused of molesting several small girls in Novato, will be held Aug. 13 in Marin Municipal Court.

The offenses charged involve incidents between December 1969 and March 1970.

Authority On Harbors Feted On Retirement

Paul L. Vredenburg of Sausalito has retired as the most honored employee in the history of the San Francisco District of the Army Corps of Engineers.

During a 33-year career, which he completed as chief of the construction-operations division, Vredenburg's awards included the meritorious civilian service medal, six consecutive annual citations for outstanding performance, a citation and plaque from the postmaster general and numerous commendations from congressmen and Army officials.

In 1968 he was the lone nominee for the national civil service league career service award.

In California, he has been commended by a Senate resolution marking his retirement.

A civil engineer and authority on harbor development and maintenance, Vredenburg has represented the United States at numerous international conferences and served as consultant for South American harbor work.

He supervised recovery operations in Northern California following the floods of 1964-65 and has been involved in flood control work.

Hearing Is Continued On Tear Gas Charge

Preliminary hearing for Gary Lee Yoder, 24, of San Francisco, on a charge of carrying a tear gas device has been continued to Aug. 14 in Marin Municipal Court.

Yoder was arrested July 4 in Inverness for speeding, then charged with the felony after a search of his car turned up a tear gas device he said he had bought for self-protection.

Cable TV Firm To Ask Added Fees

A cable television company will ask the San Rafael City Council Monday to vary requirements attached to its operating license so that the company can start charging for services in the city.

The ordinance which granted the licenses to Tele-Vue Systems outlined a five-phase plan for wiring cable service to San Rafael.

According to the license, the company cannot charge for service in areas outlined by phases two through five, until all of the phase one area is served.

The company says that while much of the service has been installed, forces beyond its control prevent 100 per cent service, and is asking the license requirement be waived.

The council will consider the request at its 8 p.m. meeting.

A request from the county for an additional $8,110 for the city's share of a $56,219 joint powers agreement for the installation of traffic signals and channelization at Freitas Parkway and Las Gallians Avenue will also be considered. The City has already budgeted $20,000 for the project.

Drinking Water's Nitrates Attacked

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — Nitrates in drinking water may be a far greater health risk than previously suspected, an Israeli scientist cautioned yesterday.

Dr. Hillel Shuval, who headed a study of the problem by Hebrew University in Jerusalem, reported findings of a connection between high nitrate counts in drinking water and an increased incidence of the blood disorder in infants known as "blue babies."

He noted with concern that nitrate levels were growing in drinking water supplies around the world and predicted that health authorities will have to reevaluate currently permissable limits.

Nitrates commonly come from sewage and industrial wastes and chemical fertilizers.

Shuval, professor of environmental health in the department of medical ecology at Hebrew University, disclosed his findings at the International Water Pollution Research Conference, of which he is vice president.

He said a study of the fetus of a pregnant laboratory animal had found evidence of methemoglobinemia, known as "blue babies," after experiments with nitrates.

Shuval stressed that the extent to which the findings can be extended to humans was unknown, but later noted that an unexplained high incidence of the disorder apparently has been found in areas where drinking water has as low a count of nitrates as 18 parts per million.

The nitrate limit in drinking water in California and throughout much of the world is 45 parts per million, which is recommended by the United Nations World Health organization.

Shuval reported that laboratory study found indications that a subclinical or chronic form of the disorder may exist in infants in areas having excess nitrates in drinking water.

In an aside, he noted that fresh spinach can contain up to 3,000 parts per million, and that the federal government's limit on nitrates in hot dogs is 200 parts per million. Neither should be fed to infants up to about six months of age, he suggested. Older infants apparently are less likely to be affected by nitrates, he said.

Shuval's warnings were seconded by Dr. John Goldsmith, chief of the California's environmental epidemiology unit in the state Department of Public Health. In a joint news conference with Shuval, Goldsmith said the current limit of 45 parts per million "perhaps should be even stricter."

He noted that the detergent industry, facing complaints about water pollution from phosphates in detergents, was considering changing its products to a nitrate base — which may pose a human healtrh problem in place of the problem phosphates are to aquatic life.

Goldsmith said that only three of the 1,000 community water systems in California have water far exceeding the nitrate limit of 45 parts per million. They are at La Sierra and Home Gardens in Riverside County, and Delano in Kern County. The highest county is at La Sierra, with a county of about 90 parts per million, he said.

But some 100,000 persons in California live where the drinking water has a count of over 45, he said.

He estimated that only 2,000 cases of the disorder throughout the world since 1945 have been traces directly to nitrates in water, but added that the actual number probably was far higher because it is not a reportable disease.

Nitrates also may affect pregnancy, the two men acknowledged. Cattle eating grass with high nitrate content tend to abort, Dr. Goldsmith said.

"Our problem is to set a reasonable standard," he said.

Six Of Marin Make College Dean's List

Six students from Marin have been named to the 1970 dean's list at Lone Mountain College in San Francisco.

Named were Sister Mary Flynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Flynn, 749 Hilary Drive, Tiburon; Gay French, 120 Bulkley Street, and Dorothy Hillman, 215 Main Street, both of Sausalito; Maureen Hunter, 502 Tamalpais Drive, Homestead Valley; John Lennon, 60 Marinita Drive, San Rafael, and Mary Ramsaur, 78 Calypso Shores, Bel Marin Keys.

Dairymen Organize To Combat Pollution

Dairymen of north and west Marin have formed an advisory committee to cut down on pollution of streams that feed into Tomales Bay and San Pablo Bay.

Donald McIsaac of Tocaloma heads the committee called the Marin County Farm Bureau Environmental Control Advisory Committee. Other members of the committee are Wilson D. Beebe, Al Poncia, John Duggan, Clarence Rogers, John Zimmerman, and county farm advisor Donald L. Brittsan.

The purpose of the committee, said Beebe, is self regulation by the dairymen themselves. In the past, state fish and game officials and sanitation officials have contacted each property owner individually whenever pollution was suspected. Hereafter, such complaints will be turned over to the committee for self-regulation.

Beebe, who was fined $100 last year for allowing manure to pollute Olema Creek, has installed a $9,000 pit and pumping system on his Olema ranch to keep pollutants away from the creek.

Beebe said the pollution problem will be handled by the newly formed committee of dairymen, but the county should do something about the flooding that occurs where Olema Creek feeds into Papermill Creek, between Shoreline Highway and Bear Valley Road. Beebe leases about 200 acres from James Lockhart in that area.

"Every year I've spent about $150 to $200 for the past eight years to clean up the debris to prevent flooding," said Beebe. "I asked the county to open up the creek so that water won't go all over the flats, but the county has done nothing."

Albert Lindelli, superintendent of the road crews for the county department of public works, explained that the county has no funds to go into private property to clean up creeks. "Under the county's ordinance, each property owner is responsible for cleaning creeks on his own property."

Beebe agreed that the land is private. "But doesn't the county own the water?" asked Beebe. "Its gotta be somebody's water."

A sensitive human eye can discern more than 10 million colors under ideal conritions, says the National Bureau of Standards.

Bay Area Cities' Car Thefts Down

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Car theft was down significantly in the first half of 1970 in three Bay Area cities, the National Automobile Theft Bureau reported today.

Theft was reduced 25.7 per cent in Oakland, 21 per cent in San Francisco, and 19.3 per cent in San Jose.

There were still many autos stolen, however—2,379 in Oakland, 6,022 in San Francisco, and 1,055 in San Jose.

The bureau, sponsored by insurance companies, attributed the reduced rate to "the vigilance and efficiency of our police."

Senate ABM Critics Will Fight Expansion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contending that two existing antiballistics missile sites give President Nixon an "ample bargaining point" for the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks with the Soviet Union, Senate critics of the safeguard ABM have decided to fight any expansion to new locations.

The bi-partisan bloc, which came within a vote of killing the ABM last year, reluctantly agreed not to interfere with continued development at Malmstrom, Mont., and Grand Forks, N.D. — two sites authorized in 1969.

But they rallied around an amendment, which they feel will "attract the broadest possible support" that would forbid a proposed expansion to Whiteman AFB in Missouri and Warren AFB in Wyoming.

Sens. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., revealed the group's strategy Friday when they outlined their amendment to the $19.2 billion Military Procurement Act which contains funds for an expansion of the ABM to Whiteman and Warren.

Although a recent UPI poll showed 49 votes for such an amendment, Hart said, "Neither side should prudently claim victory at this moment."

In contrast to last year's debate which lasted a month, Hart and Cooper agreed that a final vote could come within a week.

Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss. of the Senate Armed Services Committee, indicated supporters of the ABM also wanted an early showdown.

In a speech coupling the ABM with other proposed changes in the bill, Stennis said, "the disposition of the various amendments should not require an inordinate amount of time because the issues will be clear cut; most of the information is already well known. The same issues were debated last year."

The amendment's sponsors indicated that the SALT talks played a key part in the group's decision not to press for a total ban on ABM work, with the exception of research and development.

In a brief speech in the Senate, Cooper said that if the Senate approves the amendment, Nixon would retain "ample funds for a necessary bargaining position" at the SALT talks. He said continued development and deployment at Malmstrom and Grand Forks would serve as an "ample bargaining point."

Hart said some senators were "persuaded by the President's request that the Senate not deny him the ABM" at the SALT talks in Vienna.

Matson Will Curtail Far East Freighting

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Matson Navigation Company anncunced yesterday it is discontinuing freight service to a number of major Far Eastern ports.

The company said its "feeder" service to Inchon, Taiwan, Manila and Hong Kong would be discontinued as soon as possible and that service between California and Japan also will be suspended as quickly as possible.

M. H. Blaisdell, Matson president, said the decision to suspend service indefinitely in both areas "was made after a comprehensive study of future prospects showed that continued operation of the services was not justified."

Steal Laundry Coins

Doctor Really Knows The Fury Of A Woman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By his own count Dr. Edgar Berman has treated thousands of women over the years and developed strong views about what ails them. Now he knows first hand about a woman's fury.

He quit the Democratic party's national priorities committee Friday for the "good of my party and my best friend," former patient Hubert H. Humphrey. Berman did so with a blast at Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, in particular and the women's liberation movement in general.

"I've never said women are inferior to men," Berman told a news conference. "They're different." He added, "The difference, I think, is a credit to both sexes."

On learning of Berman's resignation, Mrs. Mink said, "Dr. Berman brought this whole incident upon himself. I did not release any of the correspondence or the transcript. I am glad he saw fit to resign."

At a committee hearing April 30, Berman said he felt the decision-making powers of women in high office might be affected by their menstrual period or menopause. The statements drew wrathful replies from congresswoman Mink, 42, and woman's lib. They said he was prejudiced against women and ought to resign.

"During the hearings, I engaged in what I consider light banterk with congresswoman Mink. She obviously took it otherwise," Berman said in his statement Friday.

"Then 60 days later, for some strange reason in a stern letter, she demanded my expulsion from the committee. I answered her more kindly — at least in tone.

"As a physician, I reiterate my scientific position that women are different physically, physiologically and psychologically, regardless of politics — medical or otherwise."

Berman said, "I believe in women's rights, equal opportunity and equal pay. I do not believe that marriage is a matter of rape and peonage. I don't think prostitution is the greatest profession.

"I believe woman's greatest job is to bring up the next generation well, well-motivated, responsible, intelligent and decent."

But he stuck by his opinions expressed last April:

"All things being equal, I would still rather have had a male John F. Kennedy make the Cuban missile decisions than a female of similar age . . ."

Hearing In Attack Case Is Thursday

A preliminary hearing for a Fairfax ex-convict, charged with attacking a San Rafael woman with a sawed-off .22-caliber rifle only days after getting out of jail on a forgery conviction, will be held Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

Robert Wayne Kitzmiller, 34, was refused release on his own recognizance when he appeared before Judge Peter Aleln Smith in municipal court yesterday for hearing on bail and setting of the preliminary hearing.

Kitzmiller is charged with possession of an illegal weapon, with being an ex-felon in possession of a weapon, with brandishing the rifle in an alarming and threatening manner, and with the gun. He was arrested that night in his home.

MUSICAL DIVERSION

Connecticut Concert Battles Drug Crisis

MIDDLEFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Rock music reverberated across the ski slopes of Powder Ridge today in an attempt to divert an estimated 30,000 young people away from drugs. A physician predicted a "drug crisis" unless more medical supplies arrive.

The canceled rock music festival was on again to some degree as medical personnel and others pleaded for music to distract the crowd.

Abruzzi Friday predicted a drug crisis today "if we don't get more staff. We're getting more kids in here every hour and I think it is building."

Abruzzi said he had treated 800 or 900 "bad trip" drug cases, "far more than at Woodstock," and added, "In a crowd this size, you could expect 200 bad trips at the most."

"These kids are really flipping out," the doctor added. "It's a question of how much the kids are entertained," Abruzzi said. "The more you frustrate kids, the more you give them a hard time, the more they're going to resort to drugs."

Two bands played off stage Friday night, using generators for the amplifiers. Another rock group plugged in their equipment to the ski area's power supply.

The festival was banned by a Superior Court order earlier this week and later upheld by the State Supreme Court. But the young people flocked to the scene anyway.

The ski area has only two toilets, and the 100 portable toilets brought in for the gathering began to overfill, posing a health problem.

A Superior Court appearance was postponed until Monday for owners Louis and Herman Zemel and sound specialist William Hanley, arrested Thursday on contempt of court charges because the crowd refused to leave the scene.

Abruzzi urged the young people to stay out of "Powder Puddle," the small lake between the twin ridges of the ski area. Several thousand bathers, many nude, took advantage of the cooling waters Friday.

In New York City, festival producer Alan Sheer announced the concert would be moved to Yankee Stadium Aug. 22 -23, but later stadium officials said they had decided against it because "the complexities of transferring the Powder Ridge concert to the stadium render it impractical."

Louis Zemel discounted the drug problem at the site. "That it is increasing I'm not aware of," he said. "I would guess the drug culture exists all over the country . . . This is typical of the drug culture."

At a news conference Friday night, Zemel said "We are walking a tight rope and the stakes are very high."

Farm Labor March Heads For Salinas

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (UPI) —Cesar Chavez and his followers marched today toward a battle with the Teamsters Union over the right to represent farm workers in the Salinas Valley.

A three-day march which attracted about 100 persons in the early stages ends today with a rally at Salinas, where Chavez plans to move the headquarters of his United Farm Workers Organizing Committee.

The labor leader announced the move from Delano, where he won his long struggle to organize grape vineyards this week, to this vegetable growing area at a rally attended by 500 farm workers Friday night.

During the day, his backers marched from Hollister, Greenfield, Gilroy and Aptos toward Salinas. Many of those on the trek were union organizers and workers. They sang Spanish songs and waved the union's flag.

The Teamsters this week announced they had reached agreements with growers in the Salinas and Santa Maria valleys to represent their field hands. Chavez denounced the agreements as "sweetheart contracts" and vowed "all-out war" against the Teamsters.

He called Friday night for settlement of the dispute by a secret ballot election between the two unions.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Teenagers Concerned About War, Hunger, And Pollution Can Help

DEAR HELEN:

People may think this sounds funny, but I sat down and cried the other night. About what? Well —

1. The men being killed in Vietnam.

2. The civilians being killed in Cambodia and Vietnam and other places all around the world.

3. The children that don't know why there's a war, and yet they die or are crippled.

4. The starving people in the world.

5. The campus disorders and the students who are dead and the parents of those students.

6. The anger between the white and black people.

7. The hate and confusion in the world today; the ugliness of pollution; the fear of the future.

Helen, I'm only 15 but I'm aware of our problems and I know the rest of the youth are too. We know we'll have to face them, and try to solve them. I wish there were more organized groups where young people could really get involved in working toward answers. I want to learn all I can so when the time comes, I'll be ready. And maybe right now I could join with others to help race relations and the fight against poverty, etc. — CONCERNED TEEN

DEAR TEEN:

If you're the leader type (and I think you are), why not organize a Junior Active Club in your town? Find a Service Club to sponsor you,and seek out projects where volunteer work is needed.

A good start. Locate a misused stretch of public beach or parkland and get busy. Haul away the trash, clean out old bottles and cans, make it shine. In the process you'll earn publicity that will bring more members to your group.

There are numberless ways active young people can help in community affairs. But they need leaders who will inspire the interested and not get too discouraged by the drop-outs. How about it, Teen? Are you concerned enough? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Here is my version of What Is A Neighbor?

A neighbor is the person down the street who finds out you'd like to earn money so she asks you to babysit, and then recommends you to her friends.

She is the person who helps you learn to sew when you need a summer wardrobe.

She's the one who rushes out and buys the right earrings for you so your newly pierced ears won't get infected.

She is the life saver who sees you sitting on the front porch on a hot night, and tells you to get in the car because "We're going to the Dairy Queen."

Give a guess at who is a second mother and best friend to everyone on the block: That's my neighbor. — M.M.

P.S. If you print this I'm going to tape it to her door.

DEAR M.:

I wouldn't miss.

. . . And if I know "best neighbors," she'll cry a bit, then invite the whole kaboodle of you in for homemade doughnuts. — H.

SEW SIMPLE

No Pull Up With Proper Fit

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I have found that when I make my dresses or have them made by a dressmaker, they pull up when I raise my arms and stay up unless I pull them down. I use a half-size pattern. Could it be that the waist isn't long enough?

MRS. A. McL.

DEAR MRS. A. McL.:

I am inclined to think that perhaps the bodice is too long from the shoulder to the waist and consequently, your dress doesn't slip down where it belongs on your hips. If you are extremely short waisted, you must watch the area just below the waist and be sure it is large enough to permit the garment to slide down easily with no pull or strain. If your garment fits correctly in this area, there is no reason for the dress to stay pulled up when you raise your arms.

MRS. RAYMOND DeWit, Pella, Iowa, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"When making a circular poncho which has hit the fashion scene with a bang, mark the circle on the wrong side of your fabric. Then, using the wide zig-zag stitch of your machine, stitch on this marked line. Next, cut just to the outside of the zig-zag and you will eliminate any bias stretch. The cut edges may be finished with a double edge braid or purchased fringe. They can be made in a matter of minutes and look just as professional as the purchased ones for only a fraction of the cost."

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I love using your fabric conversion chart but recently, I have noticed that so many knits are 68 to 72 inches wide. The chart doesn't include this width. How would we go about converting this width to our pattern?

MRS. N. E. McL.

DEAR MRS. N. E. McL.:

You must always count on one length for your dress, depending on the width of the skirt, perhaps you will also have to add the sleeve length. If your garment has an unusual neckline or is double-breasted, that too will require extra yardage.

I shall give you only one example: If your skirt measures 50 inches at the hemline, and has six gores, you must add a minimum of 12 inches to the original 50 inch width for the seams and the extra width needed at the cut edge of the hem. This would take us up to 62 inches and if your fabric was only 68 inches in the beginning, you can be sure it won't be wide enough to include the sleeves.

Use good judgment when deciding to cut down on the amount of fabric you purchase. Sometimes buying a few extra inches can prevent going back and purchasing an extra yard because you lacked those few inches. No fabric shop would purposely oversell you fabric. They all want you to come back as a happy customer, so try to have a little respect for their judgment.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I must attend a formal dinner in the near future and need help. My gown is sleeveless with a matching, lightweight stole of the same fabric as the gown. Do I wear the stole during the dinner and dance which follows? Also, must I wear long gloves? The neckline is rather scooped. Do I need a necklace or jeweled trim on my dress?

MRS. N.S.

DEAR MRS. N.S.:

The area where you live has much to do with the questions you have asked. Also, the degree of protocol when it comes to formal occasions. A stole is very difficult to wear gracefully, especially while eating. It is usually carefully arranged and the minute you relax, it isn't as attractive. For this reason, I wouldn't consider wearing it while eating or dancing. As to long gloves, in my part of the country, short, wrist length gloves are considered proper for the most formal occasions. The only exception perhaps would be the gloves worn by young girls at the most formal balls. However, even in this case, short gloves are proper.

The treatment of the neckline and the jewelry you wear is very individual. Just try to look your most beautiful and no overdo with too much detail that would detract from you or the gown you will be wearing. Always remember, you'll only look beautiful if you feel comfortable and you won't feel comfortable if you're dressed to the teeth when you're not used to it.

MRS. NORMAN LANQUIST
The former Gisela Contreras

Chilean Lady Visiting Area

Many Independent-Journal readers will be interested to hear the latest news of the former Gisela Contreras, now Mrs. Norman Lanquist, who was a protegee of a group of Sausalito women for more than four years.

As a young student from Santiago, Chile, Gisela, nearly blind herself, came to this country to finish her education in rehabilitation and counseling of the blind. The group in Sausalito became interested in helping her as a result of their interest in Sausalito's sister city program in connection with Vina Del Mar.

Mrs. Earl G. Thompson of Sausalito, with whom Gisela lived part of the time, reports that Gisela and her husband and 14 month-old daughter, Lennea, have been visiting her friends in the Bay Area and his parents in Grass Valley.

After receiving a master's degree in teaching the handicapped from San Francisco State College, the remarkable young woman taught one year at the Berkeley School for the Blind. For the past year, the Lanquists have been living in Safford, Ariz., where he is teaching English in a junior college.

When the community learned of Gisela's special training, they established a center for retarded adults, and Gisela is now in charge of that center.

Purses No Problem

When women shop for fall and winter clothes, there is one department in which they will have no problems at all —the handbag department.

The National Handbag Association advises that for the longer skirts there are new elongated handbags suspended from long handles and little clutches held in the hand.

There are even some that combine the two effecsts: little clutches with long skinny handles that can be wrapped around the wrist for a short look or slung over the shoulder for the elongated north-south effect.

WOMEN ASK WOMEN

Fight Whatever Is Oppresive On Suffrage Day Aug. 26

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If groups fighting for women's liberation have their way, here's what you may see on Aug. 26, the 50th anniversary of woman's suffrage:

Housewives won't cook, sew or wash dishes; secretaries will wear slacks instead of skirts; others will strike or stage a work slowdown, and some mothers will take babies to the father's office to have him baby sit.

Stores will be devoid of women except for clerks forced to work. Presumably some women will refuse to wear bras, walk through doors held open by males, take a seat offered them on a bus or wear anything that smacks of the latest in fashion.

Part of that, at least, is the dream of Darby Costello, secretary of the Washington chapter of the National Organization for Women.

She is calling for women nationwide to use that day to free themselves of "whatever is oppressive in their lives." She used a news conference Thursday to exhort women to "demonstrate against continuing discrimination and subjugation of women to inferior supportive roles."

"We're calling on housewives, secretaries, professionals, women in poverty and students to cease doing on Aug. 26 whatever is oppressive in their lives. We're asking for a strike, a sick-out or a slowdown. We're also advocating a total consumer boycott as strong objection to the consumer role that essentially exploits women."

Miss Costello said coalitions of women's groups are being formed in 36 cities to dramatize the inequality of women.

As Miss Costello announced the plans of women, Dr. Edgar F. Berman, a personal physician to former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, shrugged off criticism and refused to budge from his contention women are inherently limited in leadership potential.

"I stumbled on a hornet's nest," Berman said, "and I am nursing the stings." He had said on April 30 that the decision-making powers of women in high office might be affected by their menstrual periods or menopause.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Being Able To Accept Old Age Depends On Personality Type

Our population explosion may be due to the increasing number of older people rather than to our rising birth rate. Nineteen million people make up this age group, and millions more will join them as our senior citizens live longer as a result of better health care. But since life is not free of problems, the majority of oldsters must adjust to the physical, emotional, amd mental changes that come with each passing year.

How a person adjusts to aging depends upon his basic personality when he was young. According to Wilma Donahue, Ph.D., writing in The Care of the Geriatric Patient (C.V. Mosby Co., St. Louis), individual characteristics are intensified, and the oldster exhibits his innermost traits.

SHE CITES a study involving male workers, 55 to 84 years of age, in which five different pedsonality types were identified. Each had a distinct pattern of adjustment to growing old.

THE FIRST was the mature personality. These individuals entered their declining years with a constructive rather than an impulsive or defensive approach.

THE NEXT group had an armored personality with a well-developed defense against anxiety. The first two types needed activity to maintain their zest for living.

THE ROCKING chair personality was found in men who preferred to take it easy and lean on others. These individuals thrived when let alone and as the two previous types, made a satisfactory adjustment to the aging process.

THE LAST two types characterized individuals who adjusted poorly. One was the angry hostile man who blames others for his frustration. The other was the self-hatef who also is angry but blames himself. We have very little to offer these individuals, although they might be happier if they understood why they believe life is so cruel.

COCKTAILS NOT FOR DIETER

A reader writes: I read somewhere that a person who drinks liquor cannot reduce. Will you please tell me why?

REPLY

It is difficult to imbile and reduce too. Alcoholic drinks are loaded with calories. In addtiion, many persons lose their will power after a cocktail or two and go overboard on eating. On the other hand, chronic alcoholics lose weight because they neglect to eat.

HEPATITIS IS CONTAGIOUS

Mrs. C.S. writes: Is hepatitis the condition that makes your skin and eyes yellow? Is it contagious?

REPLY

Hepatitis is one cause of jaundice and it is contagious. The disease is passed along via contaminated food or drink and in this respect is not so contagious as measles or mumps.

DIET AND ANGINA

T.A. writes: Will a bland diet help a person with angina pectoris?

REPLY

Only if his heart condition is aggravated by gas, indigestion, or an irritable colon. Overeating may bring on chest pain, but fcod per se does not cause anginal attacks or make them less frequent.

PROTEST MARCH — To the surprise of campaign people inside, ten social workers picketed Gov. Ronald Reagan's soon-to-be-opened headquarters in San Rafael yesterday. They were protesting the governor's welfare policies.

PROTESTING REAGAN

Social Workers Hold March

Ten Marin social workers marched in front of Gov. Ronald Reagan's headquarters in San Rafael yesterday to protest the governor's welfare policies.

The marchers carried placards that read:

"Governor shifting many of state taxes to county taxpayers."

"Reagan Slogan — Hurt The Handicapped, Cut Aid to Disabled, Blind and Retarded."

"Social Workers Don't Terrorize, Reagan Does. The Truth Hurts."

"Reagan's Welfare Economy Cuts Actually Cost You Money."

The marchers, all members of Social Workers Local 535, AFL-CIO, were led by Gerald Fisher, representative to the state executive board of Local 535, and William H. Schutt, president of the Marin Chapter of the Social Workers Union.

"We are marching for the county taxpayers of Marin and the Marin Board of Supervisors," said Fisher. He noted the supervisors had filed a suit against the state to halt a new system of auditing that would increase Marin's burden of welfare cost.

The new system would cost $21 million to counties statewide, said Fisher. He also complained the governor's program on intermediate care would shift aged and disabled in convalescent hospitals to boarding homes, lowering the quality of care and transferring the cost burden from state and federal sources to the counties.

Schutt claimed the governor also is trimming the work incentive program, which means reduced training for mothers and more people on welfare.

"Most importantly, what we are marching against is the governor's failure to admit that these are false economies, and it is he who is responsible for the fear that he is creating and not Social Workers Union 535," Fisher said.

Reagan had accused social workers of "terrorizing" needy recipients by ordering their aid stopped after the governor announced plans to slash welfare spending by $25 million by cutting back attendant care for the blind, aged and disabled. Reagan rescinded the $25 million cut, however.

His San Rafael headquarters, at Fourth and D streets, has not been formally opened for the November campaign.

There are no signs or literature, and workers were still painting desks in preparation for opening in about two weeks.

Mrs. William P. Gage of Belvedere, Reagan chairman for Marin, said they had no advance notice of the social workers' march. "We knew nothing about it. They just suddenly appeared.

Hearing Set In Sausalito Barrier Case

Sausaltio tobacconist William Thompson, charged in connection with Sausalito's controversial Bridgeway barricade, is to appear again Thursday in Marin Municipal Court for further hearing on his demand for prompt jury trial or dismissal of the complaint against him.

He and Sausalito hotel owner Harold Hobbs were arrested July 13 while allegedly destroying some of the city's planter boxes.

The bearded, sailor-garbed Thompson yesterday told Judge Peter Allen Smith he wants to get it all over with so he can return to the East Coast where he formerly lived. He has been serving as his own attorney.

Attorney Sol Abrams, representing Hobbs, argued that the two defendants should have separate trials.

He suggested that the district attorney inspect the reports on the case, and might then want to dismiss the charges against Thompson.

"If the matter is as trivial as you say, it is not going to have two juries," Judge Smith declared. In ordering Thompson to return Thursday, Judge Smith said that if the charges are pressed by the district attorney, Hobbs' attorney will be notified and arrangements made to consolidate the two trials for an early date.

Fairfax Churches Announce Selection Of Joint Pastor

The Fairfax Community and St. Augustine Episcopal churches which have for the past several years been ministered by one pastor under the same roof will be able to continue the unique program, it was announced this week.

Without a pastor since April, the congregations have selected Rev. Steven H. Knight as resident pastor of the joint membership of some 200 families.

Knight, who is currently on the staff of the Department of Urban Ministries with the Episcopal Diocese of California, will deliver his first sermon at both services tomorrow.

He will succeed Rev. Richard N. Wilmington who resigned to accept a post with the Episcopal Diocese in San Francisco.

REV. STEPHEN H. KNIGHT
Accepts Fairfax posts

Knight, 37, a native of Detroit, received his theological training at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. Prior to his Bay Area post he served in a number of positions in Massachusetts and Michigan.

Recently he has been engaged in special studies and programs dealing with urban problems and working in local and state penal institutions. He is the author of many articles, the most recent concerning rehabilitation of prisoners in the Detroit House of Corrections.

He and his wife and two children currently reside in Mill Valley.

Finn Is New President Of Lutheran Body

EVIAN, Finland (LC) — Dr. Mikko Juva, a 51-year-old professor at the University of Helsinki, was elected president of the Lutheran World Federation during the recent session of the Fifth Assembly.

Juva succeeds Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz of Minneapolis, president the American Lutheran Church. The retiring president has headed the LWF since its Fourth Assembly in Helsinki seven years ago.

The Finnish clergyman was elected on the first ballot, defeating Bishop Fridtjov Birkeli of Oslo, 66-year-old head of the (Lutheran) Church of Norway, by a vote of 148-to-59. The election was held last week.

FIRST CONTEST

It was the first contested election for the presidency in the 24 year history of the federation, a global organization which has 82 member bodies in 44 countries with a combined constituency of more than 53 million.

The election procedure differed from that of past assemblies. Previously a single slate of nominees for president and Executive Committee was presented by a nominating committee.

The method was widened under pressure from youth and other delegates.

No additional candidates were nominated, although some younger delegates had indicated earlier their support for a 48-year-old Indian layman, Dr. Kunchala Rajaratnam, a professor of economics at the University of Madras.

Observers said the decision not to nominate the Indian churchman stemmed in part from a belief by youth supporters that his candidacy might reduce the vote for Dr. Juva and might eliminate him as an Executive Committee nominee.

ONLY 14 SHORT

The 207 votes cast in the presidential election were only 14 short of the 221 delegates registered.

Both Juva and Bishop Birkeli were suggested by the nominating committee.

Widely traveled, Juva has a varied background in academic fields, the ecumenical movement, and youth activities.

He was graduated from the University of Turku, Finland. He then pursued post graduate studies at the University of Helsinki and was awarded doctorates in both theology and philosophy.

He was ordained by the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Finland in 1944 and two years later pursued studies at the Lutheran Seminary in Gettysburg, Pa.

Juva is a former general secretary of the Finnish Student Christian Movement, a member of the Executive Committee of the World Student Christian Federation, and past president of the Finnish National Union of students.

He frequently has voiced belief that the church should be actively engaged in the world, particularly in local environments. At a press conference prior to the elections, he said the church has a special responsibility to influence those in power to change socio-economic patterns which produce discrimination and widen the gap between rich and poor.

A POVERTY PROGRAM

Nun Invades Madison Avenue

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—First there was the Singing Nun, then the Flying Nun — now there's the Madison Avenue Nun.

She's Sister Mary Elizabeth Fitzgerald, a member of the Congregation of Notre Dame and her salary is $10,000-a-year at Doyle, Dane Bernbach, one of the country's top advertising agencies.

But you won't find her producing television commercials or mapping newspaper advertising strategy. Sister Mary Elizabeth is teaching a Job Opportunities in the Business Sector (JOBS) class at the agency and her salary is turned over to her religious community.

"Most of the people here just call me Mary Elizabeth," she said, smiling and relaxed in a conference room, neatly feminine in a knee-length brown and white print dress, and sleekly bouffant hairdo.

The 33-year-old nun had been at her new job less than a month and so far had encountered no problems connected with her religious vocation.

She teaches a class of 10 black and Puerto Rican students, ranging in age from 19 to 43, the five basics —math, science, social studies, grammar and literature —that they need to pass the state's high school equivalency test to receive a diploma.

Her students go to school from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. From 2 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. they work in various departments of the ad agency and are paid a basic $90 a week.

JOBS is a joint government-business program in which hard core unemployed are given the chance to continue their education while working, with private industry and the government splitting the tab. The program is part of the National Alliance of Businessmen, an attempt by the private sector to help solve poverty problems.

Sister Mary Elizabeth is well-qualified for the work. A native of Waterbury, Conn., she attended Fordham University, received her Master's at Columbia University, taught in Catholic schools in Providence, R.I., Stamford, Conn., and in the Bronx in New York City, and for the past four years was principal of St. Jean's High School in Manhattan.

"I had asked to do work with high school dropouts," she said, "and when I found out about this it seemed very much the type of program I was interested in.

"This was sort of a growing attitude with me, seeing the great lack in education for these people and being convinced that some of us should be addressing ourselves to that problem."

Sister Mary Elizabeth explained that "Three years ago we were given the option of moving into contemporary dress or keeping the habit. Most of the community adopted contemporary dress while the older people tended to keep to the habit.

"Up to just this June we were only allowed to wear blue, black or grey suits. Now we can wear any color, dresses as well as suits."

She said that only a few other members of the Congregation of Notre Dame —a teaching order —were involved outside the Catholic community, but she said of the other sisters:

"I think they're glad; that they think this is the direction in which things will be moving. They're very interested and wondering what it's all about.

"Our role as Christians is to be aware of the needs of society and if at all possible to try to meet them. Do we need changes in the schooling of the religious? Definitely, yes.

"What I'm doing now is very interesting, I need a different approach to help the people I'm meeting now who are radically different from the people I'm accustomed to meeting in our schools. We have to be flexible enough to adapt to that.

"Some people think of the religious in terms of the habit and things like that —but that's external. The new rules about dress can only swell the number going into this type of work. The young people in our community will move in that direction.

"At this point young people may see a discrepancy between what they want to dedicate their lives to and what the religious are doing. There is no doubt that the number of girls going into religious life has fallen off very greatly in the last four or five years. Perhaps that would change if they saw religious people convinced and fired up to answer the needs of society."

Sister Mary Elizabeth said she had some personal adjusting to do in dealing with her dropout students who have much making-up to do in their six-month courses to gain high school diplomas. She said what they lack in knowledge they often make up in interest, but still:

"They dropped out of school anywhere from the 8th grade to the 10th or 11th —but often that was many years ago. The oldest in my class is a 43-year-old woman with a wide range of interests but it has been a long time since she went to school. And very often the reading skills of my students are well below the grade level they achieved.

"As a teacher you have to draw on different types of experience and resources than in an ordinary school. Take vocabulary —you think you've given a simpler explanation of something but some still don't understand and you have to move to all sorts of things to draw meaning."

To those who would raise an eyebrow at a convent-dwelling nun wearing street clothes and working in an advertising agency, she said: "I really don't think it matters what I'm wearing or the fact that I'm teaching here. What matters is attitude and conviction —and what you're doing in the world."

Relief Supplies Sent

NEW YORK (UPI)—Agencies cooperating with the Lutheran World Federation Department of World Service shipped more than 122 million pounds of food, clothing, medicine and other relief goods to areas in need in 1969. Since 1947, the program has provided more than 1.7 billion pounds of food, clothing and medicine valued at over $254 million.

German Bible Editing Schedules Completion

STUTTGART, Germany (UPI)—Editing of a new German translation of the Bible acceptable both to the Roman Catholic and to Protestant churches is scheduled to be completed by next year.

The Catholic Bible Commission here began working on the translation in 1963 at the behest of the bishops in Germany, Austria and Switzerland. The Evangelical Bible Commission joined the project in 1966.

Nigeria Bible Appeal

NEW YORK (UPI) — An emergency appeal for funds to replace Scriptures lost or destroyed during the civil war in Nigeria has been issued by the American Bible Society.

The Society said it will take about $200,000 to meet the requests for more than 750,000 Bibles, New Testaments, and Gospel and Scripture selections.

Both Sides Stick To Guns In Pro Football Battle

By United Press International

There still don't seem to be any signs that the National Football League Players Association is weakening in its pension plan strike against the owners.

The training camp gates were open for the second straight day Friday but defensive back Jim Hudson of the New York Jets, who's coming back from an injury, was the only established veteran to break ranks.

Hudson and linebacker Mike Curtis of the Baltimore Colts, who entered camp on Thursday, are the only established veterans who've defied the Association.

If the players hold firm, it'll probably mean the majority of the exhibition games scheduled next weekend will have to be cancelled. The only game that seems certain to be played will be the Hall of Fame game in Canton, Ohio, between the Vikings and the Saints. It will amount to a rookie game if the veterans don't report but Jim Finks, general manager of the Vikings, said, "We feel an obligation to the Hall of Fame to have a game."

If the players can remain together, they will force the owners into the position of having to make the next move.

But the owners seem just as militant as the players are as the stalemate continues.

Paul Brown, the Cincinnati coach, said, "If the pre-season games are cancelled, it is a new ball game. Our position at this point would be to withdraw the owners' offer because of the change in the financial structure of the clubs."

The owners have been making money on the exhibition games since many of them have been played before capacity crowds. But the players have been annoyed because their pay for the exhibition games is so low.

When Hudson joined the Jet camp to join Curtis as the only established veteran officially working out, Hudson said, "I'm not reporting because I want to defy the Players Association, it's for my own good. I'm coming off a knee injury and need the time to work. I've been working out three times a week to bring the knee around and to have access to the therapy I need to recover."

An incident in Pittsburgh showed how sharp tempers have become in the dispute. The Pittsburgh Press reported that Steeler lineman Joe Greene spat at its football writer, Pat Livingston, last week because Livingston criticized the players in his column.

Livingston ignored the incident when Steeler vice president Dan Rooney assured him that Greene regretted the action. But then Greene told a reporter Thursday that he had "no regrets" and "might do it again if it wouldn't hurt the team."

That comment prompted Press editor John Troan to write an editorial claiming the paper will file a lawsuit if Greene does it again.

"If Greene persists in expectorating his sentiments, he can expect to find himself in a court of law the next time he assaults any Press employe—even if the employe is as forgiving an individual as Pat Livingston. Joe Greene is old enough and big enough to act as grown up as he looks," Troan wrote.

Montreal's Case Of Baseball Heresy

There is an accepted form for almost every human endeavor. You lift a pinky to drink tea. The man leads while dancing. You don't wear evening gowns before nightfall. Chasing foxes is as much a ritual as a High Mass.

Sometimes, primitives misunderstand. We all have seen shots of native chieftains wearing stovepipe hats, or you find head huntsmen wearing breech cloths and admirals' coats with epaulets.

Baseball is our solemn rite of our society,too, and there is a form and ceremony to be observed. Evvets Field was its cathedral, its prelates lined the bleachers, and its cult ran more to the inquisition than the more helpful kind of correction

Wearing Captured Tuxedos

It grieves me to report that the newest entry into big-league religion, the Montreal Expos, are like naked tribesmen wearing captured tuxedos, guys with glasses just because they think they make them look watches unable to tell time by them, or wearing eye-distinguished.

Ron Fairly, the outfielder-first baseman who used to play for the Dodgers, an old, established parish in the religion, was commenting on the heresy gleefully the other night.

"Why," he said proudly, "I got a standing ovation for a pop-up one night! A POP-UP!" He added: "I got polite applause for STRIKING OUT!"

Gene Mauch, the manager, assented "I saw them sit there in 30-degree weather — and the park isn't covered. And we got beat, like 11-0, and NOBODY went home, and NOBODY threw anything! You know, when the other team is at bat, I can WHISPER to my pitcher. When our team is at bat, I have to shout to the man next to me. They cheer everything we do. You don't have to earn it. They line up as we leave the field after a loss and say, 'We'll get 'em next time, boys!'In two languages."

Missionary Work Called For

Clearly, some missionary work is called for. I must hie myself up to Jarry Park, in Montreal, bone up on my French 'til I know a "voltigeur" is an "outfielder," and an "interieur" is an infielder and a "circuit" (pronounced "sir-coo-ey") is a home run.

I propose to watch as a Montreal voltigeur swings lustily at a curve ball and misses. Then, I shall tap the "habitant" next to me. "What is that?" I shall ask. "That?" he will reply. "That was a pretty darned good curve. Mack Jones did his very best to hit it and didn't miss it by much." I shall shake my head sadly. "No," I intend to say, "that was a pitch your grandmother grandmother could hit, ya dum-dum! Why'd you bother to bring a bat if you were just going to stand there?' "

One night, I am reliably informed by Montreal's could hit. Now, repeat after me: 'That was a pitch my Bob Bailey, Juan Marichal shut out the Expos. The reaction of the town was pride. "Well," the refrain went, "he's a $100,000 pitcher and we almost beat him. If we could have got any runs off him, we might have."

I intend to treat this schism firmly, to sit next to a man in a beret and cigaret stub the next time Marichal pitches. As he mows down the side, I shall lean over and say, "I suppose you think there's nothing they can do with such good pitching, eh, mon vieux?" When he agrees, I shall straighten him out: "No, cochon! What you were meant to say is, 'He hasn't got a thing out there, you pimples, you excuses for baesball players! What's the matter, are you all hung over?"

When the Montreal pitcher is getting racked, and some fan gives a gallic shrug and says, "What do you expect, Atlanta is a very heavy-hitting club?" I intend to correct him. "Henri, what you should say is, 'Hey Mauch, get that tub of lard outta there, this isn't batting practice! I've seen better pitchers with lemonade in them!"

My ambition is to go to Montreal some night and hear some fan with the cords in his neck sticking out, screamnig at the home team in French, and I will tap the man next to me and say, "What'd he say?" and the man will sigh and answer, "Well, it loses something in the translation, but it comes out something like, 'Call yourselves a ball team? You look like the opera Comique to me! I seen better arms on Venue de Milo! What's the outfield posing for — statues? Whyn't ya ship 'em all to the Louvre? What's that pitcher's first name — Alice? Did ya get that infield outta the Yellow Pages? This team couldn't get in the World Series with a broom! And if that catcher didn't pay to get in, too, I want MY money back. And you otta put that first baseman out of the park for interfering with a ball in play that somebody might have caught.' "

Only then will we have true believers, full-fledged members of the baseball faith in Canada.

Dawson Passes Pace 24-3 Win

By ED SAINSBURY

CHICAGO (UPI) — Either the Kansas City Chiefs' offense or defense could have beaten the 1970 College All Stars Friday night.

Together they overwhelmed the collegians, 24-3.

Even the one-sided score doesn't tell the whole tale.

This was a pro team with barely a week's practice under supervision under its belt.

It was also a team which elected to quit at the final gun of this game to wait upon a settlement of the pension dispute between the National Football League owners and its players.

Yet Len Dawson, a truly grand pro, stuck in there and completed 17 of 21 passes for 153 yards, one a 36-yard touchdowner to Frank Pitts.

Dawson's passing also set up a 43-yard field goal by Jan Stenerud, the Norwegian-born soccer-style place kicker who converted after each of the Chiefs' three touchdowns.

THREE INTERCEPTIONS

The Chiefs' defense intercepted three All Star passes, returning them a total of 80 yards. Jim Kearney picked up 65 of those yards when he hauled in a Mike Phipps pass and brought it back for a touchdown. A Willie Lanier interception set up a three-yard scoring run by Warren McVea.

All of this happened in the first half of the game, when the Chiefs rolled up a 24-0 lead. Thereafter they were conservative and Dawson said, "There wasn't any sense in giving them something by taking chances."

The surprise of the game to the Chiefs, coach Hank Stram said, was not what the Stars did, but what they did not do. "We expected them to show us the shotgun or the open gate offense," he said, "and we practiced against it. But they did not do anything they didn't do last year."

EIGHTH DEFEAT

Otto Graham, who took his eighth defeat in 10 games as All Star coach, wouldn't detract from the Chiefs' performance, but he complained that lack of scrimmages for the All Stars, "hurt us tremendously," because the offense couldn't perfect its timing.

Graham said the defense did "pretty well." Stram, too, was impressed with the All Stars' front men on defense. "They were big and strong," he said.

The game attracted 69,940 fans, but many of them left second half kickoff while the Chiefs had a 24-0 lead. The rain continued throughout the third period, when the Stars got their only points on Mike Delaney's 29-yard field goal.

SEVENTH STRAIGHT

It was the seventh straight win for the pros in the All Star game and their 26th in 37 contests.

Despite the victory, the future was uncertain for the Chiefs. The players obtained permission from the National

A's Back In Pennant Race

By JOE SARGIS

OAKLAND (UPI)—Manager John McNamara, on shaky legs less than a month ago, now has his Oakland A's playing the kind of ball he always expected, so he isn't the least bit surprised they are in the race again.

"We've always had the personnel, so it shouldn't come as any big surprise we are winning," McNamara said Friday night after his A's rallied from behind in the seventh inning to defeat the Washington Senators, 5-4.

McNamara didn't mean to sound like he was boasting. Far from it. He knows the A's still have a long way to go to catch the front-running Minnesota Twins. But after winning nine of their last 10 games in their best showing of the year the A's today are only seven back in the American League West.

"I've said right along we had a good club," McNamara added. "It was just a matter of playing to our potential. Now, I feel we have a good chance, especially since we have 11 games left with the Twins. If we can let a little closer before we play them again, we could make a good race out of it."

Ted Williams, who sat by Friday night and watched his Senators blow a 4-0 lead, agreed the A's are a solid club with a good chance to win.

GOOD RACE

"I'd like to see them win," said Williams, "because I'd like to see a good race. The A's certainly have the potential."

Giants Get Double Lift In Sweep Over Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (UPI — The sagging pitching staff of the San Francisco Giants has been given a big lift.

Not only did Juan Marichal win his second straight game Friday night, but Frank Reberger added an unexpected near-distance job in the nightcap for a doubleheader sweep over Philadelphia, 8-3 and 7-2.

Marichal, looking even better than he did last weekend in beating Montreal, fired a masterful six-hitter and went the full nine innings to improve his record to 5-9.

He fanned five batters and did not walk a man while mixing his large repertoire of pitches in the clever fashion which had made him the ace of the San Francisco staff until 1970.

EARLY TROUBLES

Not until the season was halfway over did Marichal regain the strength and coordination he lost in an early season bout with injuries and illness.

After six 20-game seasons and a grand total of 191 victories in 10 years, Marichal's current season had been a big letdown. Now he appears to have regained his old form.

Reberger, rifled from the mound both as a starter and reliever throughout the season, pulled the surprise of the night by nearly firing his first complete game in the majors.

The tall righthander went 8 2-3 innings and let Don McMahon get the final out with the bases jammed in the ninth. The victory upped Reberger's record to 3-4. He allowed nine hits and five walks.

HITTING STAR

The hitting star of the twinbill was Ken Henderson. The switch-hitting outfielder raised his average from .306 to .320 by cracking seven hits in eight trips, scoring three runs, driving in five and stealing a pair of bases.

Henderson's 12th homer of the year, a three-run blast, was

49ers Sign Ex-Stanford Kicking Ace

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — Braden Beck, a former kicking star with Stanford who has been attending dental school the last three years, signed his first pro contract Friday with the San Francisco 49ers.

Beck was one of the greatest kickers in Stanford history, booting a school record 17 field goals in two seasons. He was graduated in 1965 and spent the last three years at the University of California at San Francisco studying dentistry.

His addition gives the Forty Niners 34 rookies in camp. The veterans, of course, are still missing because of the player strike.

Author Jim Bouton Gets Farmed Out

HOUSTON (UPI) — Author-pitcher Jim Bouton, optioned to Oklahoma City by the Houston Astros, said Friday night he did not think he was sent to the minors because of his controversial book, "Ball Four."

"I probably would have gone quicker if it hadn't been for the book," the straightforward Bouton said a few minutes after being notified of the move.

"I probably stayed up here longer because they wanted to bend over backwards to show people they weren't going to worry about what I had written," he said.

Bouton's book, which came out in June, told of clubhouse and hotel room incidents which were considered too sacred to be written by those in baseball. It included some unflattering things about Houston manager Harry Walker.

Bouton said the way he was pitching he deserved to be optioned. He had a 4-6 record with a 5.42 earned run average.

"If my ERA was under three, I'd be doing some kicking and screaming," he said. "But it's over five."

To replace Bouton, the Astros brought up southpaw Wade Blasingame, a onetime bonus boy with the then Milwaukee Braves who was sent down by the Astros last winter after a poor season with Houston.

Blasingame, a hard thrower, has an 8-2 record with 3.03 ERA and has struck out 95 in 101 innings.

Bouton said he thought if he did well, he would be brought back up by the Astros. He'll be able to start his climb quickly because he's scheduled to start tonight for Oklahoma City.

HAZELTINE MAY TRY COMEBACK IN NEW YORK

Matt Hazeltine, linebacker 14 years for the San Francisco 49ers, may come out of retirement to join the New York Giants.

Hazeltine, 36, former Tamalpais High School star now living in Los Altos, retired before the 1969 season but said yesterday he probably will accept a one-year contract offered one month ago by the Giants.

"I enjoy playing pro football," Hazeltine said. "I'll give it another try. I feel in relatively good shape."

San Rafael, Marinwood In Finals

It was the San Rafael American League versus Marinwood today in the finals of the Marin County Little League All-Star Baseball Tournament at Novato.

They advanced through last night's semifinals, San Rafael routing Fairfax 9-0 in regulation six innings while Marinwood had to go eight innings to eliminate Novato National 5-4.

Novato and Fairfax met at 1 p.m. today in the consolation round, followed by the championship game.

At Strawberry last night, San Rafael was led by the shutout pitching of Gary Johns who was backed by the home run hitting of Jeff Knotts and Mike Houston.

And at Hamilton Air Force Base, Marinwood scored its winning run in the eighth inning when Greg Kerr was hit by a pitched ball, stole second base and came home on an error.

Marinwood's Chuck Walters, who worked the last six innings, was winning pitcher. He was given outstanding support in the field, particularly by left fielder Brad Lucchi who made two "circus" catches.

Casper Protege A Good Student

By STEVE SMILANICH

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI)—Sophomore pro John Miller of San Francisco says the only difference between him and Billy Casper — besides the million dollars in golf earnings — is the fact "I think I can win but Billy knows he can."

Miller, a 23-year old protege of Casper's who has yet to win his first tournament on the pro golf tour, will get a chance to put his positive thinking to a test today when he tries to hod off the challenge of Casper and others in the third round of the $250,000 Westchester Classic.

The former Brigham Young University player, on the tour for only 14 months, forged a one-stroke lead Friday with a sparkling five-under-par 67 which left him with a 36-hole total of 136

Hot in pursuit of Miller were third year pro Larry Hinson of Douglas, Ga.; Jim Jamieson of Miline, Ill.; Mike Ballo, a club assistant pro from Stamford, Conn.; and John Schroeder, son of former tennis great Ted Schroeder, all at 137.

OLD PROS

While the younger pros were dominating the first two rounds, the established stars such as Casper, Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, were positioned to overtake the leaders.

Casper, with six-under-par 66 in Friday's rain-delayed third round over the 6700-yard, par 72 Westchester Country Club course, was only three strokes off the pace in a group of 139s. That group also included Jack Nicklaus, defending champion Frank Beard, Phil Rodgers, Tommy Jacobs, Gene Littler, Tommy Aaron, Grier Jones and Jerry McGee.

The low 70s and ties survived the cut. Those just making the even par 644 cutoff included Dave Hill, fifth leading money winner on the tour.

Casper, who has always been a strong booster of [illegible]'s, observed: "I told him it [illegible]'t going to be long before he [illegible] a tournament.

HOW TO THINK

"I try to help him when I can, particularly on how to think on the course," Casper added.

Miller, who has won $31,541 during his brief stint on the tour compared with Casper's $1,053,459 career earnings, had five straight birdies in the middle of his round and may have done better had the downpour not stopped play. He took his only bogey on the par three 16th hole, putting out even though the green was flooded.

The confident Miller has promised a go for broke effort in the final two rounds.

EXPERIENCE EDGE

"I'm young and I don't have anything to lose. If I choke they'll just say that's what they expect of me," he said.

But Miller added, "You can't beat experience. Even if I play Casper on Sunday, he'll outthink me by four strokes."

Casper birdied seven of the last 10 holes in his superlative round of 66. "I was just getting warmed up. That's more putts than I sank in the previous 90 holes," said the Bonita, Calif., golfer—who is noted for his putting ability.

While noting improvement in Miller's play, Casper isn't quite sure the youngster is ready for victory. "This is the type of course where a lot of young players can shoot low scores but when it comes to the final day, you have to go along with the established players to win it," he said.

CHIEFS

Football League Players Association, now on strike, to go into training camp and play the All Star game.

But they voted unanimously that once the game was over they would walk out of camp if the dispute over the owners' contribution to the players pension fund had not been settled.

It has not been settled and the veteran players are on strike, with only a handful in camp. Chiefs' player representative Jim Tyrer said there was no question of the Chiefs' future action.

Stram said the players were free until 10:30 p.m. Sunday and that "I don't know what'll happen then if the dispute is going on."

Tyrer answered the question. "We're off until Sunday night," he said, "and if it isn't settled by then we just won't go back to camp."

A'S

In true pennant winning fashion the A's came up with a different set of heroes in their latest victory. This time fellows like Joe Rudi, Jim Roland and Paul Lindblad were the key figures.

Roland pitched four shutout relief innings to keep the A's in the game and Lindblad picked him up over the final three, holding the Senators hitless while striking out five to gain his fourth victory in five decisions.

"It was my best game," said Lindblad. "It also was the longest I've pitched in any stretch this season. Heck, someone has to pick up Mudcat (Grant). The man needs a little rest."

HEAVY DUTY

Lindblad was referring to the heavy duty Grant has been putting in of late, coming out of the bullpen almost every other game to run up a fantastic streak of four victories and 18 saves and an 0.94 earned run average.

Rudi's single scored the winning run in a two-run seventh inning rally that brought the A's from behind.

Felipe Alou and Tommy Davis, a pair of veteran outfielders who know what it's like to be involved in a pennant drive, were others who figured prominently in the rally.

After the first two men went out, Alou singled to center. When Ed Stroud juggled the ball, Felipe hustled into second, making it by the skin of his teeth with a long head-first slide.

WINNING RUNS

The error had no bearing in the rally since Sal Bando followed with a walk. Then Davis and Rudi, inserted into the lineup because the Senators started lefthander Jim Shellenback, followed with back-to-back singles to score the tying and winning runs.

Frank Fernandez, catching because regular Dave Duncan was off on weekend military duty, hit his 12th homer in the sixth to get the A's close.

The Senators scored two runs in each of the first two innings. A single by Del Unser, a double by Stroud, a single by Mike Epstein and a sacrifice fly by Aurelio Rodriguez netted the first two runs. Two walks, a sacrifict, an infield out and Stroud's second double accounted for the other two runs in the second. Then, Marcel Lachemann, Roland and Lindblad combined to shutout Washington the rest of the way.

A walk to Bando, a single by Davis and Rudi's sacrifice fly scored the A's first run in the second. They got their second run in the third on singles by Bert Campaneris and Alou and Bando's groundout.

Agee's Slump-Snapping Hit Vaults Mets Back To Top

By NEIL HERSHBERG
UPI Sports Writer

Tommie Agee ended a long drought Friday night and it couldn't have come at a more appropriate time for the New York Mets.

The defending world champions vaulted past the Pittsburgh Pirates into first place in the National League's Wild, wild East with a 6-5 triumph over the cellar-dwelling San Diego Padres.

Agee, without an RBI since July 11, drove in two runs with a single during a three-run sixth inning rally to lift the Mets to victory.

"I knew that if I got a base hit I'd drive two runners in," Agee said. "But Harrelson was following me, and they play him in so close he'd only drive in one. So I had to get it."

With one out in the sixth, Wayne Garrett and Cleon Jones started the rally with singles. Joe Foy singled home Jones to cut the Padres' lead to 5-4, and pinch-hitter Dave Marshall was walked by reliever Tom Dukes to load the bases, setting the stage for Agee's single. It boosted his club-leading RBI total to 55.

Agee later disclosed that "the last time I got an RBI we were in first place, too, so that means I gotta keep hitting to keep us there."

SHARES HEROICS

Agee shared the heroics with Jones whose sterling defensive plays saved a few Padre runs from scoring. Jones made two circus catches, the first to open the game (on Dave Campbell) and the other (on Steve Huntz) to get the last out of the game. A runner was on base on the final catch and it would have tied the contest if he had missed. He dived and speared it at arm's length, sliding about 10 feet through a puddle. On the first catch he stabbed it and it bounced out of his hand twice before he ended the juggling act by catching it with his bare hand.

PIRATES FALL

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta downed Pittsburgh 4-3 as the Pirates fell one-half game behind the league-leaders, Chicago swept a doubleheader from Cincinnati 7-1 and 11-7, St. Louis tripped Houston 5-1, San Francisco took a twinbill from Philadelphia 8-3 and 7-2 and Los Angeles defeated Montreal 8-5 in the first game of a doubleheader. The Los Angeles - Montreal nightcap was postponed because of rain.

Ron Santo collected four hits, two of them doubles, and Jim Hickman homered and doubled as Chicago took two from the Western Division leading Reds.

REDS POUNDED

The Cubs pounded five Red pitchers for 16 hits, eight of them for extra bases as they tagged Jim Merritt with his 10th loss against 15 victories.

Glenn Beckert, who had three hits in the second game, led the Cubs' opening-game attack with four hits as Bill Hands won his 13th game. Johnny Bench hit his 36th homer for the Reds.

Mike Lum's single triggered a four-run rally in the second inning that led Atlanta to victory. Pat Jarvis and Hoyt Wilhelm limited the Pirates to eight hits, including Bob Robertson's 12th homer of the year.

Orioles Tie Mark Of 'Murderers Row'

By JOE FROHLINGER
UPI Sports Writer

What do the current edition of the Baltimore Orioles have in common with the 1927 New York Yankees "murderers row?"

They are co-holders of the American League record for most consecutive victories over a club, 21. The Birds made headway into the record book Friday night by gaining their 21st successive win over the Kansas City Royals in a two-year stretch, as Merv Rettenmund led the way for the Orioles with 2 RBI's enroute to a 3-1 triumph.

The Royals are not giving up without a fight which is proved by their 14 one-run losses to the AL Eastern Division-leaders. Dave McNally, who pitched a strong five-hitter, feels that "we are not overconfident against them but sometimes they just beat themselves . . . and it usually happens against us."

The Orioles play their patsies again today and have a chance to set a new major league record of 22. Considering the torrid winning streak the Birds have embarked upon of late, winning nine of their last 14 games, the Birds just may make a new entry into the record books.

If they do succeed, they will break a record set back in the 19th century by the 1883-84 Boston team which clobbered Philadelphia 21 times in the American Association, which is held by three National League teams with 21, and the AL record set by the 1927 Yankees against the St. Louis Browns.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Detroit Tigers staggered by the Minnesota Twins, 10-9, the New York Yankees set Milwaukee back twice, 7-3 and 5-3, Boston blanked California 2-0, Oakland edged the Washington Senators 5-4, and Chicago beat Cleveland 5-4.

Four Killed In Speedway Crash

WILLIAMSON, U.Y. (UPI) — Four spectators were killed and at least 18 others injured Friday night when a stock car with a jammed accelerator catapulted into the grandstand during the final race at Spencer Speedway.

The injured, several listed in critical condition, were hospitalized in Rochester and Sodus.

The dead were identified as Thomas Hitchcock, 27, of Walworth; Timothy Trumble, 15, and James Reitano, 56 both of Rochester, and Robert Petrocci, 38, of rural Elbridge. Petrocci died in a hospital about seven hours after the accident.

Tiburon Girl In Net Final

Bee Kilgore of Tiburon was to play Jocelyn Grimm of Sacramento today in the finals of the 18 and under age division of the Canadian National Open Tennis Championships at Vancouver, B.C.

Miss Kilgore gained the finals yesterday with a 6-2, 6-4 vicotry over Marcie O'Keefe of Los Altos.

The Tiburon girl also is playing in the final rounds of the girls' 16 singles and 18 doubles, teamed with Ann Lamott, also of Tiburon.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER

Always keep your arm close to the body to improve and maintain your accuracy. Such a consistent arm-pattern will result in the same way every time. If the arm moves out from the body, the bowler is likely to become unbalanced.

Cobb Made 4,000

DETROIT (UPI) —Ty Cobb is the only man in major league history to make more than 4,000 hits. Cobb did it during his 24-year career with the Detroit Tigers and the old Philadelphia Athletics of the American League.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes Avoiding A Finesse Provides Safety Play In Slam

"I can't stand it," the Old Kibitzer complained. "I've just come from watching a bridge game where nobody knows how to take simple finesse. And they're all grown men, too." We sloshed a drink into him, and the old gentleman recovered enough to give us the hand.

AVOIDED RISK

South won the first trick with the ace of spades, and the Old Kibitzer sat back, expecting South to lead the queen of hearts for a finesse. Instead, declarer led a low club to dummy and returned the three of hearts from dummy.

This is where the Old Kibitzer got up shakily from his chair and headed for the bar of his favorite bridge club. We made sympathetic noises at him and bought him a second drink, but our sympathy was all phony. We knew that South had made the right play.

FINESSE WOULD LOSE

South would lose his slam if he led the queen of hearts for a finesse. East would win with the king of hearts and would win a later trump trick with the 10.

South made sure of his slam by his actual trump play. When it turned out that East had all of the trumps, South could cash the ace of hearts and then lead another low heart through East's K-10.

REST IS EASY

If West had held all of the trumps, South's queen would lose to the king of trumps, but South would later lead a low heart from his hand to win a finesse with dummy's nine. The rest would be easy.

What if neither opponent had all four trumps? Then any line of play would bring in 12 tricks. South must exercise care only to guard against four trumps on either side. The safety play is to begin the trumps by leading low from the dummy.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2 no trump (22 to 24 points), and the next player passes. You hold:

♠—Q 9 7 5
♥—K 10 8 7
♣—6 3 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards.

If he can bid hearts or spades, you will raise to game in his suit; and if he bids three diamonds, denying a major, you will go on to game in no-trump.

Clock More Important In Interior Decorating

CHICAGO (UPI) — Clocks are dominating the scene in today's homes, says interior design consultant Mary Ann Wills.

Miss Wills pointed out that "not so many years ago, a clock was usually an afterthought for any room, with the possible exception of the kitchen." However, she said that today "it's not all unusual to begin with a decorative clock in planning wall treatments for important living areas."

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Aug. 1, the 213th day of 1970 with 152 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this date in history:

In 1946 the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission was formed.

In 1966 Charles Joseph Whitman killed his mother and wife, then fatally shot 13 other persons sniping from the top of a tower at the University of Texas. He wounded 32 others before being killed by the police.

A thought for the day: Gen John Adams Dix said, "If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

More Women Signing As Craft Apprentices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest report on women's participation in craft apprenticeships showed a 72 per cent increase in 1969.

The increase of 700 women apprentices in more than 100 trades has been accented by "invasions" by women into many apprenticeships considered historically and exclusively for men, the report said.

Gun Safety In Canada

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Beginning in 1971, hunters in Quebec will be required to hold firearms proficiency certificates before gaining a license, says the Department of Games and Fisheries. Tourism Minister Gabriel Loubier says the move is part of a general gun safety campaign.

NEW ACT PRODUCTION

Michael Learned, Michael Cavanaugh (center) and Philip Kerr act out one of life's more rewarding experiences in a scene from Elaine May's "Adaptation," currently on the double-bill "Adaption Next," which is playing a limited engagement at the Marines' Memorial Theator in San Francisco. The Off-Broadway show is being presented as a post season offering by the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco.

Author Louis Lomax Killed In Car Crash

SANTA ROSA, N.M. (UPI) — The body of author Louis Lomax, who was killed when he lost control of his car Thursday night, will be sent to Los Angeles for burial.

Lomax, 47, was to have been writer in residence at Hofstra University in West Hempstead, N.Y., this fall.

His body was not identified until Friday. Walter Julian of Julian Mortuary here said he "noticed that he had a graduation ring from Hofstra with his name on it. So I called the university and asked them if they knew of a Lomax there. The president of the college said they'd go out the house and break the news to the family."

Lomax, a former newsman, freelance writer and radio announcer in New York, was writing a Negro history under a $15,000 grant at the time of his death.

His book "Reluctant African" won the Anisfield-Wolf award in 1961. He wrote "Negro Revolt" in 1962 and "When the Word is Given" in 1963.

State police said Lomax' car skidded across Interstate 40 and flipped three times, throwing Lomax from the vehicle. He was pronounced dead at the scene of head and internal injuries.

Mrs. Lomax said she would go to Los Angeles Sunday. Julian said Lomax's body probably would leave Santa Rosa today.

Lomax visited North Vietnam in 1966 and was the first American newsman allowed into that country. He interviewed Ho Chi Minh and Premier Pham Bang Dong.

He was born in Valdosta, Ga., did graduate work at American University and at Yale and was a newspaper reporter in the East from 1941 until 1958.

EXCHANGED BEER

Capture Of Trawler Only 'Symbolic' Fight

EUREKA (UPI) — As sea battles go, it was definitely a dud.

An American fishing boat which set out three days ago to "capture" a Russian trawler intruding on U.S. fishing grounds settled instead for "a symbolic confrontation" in the Pacific.

It wasn't even much of a confrontation symbolically, as the crews of the 72-foot fishing boat Havana and the Soviet trawler exchanged beer and cigarettes after they "made contact" 19 miles offshore.

A Coast Guard cutter quickly ended the rendezvous, hoisting signal flags which ordered the Havana to "keep clear" and then escorting the boat back to this northern California fishing city.

"The Havana had pulled alongside the Russian ship, close enough so that individuals on both boats could touch one another or exchange goods," the Coast Guard reported.

Jerry Kamstra, a freelance writer who organized the attempt to collect a $6,000 reward offered by a Fort Bragg grocer, termed the brief meeting "a symbolic confrontation" and said the two crews exchanged beer and cigarettes. When the Havana left San Francisco Bay Wednesday, Kamstra was promising to "capture" a trawler.

Both the Coast Guard and the northern Californians who posted the reward were unhappy with the Havana's efforts.

After escorting the fishing boat here, Coast Guardsmen boarded her and checked for any violations of federal boating regulations. They found none.

Jack Azeved, the grocer who raised the reward, said the exchange of cigarettes and beer "was like fraternizing with the enemy" and suggested the voyage of the Havana was "an attempt to discredit us."

A week ago, Azevedo offered a reward for the "capture" of a Soviet trawler fishing inside U.S. territorial waters. But after conferences with Coast Guard officials, the bounty was offered this week to anyone who helps the Guard catch a Russian vessel fishing inside the 12-mile limit.

Three Out-Of-State Men Held On Burglary Probe

Three out-of-state men, suspected of taking more than $1,000 worth of loot in two Sausalito burglaries Monday, were being held in Marin County Jail on $15,000 bail each today, pending further investigation by the district attorney's office and Sausalito and San Francisco police.

The three suspects were arrested Monday in San Francisco after police became suspicious and stopped their auto because its license plate was unreadable, according to police reports.

With them was woman, who was not booked in Marin County.

Booked by Sausalito police late Thursday were Roger Eugene Beruth, 35, reportedly an escapee from Nevada State Prison; James Leslie Fouchet, 21, of Elko, Nev., and Ronald A. (Sonny) Lewis, 29, no known address but wanted in Boston, Mass., on a burglary charge, according to Federal Bureau of Investigation reports.

Police said their car was full of items which four victims who live in apartments at 98 and 100 Rodeo Avenue, Sausalito, identified as being taken from them when the apartments were ransacked Monday afternoon or evening.

Sausalito police listed the victims as Alfred S. Wilsey and Wallace Lordeau, of 100 Rodeo Avenue, and Sandra deBarke and Connie Mae Costner of the neighboring address. The loot included stereo amplifiers, cameras, binoculars, jewelry, liquor and other items, police reported.

Hearing Rescheduled On Assault Charge

Preliminary hearing for Kenneth Vernon Ross, 25, of San Francisco, on a felony charge of assaulting an officer has be reset for Aug. 13.

Ross allegedly tried to punch a California Highway Patrol officer while being taken into custody July 16 in Lagunitas. Officers said at the time he was walking on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard clad only in a coat.

Meeting Canceled

Because so many commissioners are on vacation, the regular meeting of the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission, scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday in the community house, will not be held, according to Edward W. Adams, parks and recreation director.

239-YEAR TRADITION

End Of Free Rum For Queen's Navy

LONDON (UPI) — Since the days when Britannia ruled the waves from Portsmouth to Singapore, sailors of the Royal Navy have lined up for their daily ration of grog. Today they did without for the first time in 239 years.

The Bosun's pipe tweetered "Up Spirts" and the shout "Stand fast for the Holy Ghost!" rang out on Her Majesty's ships for the last time Friday.

It was the end of free rum for British sailors, a tradition dating back to the time of Capt. William Bligh and Fletcher Christian of Mutiny on the Bounty fame.

The Admiralty said it was all a matter of efficiency.

"There is a marked diminishing of efficiency in a sailor after he's downed his grog," a naval spokesman said.

"The need for it is not so great today as it once was," the spokesman said. "There is no deck scrubbing and there just is not the atmosphere there used to be."

The name grog is derived from Adm. Edward Vernon, who first ordered the rum but with water. He had a habit of appearing on deck in a cloak of burlap-like grogram cloth when the weather was squally.

The shipboard ritual involved the ladling of an eighth of a pint of rum to each seaman from oak barrels marked with brass plaques that said "God Save The Queen" then a quarter pint of wager to cut it.

Seaman Terry Lowe of the Aircraft Carrier Albon at Portsmouth said he doubted his efficiency would have been impaired by more grog.

"The most technical bit of equipment I've had to handle in this Navy is a broom and a bucket," Lowe said.

"I've drunk 200 gallons of the stuff in my time," said the Chief Bosun's Mate of the frigate Andromeda at Portsmouth. "We won the last war on it."

Many sailors wore black armbands Friday when the last grog was ladeled out, shuffling to recorded funeral music to mark the passing of the maritime tradition.

At Portsmouth, Britain's biggest naval base, two scarlet-clad sailors brought a rum barrel across the parade ground in a black-draped truck and delivered it to the mess hall. Inside, the barrel was stood up in an open coffin, candles flickering around in funeral atmosphere.

PRISON TENSION

Guards Are Prone To Heart Attacks

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The tension of being alone with 150 of the state's most violent men makes the prison guard an easy mark for a heart attack.

When a man takes a job as a state correctional officer, he must face the fact that heart attack is a built-in hazard just as the potential of being assaulted or stabbed by an inmate.

This was the opinion today of Sgt. Mel Hart, president of the California Correctional Officers Association, who said guards have the highest incidence of heart seizures in comparison with all other state employes.

"When you're in a room full of inmates—maybe as many as x80 of them—and you're the only officer there, there's a lot of tension and strain.

"Day after day, it wears you down."

Hart, assigned to the reception center at the California Institution for Men at Chino, said in a telephone interview with UPI that at his facility 15 out of 125 officers suffered coronary seizures in the last year.

The 42-year-old Hart, a veteran of 15 years with the state Department of Corrections, said that fears and tension have been intensified recently by the killing of two guards at the Correctional Training Facility at Soledad.

"You get a little skittish when you hear things like this," Hart said in commenting that all officers were more edgy over current conditions.

He pointed out that most correctional officer positions placed the guard in living units alone with from 100 to 180 inmates.

"We're not just school crossing guards," he said. "We're getting tired of the fact that the correctional officer is not being recognized for full credit for a day's work.

"We are not just guards, we perform functions, we just don't turn keys, we counsel, we rehabilitate, we conduct group counseling. We're with the inmates 24 hours a day. We're in his housing unit, we're with him at meals, we work with him."

Hart said he would like to see more staff added to institutions to ease the burden and the tensions of the guard.

"We don't have much time to devote to the inmate" he said. "Our first duty is for the protection of society. Then rehabilitation is second. Why can't people understand we could do this simultaneously if we had enough officers?"

He said the state has about 3,000 guards in 13 institutions and 29 honor camps.

Hart said he has made several attempts to talk with Gov. Ronald Reagan about the situation but has been rebuffed in his efforts.

"He'll meet with strikers but not with us . . ." the CCOA president said.

He said his organization was pushing for passage of a bill that would permit correctional officers to retire at 50 per cent pay at the age of 50.

"We want to be able to get out of the business before we have a heart attack and die," he said.

Hart also pointed out that the nature of the job was getting worse because only the most violent men were being sent to state prison.

A department spokesman said there were 1,000 more murderers, 2,000 more armed robbers and 8,000 more assaulters in the prisons now than there were 10 years ago.

He added that correctional officers earn a monthly salary of from $651 to $751.

Hart said that under current standards an officer with 30 years experience retires at about $350 a month.

"Some of us don't get as much as welfare recipients," Hart said.

Russ Jail Priest For Slander, Whipping Wife

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Russian priest accused of beating his wife and spreading anti-Soviet slander has been sentenced to an undisclosed term in prison, the newspaper Pravda Vostoka said Thursday.

The newspaper said Russian Orthodox Pavel A. Adelheim had been accused of whipping his wife and children with a telephone cord and spreading "literature that slandered the state and our country."

"Neo-realistic and decadent poets and anti-Soviet slanderous works were in his library," the newspaper said.

2,141 U.S. Islands

SAIPAN (UPI)—The U.S. Trust territory of the Pacific has 2,141 islands, 98 of which are inhabited. The territory, also known as Micronesia, includes such famous World War II battle sites as Truk, Kwajalein, Saipan, Tinian, Palau and Peleliu.

Marin School Board Gives Monday Agenda

The Marin County Board of Education will study a budget for the new regional occupational education program when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the county schools office, 201 Tamal Vista Boulevard, Corte Madera.

The board also will consider nominations for its new personnel commission, and take up a resolution to conduct an experimental program for hearing-handicapped children from 18 months to three years old.

Innocent Plea To Firebombing

FRESNO (UPI)—Virgil B. Lewis, 19, pleaded innocent Thursday to charges stemming from the May 19 firebombing of the Fresno State College computer which preceded four days of demonstrations.

Fresno County Superior Court Judge Denver C. Peckinpah set Nov. 2 for trial.

The judge also denied a defense motion that the charges of arson, conspiracy, to commit arson and possession of a firebomb be dropped because of insufficient evidence.

Utility District Plan Draws Public Hearing

College Needs Citizenry's Help To Make Reforms

COMPLAINTS ABOUT Sonoma State College reached a crescendo about the time Ambrose Nichols, the institution's first and thus far only president, announced his resignation.

The list of complaints had grown long.

It was said that the college community was almost totally alienated from the citizenry of the area it was intended to serve.

Militant, activist minorities among faculty and student body were "running the college," effectively thwarting administration efforts to bring the situation under control.

Physical facilities were not being utilized to capacity while qualified applicants were being turned away.

Faculty was "goofing off" in various ways.

To repeat, the list of complaints had grown long.

"Let us hope," this writer said in this space at that time, "that the State College Board of Trustees conducts a full inquiry into the accusations."

EARLIER THIS MONTH, three members of the board of trustees did make an unpublicized but nonetheless official visit to the campus.

This week a special task force from the office of State Colleges Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke spent four days on the Cotati campus digging into records, interviewing students, faculty, administrators and citizenry from the area which the college serves, including Marin.

The task force was headed by Thomas H. McGrath, whose title is assistant to the executive vice chancellor. McGrath and his fellow investigators gave every indication of going at their job in a business-like manner with the object of getting the facts in perspective. Contrary to the innuendo of some published news reports, the McGrath team did not appear to be trying to gather evidence to "hang" any individual or group.

It is only reasonable to expect that the fact-finding mission will be unable to find any substantiation for some accusations which have been voiced in the past. It is equally reasonable to expect that — if they do their job thoroughly — they will find considerable substantiation for some other complaints.

It appears evident, for instance, that the college community IS largely alienated from the citizenry of the area it is intended to serve primarily.

WHAT WILL McGRATH'S group recommend to remedy this situation?

The standard approach would be formation of a "citizens' committee" to work closely with a joint college committee comprised of administration, faculty and student representatives.

Trouble is, such committees are usually ineffectual and short-lived.

Sonoma State already has had, on paper, an advisory board of interested citizens from its service area. One of the commonly heard complaints is that this committee has been ineffective, largely inactive, and sometimes used as a rubber stamp by the administration.

SOON THE STATE College Board of Trustees will be picking a new president for Sonoma State. The principal burden for reform will fall upon him.

But he cannot do it alone. He must have support not only from the trustees, the chancellor's office, from within his own administration as well as from faculty and students. He must also have citizen support from the area the college serves — principally Sonoma, Napa and Marin counties.

There is a part we citizens must play. When time and situation make our help necessary, we must be ready to extend it.

If private enterprise cannot provide adequate housing for students at a price students can pay, for instance, then we of the citizenry must be ready to roll up our sleeves to work for some suitable public housing.

The citizenry has criticised the college community for ignoring its neighbors. When our (the college's neighbors) turn comes, we must not ignore the need of the college for our support and assistance.

We must be willing to cooperate and help where we can to solve faculty, student or administration problems, when we are asked.

—Jack Craemer

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Ross Still Ignores Flooding Problem

In January you published an article headed "Ross Ignores Own Flooding Problem". Summer is here, fall is not far away and winter will surely follow. At Lake Fernlinas (the area to the west of Shady Lane, bounded by Fernhill Avenue and Bolinas Avenue in Ross) some of us are anticipating (without glee) the coming winter sports season, with a possible repeat of last winter's activity, or perhaps even more excitement because the no burning edict will provide more debris to clog the creek.

In any event last winter's sports included:

1. A residence with a pool submerged 18 inches under water flowing rapidly within two inches of the entire floor level of the house.

2. A resident who has applied for a disaster loan in excess of $3,000 for damage done by the flood.

3. A residence with three boys asleep in a basement room who were routed from their beds surrounded by eight inches of water which did considerable damage.

4. A resident who found her car submerged to the level where the engine and upholstery required expensive repairs.

5. A resident who had to bail several inches of water from her living room and had to spend additional money for other damage . . .

On the other hand the sportsmen from the assessor's office seem to highly value the potential because they have assumed that all this property has become much more valuable. They also did this in 1958 after similar flooding in 1967 . . .

The Corte Madera Creek area of Ross has had much publicity — we would like more publicity for our water sportsland.

Official Could Provide Own Car

In regards to the article of July 24, about the top official needs a car.

We understand Mr. (Jack C.) Williams said he needs a car for official business, we of the public housing feel that we should hire someone from the community who can furnish their own transportation. We also feel that Mr. Williams makes enough money to furnish his own transportation, he has been here over a year and we haven't seen anything he has accomplished. If anyone has anything to donate will you please think of help. People have been cut back on welfare and needs any donation you can provide in this matter — such as food, clothing, furniture, etc.

Feels Better After Complaints

I've tried to keep out of this but some of the doings of today are so screwy that I have to chip in.

The doings of Cesar Chavez for instance. When he first came into prominence he was ragtag and bobtail. Hungry and poorly clad. Now, judging by the picture of him, he is well dressed and fed. It is ever thus with those who lead the sheep. I have had membership in three unions and in each one the leaders have proved to be dishonest. Can Chavez be any better? Sticking his nose into something that is none of his business. And look at the sheep that followed him. Nuf ced.

And those young rioters. They are the product of a too permissive parenthood. They grew up without knowing about rules, law, or proper behavior. So now they have reached the time when they can't stand to be told. They are bucking what they call the Establishment. What would they do without it? Most are living now on their parents, members of said Establishment. They'd starve without it.

Like that riot in Chicago. Police brutality should be forgotten. Let them break as many heads as they can. And then some.

I feel better now.

Right Hand Doesn't Know . . .

A fine example of this appeared recently with disclosure that Internal Revenue Service agents were calling at public libraries to check on who had been taking out books on explosives.

Samuel J. Archibald, of the Washington office of the Freedom of Information Center, pointed out the irony in a letter to the director of IRS' Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division:

"While the Keystone Kops of your gun control division are scurrying around libraries trying to identify patrons who check out books on explosives, another government agency is busily selling an excellent how-to-do-it pamphlet on explosives."

The agency, he went on to say, is the Bureau of Mines. The pamphlet is Information Circular 8405. A simple formula for fuel oil-fertilizer explosive is on page 20. The pamphlet is sold for 40 cents by the Government Printing Office.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A fussy customer in a roadside restaurant took a tentative bite of the piece of pie that had been set before him, grimaced, then snarled at the waiter, "Are you sure this is cherry pie?" "What does it taste like?" snapped the waiter, obviously nettled. "Heaven only knows," the customer shrugged. The waiter had the last word. "If you don't know what it tastes like," he reasoned, "what difference does it make whether it's cherry or not?"

Len Dawson says there's so much pollution in the air these days that people are coughing even when they're not at a concert or a play.

Another Dawson observation: Nothing cures insomnia like a realization it's time to get up.

LINES ON LIVING

Get Away From It All And You Find—Yourself

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

Summertime is fulfillment of promise. It is delivery after the long expectancy of rolling seasons. It's golden ripening to the brim of fullness.

The gaiety of an active industry, automated by the mysterious hand of some unseen power, permeates all. Growth and fulfillment is joy; and in summertime you can't hide from it. You are drawn to it by that magical hand that made all beginnings. And you go to the source because you too have a beginning and an origin; because you want to be yourself for a change; because you need a change of scene to refresh yourself; because you know you must let yourself go.

So you join the seasonal exodus of vacationers and leave the din of city and town behind you. You go to the woodlands, to the seashore, to the mountains; you go searching, hunting, fishing.

WHAT ARE YOU aiming at? What do you expect to find? Yourself! Your simple unsophisticated and indigenous self. And you can find yourself and know your identity as well as your firm reality in this solemn hush of sprouting and marching green, in the scent of meadowland, in the lump of earthy freshness, in the enduring certainty of the source.

Here the enhancing language is life itself, eloquent and undentable proof of rootage and fruition. Here you see the visible proof in the patient perserverance of the "mighty-oak," which "is just yesterday's little nut that held its ground." Here you learn the beauty of sound in the gleeful singing of birds and bees that never weary of song. Here you find a kinship with tree and leaf, and are humbled to acknowledge the simplicity of your human self, knowing that all your machines still cannot duplicate a living tree, a seed.

That's why you get away from it all: to search for yourself; to hunt yourself; to listen to yourself; to hear the poetry of trees; to see the visible workings of life at its source; to touch the dew of a new day; to feel refreshed, in tune with the universe and not in the clatter of the machine.

IN THE RETREAT of mountain, ocean and hillside, you are brought back to your banished paradise for a reunion. And when you make your acquaintance with the tidal waves of ocean's ebb and flow and the stubborn persistence of hills and fields, you feel buttressed and stronger. You sense life's imperative within your bones and know that you are a living and feeling and knowing part of it, root and all. And as you don't question a bird's reason for singing, you start singing for no reason yourself. And as you don't challenge the strength of a tree's roots in adjusting to anchorage and growth, you feel like growing and adjusting yourself. Because life and laughter is upon you and vanished cares are behind you.

Never mind the fleetingness of the flower, the brevity of the summer, the abruptness of growth. Live in the living reality of a full summer day and feel no regret. Summertime is a time of doing: doing away with daily cares and irksome civilization and doing something with your simple living self to "see into the life of things."

Personable Persuader Wins Government Aid For The Arts

WASHINGTON — Score a small triumph for the Nixon administration, and it is a triumph that could have a long reach. Congress has appropriated for the National Endowment for the Arts $40 million, which is twice the amount for the previous year.

The triumph owes a lot to a personable persuader who has made a strong impression since she arrived on the Washington scene last October. Nancy Hanks, chairman of the endowment, talked to more than 200 members of Senate and House in making the case for the appropriation.

Lobbyists for more materialistic goals have reason to envy that record. Miss Hanks brings very special qualities to her task. She is an attractive woman with intelligence and perception that are evident without being in the least assertive.

THE PRESIDENT took six months to come up with a replacement for Roger L. Stevens, the first chairman, who resigned after five years of guiding the federal government's grant program in the arts. Suspicion grew that he might leave the post vacant. Then the choice fell on Miss Hanks to almost unanimous appproval.

Shortly after her appointment the question arose as to how much to request from Congress in the coming fiscal year. There was a long flap over whether it should be $8 million or $10 million. After all, help for the arts —theater, ballet, music, painting — from Uncle Sam is something pretty radical. An old story in Western Europe where the arts have long been endowed, it is a new venture with us where political suspicion of anything as fancy as ballet and long-haired music run deep.

The decision was finally reached to go for double. And Miss Hanks promptly went to work on a list of Senate and House members who might be subject to persuasion.

THE NATION'S 88 symphony orchestras — 28 major orchestras with budgets over $500,000 and 60 metropolitan orchestras with budgets under $500,000 —have been going steadily in the red. While the endowment obviously cannot underwrite all the deficits, grants of $50,000 each were made to five orchestras for projects considered of outstanding national significance.

The contrast with practices abroad is startling. Austria with a population of 7,500,000 subsidizes music and the theater to the tune of about $35 million a year, and as a consequence the performing arts are a foremost tourist attraction. But Miss Hanks believes we're on the way.

JUST OUT of Duke University with a Phi Beta Kappa key, Miss Hanks came to Washington in 1951 as a member of the staff of the Office of Defense Mobilization. That was when the Korean War was going full blast. She later went to work for Nelson Rockefeller when he was undersecretary of health, education and welfare, and followed him to the White House when President Eisenhower asked Rockefeller to set up a series of foreign policy panels.

Outside government, with the magic of the Rockefeller money in the Rockefeller Brothers Fund in New York, Miss Hanks was executive secretary in charge of naming a series of panels to do studies in a variety of fields. One of them was in the arts. And Miss Hanks herself directed the study that ended with a landmark report, "The Performing Arts: Problems and Prospects."

The report stimulated a lot of activity. One result was formation of the National Council on the Arts, of which Miss Hanks is today chairman.

ART BUCHWALD

The Education Of Ramat Gow In Process Of Free Elections

WASHINGTON — One of the major goals of our American foreign policy is to have countries all over the world hold free elections. As part of this policy, the State Department has been urging politicians to come to the United States and study our political system.

A recent visitor was Ramat Gow of the tiny republic of Nonomura. Ramat Gow met with officials of both parties and received a marvelous insight into how American politics works.

He was also briefed by Starkley Merriweather, of Starkely, Ramsden and Phipps, a public relations company specializing in electing public officials.

"HOW DOES ONE get elected?" Ramat Gow asked.

"Well, first you need money. You have to have campaign funds to spend on billboards, flyers, radio and television."

"I see. And how does one get this money?"

"The best and easiest way," said Merriweather, "is to approach lobbyists representing vested interests in your country who are willing to contribute large sums of money to political candidates."

"AH, BUT IF WE accepted money from people who have vested interests would we not be obligated to protect these people after we were elected?"

"Exactly. That's the whole idea. They're not financing you because they like the cut of your jib."

"Is there no other way of holding elections without asking for money from the vested people?"

"We haven't come up with any," Merriweather said. "The American political system is open to anyone in this country, providing he or she can afford it. You see, Mr. Ramat Gow, the most important thing in a political campaign is to get through to your people that your candidate is the best man for the job. This is done through advertising. We sell our politicians in the United States just like we sell our soap. We offer extra ingredients that brand X doesn't have. Now this takes money. You have to keep hitting the American people over the head before you get through to them."

"THAT'S VERY interesting," Ramat Gow said. "So the man with the most money is the one who is likely to win in United States?"

"I wouldn't go that far. You have to give the candidate charisma."

"How do you do that?"

"By spending money. The old days of a candidate going out and pressing the flesh are just about over. It's the candidate who comes on for a minute during a football game on TV that's going to take all the marbles."

"This is most constructive. I wish to run for the senate of my parliament. What do you suggest I do?"

"WELL, THE FIRST thing you do is hold a big dinner. Invite the heads of the oil companies, the labor unions and the trucking people and make them each cough up $100 a plate."

"What occasion should I say we are holding the dinner for?"

"Your birthday."

"Alas, my birthday is in December."

"Who the hell knows the difference? After you get the money, you can make Ramat Gow a household word."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Merriweather. I have learned more from you in half an hour about the democratic process than I have learned from all the other government officials combined. One more thing. How do you make a TV commercial?"

TROUBLED ENVIRONMENT

Population's The Biggest Threat

More than most of us realize even now, the biggest threat to world environment today and tomorrow is not raw sewage. It's people.

Since we aren't about to kill off half the world's population, it becomes more and more apparent to most conservationists that whether we like it or not we must limit our numbers or have them limited in abhorrent ways.

Most obvious limiting possibilities are starvation and nuclear war. But others are exotic disease, abortion, government regulation and a fatal madness that comes on overcrowded animal communities and that may sometime afflict mankind. Perhaps it already has.

If there is no check, we are assured, world population will double to about 7 billion by the year 2000. Then, with the standing room only sign ablaze on all continents, the United States will house nearly as many people as all Africa does now, and the American dream of unlimited expansion and ever rising standard of living will have become a nightmare.

"We cannot win a war against pollution that does not include as one of its battles the stabilizing of our population," writes Prof. David Van Veck of Middlebury College in a Princeton quarterly called University.

To stabilize a population within 30 years, Prof. Van Vleck figures, the average family must limit itself to two children. To stabilize it at once, families should include no more than one child.

Populations grow by compound interest like a savings account. Thus while it took the people of the world 1600 years to doule beyond the 250 million supposedly alive when Christ was born, they doubled again in about 200 years, and once more a hundred years later in 1930 when the figure was 2 billion. Now the prospect is they will double a fourth time and become four billion during this decade.

Some say that two thirds of the world's people go to bed hungry even now, and that 10,000 to 15,000 die daily of malnutrition. There is little assurance, therefore, that mass starvation on a really vast scale can be put off indefinitely, unless some changes are made.

America, which consumes far more food, metals and fuel per capita than anybody, wouldn't find it easy to inspire other nations to limit their populations until it had brought its own under better control.

Even the promising introduction of super varieties of wheat, rice and corn and the possibility of tapping new food resources in seas already depleted of life and contaminated with oil, chemicals and sewage are no sure fire defenses against the growing menace.

Actually there has been some flattening of the population curve in this and some other countries.

The U.S. birth rate fell from a 1947 peak of 26.6 per thousand — highest since that other postwar year, 1920 — to 17.4 in 1968, which was lower even than in the years of the great depression.

How come? Nobody really knows because numerous factors are involved and because motives in this field are not a matter of public record. But the Pill doubtless helped many parents who decided on smaller families to stick to their resolutions, even though recent reports on its side effects have resulted in a decline in its use.

Education, income level and married women going to work all have had their influence. Recently the young women born during the postwar baby boom started coming on strong.

However the death rate also has declined, from 13 per thousand in 1920 to as low as 9.2 in 1954. Still another cross current is the remarkable recent trend in court and legislature towards legalization of abortion, and the growing acceptance of sterilization operations now being performed on about 100,000 persons a year.

All in all, America has a growth rate of only about 1 per cent. Pretty good, when you think of the 1.8 per cent world figure. But a population growing 1 per cent a year doubles every 70 years.

As populations soar, people on the average certainly will have less room and probably less food. Moreover, they will be gobbling up an ever larger share of the world's resources, about which more later.

Once granted that an ever increasing population is not necessarily an ever increasing blessing, what can be done about it? Something really can be done, as the Irish demonstrated after last century's famines, and as the Japanese have shown since World War II.

Here are some measures that have been tried or that have been suggested by various specialists:

Encourage young people to marry late or not at all.

Make contraceptive information and materials available to any sexually mature person.

Legalize abortion and even make it nearly free.

Abolish tax breaks for parents.

Tax the parents of large families.

Institute a quota system for legal births.

To such a pass has unrestrained fecundity, coupled with the conquest of disease, brought the world.

LONG RANGE FORECAST — Long range predictions of population growth are precarious. The most frequently mentioned world figure for the year 2000 is seven billion, but this chart based on statistics in the International Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences makes it out as 7.5 billion. The U.S. Census Bureau in 1967 projected a high figure of 361 million Americans by 2000, although its best guess was 300 million. It is now 282 million.

EXPO '70 MIGHT END IN BLACK

Unlikely World Exposition At Osaka Has Become Surprisingly Successful

By TEIJI SHIMIZU

OSAKA, Japan (UPI) — Heading now into the last two months of its six months' stand, Expo '70 looks like a money maker. Not everyone thought it would be.

When the government of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato decided to host the 1970 World Exposition, many Japanese thought it would not be a success. Even selection of Osaka for the first world's fair in Asia was considered bad.

Although Osaka is Japan's second largest city (population 3 million), it had never held a show of international scale such as the 1964 Olympic games in Tokyo. But the government went ahead. Construction workers cleared Senri Hills (thousand leagues) of bamboo thickets and built pavilions on 815 acres.

The fair has been so successful since it opened March 15 that well over 30 million people visited it during the first three and a half months.

Expo officials, who had earlier predicted it would be a success if 50 million people attended, now confidently forecast that the number of visitors will total more than 55 million by the time the exposition eloses Sept. 13.

A Japanese bank employee became the 30 millionth visitor to the fair June 23. He was honored with a 10-day trip to Europe plus 200,000 yen ($555) in cash.

If the number of visitors does go beyond the 50 million mark, the Expo Association gains nothing but profits.

The exposition, a $2.9 billion extravaganza, offers something for everybody.

There are 117 pavilions, each built and operated by 77 countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union. Piece de resistance of the U.S. exhibit is a piece of moon rock. The Russians show a variety of spaceships in their towering hammer and sickle pavilion.

For music lovers, Germany's purplish-blue building that looks like a balloon has a special auditorium where visitors sit on the floor and listen to classical and modern record music. The aluminum covered Swiss pavilion is something to see at night when it lights up like a Christmas tree with 35,000 lamps.

There is no way of keeping track of how many foreign visitors have attended. Among foreign visitors have been Emperor Haile Salassie of Ethiopia, Prince Charles of Great Britain, David Eisenhower and his wife, Julie, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, wife of Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos, and their three children, Indonesian President and Mrs. Suharto and the Prime Ministers of Canada, Australia and South Korea.

In addition to the moon rock brought back to earth by the Apollo astronauts, the U.S. pavilion displays the uniform worn by Babe Ruth, America's late baseball home run king whose name is well known in Japan.

A lost child center, complete with computers and television cameras and employing 52 hostesses, has restored more than 10,000 children, ranging in age from 2 to 14, to their parents.

Hotel accommodations have not been as short as had been predicted. There are 12 western style hotels in Osaka and they have been able to fill the needs of foreign visitors most of the time.

PROGRAMS IN COLORADO

Ultimate Weapon In Fighting Drugs—The Proper Education

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado educators, fearful of a growing "pill popping" generation that already is evidencing itself as early as the sixth grade in a few instances, are arming themselves with a variety of programs they hope will curb the problem.

Schools throughout Colorado—which ranks 12th among the 50 states in illegal use of drugs—are using everything from ex-drug addicts to movies to try to get youth to decide drugs are not the answer to their growing pains.

In the forefront of officials who have encouraged schools to offer drug education programs has been a lady state senator from suburban Lakewood, Ruth Stockton.

"Schools are the first line of attack in the battle against drugs," Sen. Stockton said in an interview. "They're the best place to get the most of the people."

The Republican, one of only two women in the state Senate, helped guide a $253,000 drug and alcohol bill through the 1970 session of the Colorado legislature. The money will go to the State Departments of Public Health and Education in an effort to launch a program in every school district in the state.

Actually, Colorado even before the turn of the century had a law on its statute books requiring that schools teach about the dangers of drugs, tobacco and alcohol. The law, which some observors say has done little more than gather cobwebs, provides that teachers who do not comply "shall be removed."

"The law is not tremendous in its observance," said Dr. John Lampe, staff physician to the Denver City and County Schools. "It's against the law to spit on the street, too, but there are not many indictments for doing it. The problem is that I can say that I read a section on narcotics to my class and still be in compliance with the law."

The variety of school drug programs being offered is nearly as varied as the number of school districts offering little more than a slide presentation to full-scale efforts covering several grades.

"We can't achieve our ends with texts," Dr. Lampe said. "It's simply not a matter of information. Most kids know that drugs are not good for them. It is no use going through the golden rule to say that they are not.

"But what is in question here is kids' behavior—their values, their acceptance of drugs. That's what we must change."

Kenneth Baker, director of secondary curriculum and instruction for Littleton schools, believes that parents must be one of the targets of any drug education program.

"Drug abuse is not a cause in itself; it is an effect," Baker said. "It is an indictment of the family structure. Therefore, one of the major thrusts of our program is the parent.

"If kids play in an area where snakes bite, it's the parents as well as the kids who have to be made aware of the danger. You've got to impress and sensitize them on the needs of their youngsters.

"We probably have aimed more at parents than other areas, but like anything in education, we must get the support of the parents. Parents are the key. We must have more parent involvement."

Jefferson County has one of the most elaborate drug education programs in the state. Students in the sixth grade begin learning the uses and dangers of drugs. In the program students discuss what drugs are for and are given graphic illustrations of the effects of drugs upon the nervous system. A pharmacist is invited into the classroom to set up a demonstration which shows the effects of glue fumes on a white mouse. Science classes study the physiological effects of drugs.

In the 8th, 10th and 12th grades, there are more discussions, more films, more reading matter. The program expands in the high school to include seminars which use the authority figure—the lawyer, the clergyman and the psychiatrist. Occasionally a former drug user also is asked to speak.

"What we've tried to do is put drug education into regular school curriculums where it would normally come up rather than make a big deal about it," said Robert Weiland, director of special services in the county.

SLOW LIBERALIZATION

Hungary's Economic Road Departs From Soviet Plan

By MARQ de VILLIERS

BUDAPEST (Toronto News Service) — This old capital has many natural advantages which Moscow, among other places, lacks. It has an incomparably better setting, for one thing; the Danube is a lovelier river than the Moskva, and the Buda Hills higher than the hills called Lenin.

Budapest also has incomparably more beautiful women in incomparably shorter skirts, and many cafes from which to reflect in these improvements.

Natural beauty, of course, has nothing to do with the system by which a country is ruled. But Budapest has other advantages, too:

Of all the Soviet bloc countries, Hungary is the one least subject to internal stresses and most confident of its slow liberalization. It is quite a change from the dark years which followed the Soviet suppression of a popular uprising in 1956.

There is a tremendous irony in recent Hungarian history which the Hungarians, a people with a developed taste in irony, appreciate to the full.

First, there is Janos Kadar, the Hungarian party leader, who was installed by Khrushchev and promptly despised by the Hungarians as a Soviet lackey. Now? Kadar is respected, if not liked, and is popularly regarded as the one man capable of preserving the balance between independence and loyalty.

Second, there was the invasion of Czechoslovakia little more than 10 years after Hungary's own recolt. Hungary was the Warsaw Pact's most reluctant participant, since the Hungarians knew that their own economic reform program differed litle from the Czechs'.

And third, two years after the suppression of the Prague Spring, the Czech reforms are dead. Dubcek has been properly humiliated and Brezhnev's doctrine of "limited sovereignty" holds sway in Czechoslovakia. At the same time, the Hungarians are pressing ahead with reforms in some ways more radical than Dubcek's — and have (perhaps reluctantly) Soviet assent.

Kadar's reversal of political fortunes is even more bizarre than Nixon's 1968 comeback — Nixon wasn't installed by invaders (in spite of what the young may think) and is hardly a national hero now.

Of course, this must be kept in perspective: Hungary is no liberal's paradise. Yet, after the aborted revolution of 1956 Kadar was a symbol of the oppressor. In 1968 his re-emergence after several months of self imposed solitude was hailed by almost all Hungarians, since by this time he had become a symbol — the embodiment of the "new economic mechanism," of paced progress, of persuading the Russians that yes means no.

Almost all the Soviet bloc countries have by now introduced economic reforms of one kind or another, even the Soviet Union itself. But there are reforms and reforms.

The Yugoslav model (worker control of local enterprises, stimulus by foreign competition) is too strong for the other centralized economies to stomach.

But Poland, for instance, has introduced flexibility into its planning. Rumania is allowing a freer play for market forces; the Czechs, even now, have decentralized to some degree.

East Germany is the country where reforms are least needed and Bulgaria is a special case — a happy client state whose economy is only just reaching the stage where centralization is beginning to pay off.

All these new economic mechanisms differ, but they all have one thing in common: They are moving away from the old Soviet, rigid, Stalinist model of tightly-centralized tightly-controlled, minutely-planned economies toward (but not to) the freer, more anarchic mechanisms of the laws of supply and demand.

Within the frameowrk of a socialist society, production is to become reflective of demand, and profit is to become the measure of efficiency, salaries, payments and investments.

The Hungarians introduced their reform package all at once (New Year's Day 1968) — quite a different approach from the piecemeal caution of the other bloc countries. Of course, they could afford to do so; their economy wasn't performing quite as dismally as was Czechoslovakia's or the Soviet Union's.

In some respects the Hungarian package deviates substantially from the Marxist-Leninist model which is, officially, dogma throughout eastern Europe.

Take private enterprise, for instance. Some scale private business is not only tolerated but encouraged. Private businessmen in more than 50 fields now can compete on equal terms with state agencies. They can even get state loans. Foreign "monopolists" (for instance Shell and Coca Cola) are sold widely in the country.

Prices? Marxist price theory is a cost theory, which means that retail prices are based on supply, rather than on demand or an interaction of supply and demand as in the Western model. The Hungarians now have explicitly given recognition to consumer demand.

They are also allowing flexible pricing, a shift to "free prices" determined by supply and demand. Only about a quarter of all prices are centrally controlled, and the Hungarians are committed to reducing this quota.

This part of the reform is causing particular anguish in Moscow, where they believe price-setting is a prerogative of the central planners — a horribly difficult job in the Soviet Union, since they are responsible for setting each year some 10 million different prices.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Israel, in spite of an internecine cabinet struggle, followed Egypt and Jordan in accepting the American proposal for a 90-day ceasefire in the Middle East.

President Nixon promised there would be a "military standstill" during the ceasefire which would prevent an Egyptian buildup of artillery and missiles on the Suez Canal front. But Israel's coalition cabinet split over acceptance of the proposal and six Gahal Party members threatened a walkout.

The acceptance statement indicated Israel was prepared to stop fighting "at least on the Egyptian front" — indicating that Arab guerrilla attacks on the Jordanian front still would be answered with force. The guerrillas have not accepted the American proposal.

Israeli fears surrounding acceptance of the plan, which is designed to lead to negotiations on a permanent ceasefire, centers on a possible Egyptian buildup if Israeli planes halt their attacks against missile and artillery concentrations. Israel continued the bombing raids during a week of cabinet meetings devoted to the U.S. proposal.

The rightwing, hawkish Gahal, the second largest party in the Israeli coalition with 26 seats in the Knesset parliament, threatened to quit the government if the majority headed by Premier Golda Meir accepted the American peace formula.

Gahal's defection, however, would not be expected to bring down the government.

The Soviet Union underscored its endorsement of Egypt's acceptance of the peace plan with an article in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, which praised Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and scorned Arab critics of his decision.

The major Palestinian commando organizations and Iraq sharply criticized Nasser. Communist China attacked the U.S. proposal on charges it represented a plot by Washington and Moscow to carve out spheres of influence in the Mideast.

Around The World, Around The Clock

LISBON — Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, Portugal's ruler for 40 years, died at 81 following a heart attack two weeks ago. He died never knowing he had been replaced by Marcello Caetano in 1968 two weeks after he underwent surgery to remove a blood clot near his brain.

CHICAGO — More than 150 persons were arrested and at least 100 others were injured during a six hour battle between police and youths after a rock group refused to play at a free concert in Grant Park.

CAIRO — Egypt suspended the broadcasting privileges of two Palestinian commando groups after they criticized the Egyptian decision to accept the American proposal for a 90-day Mideast ceasefire.

WASHINGTON — A presidential commission recommended the removal of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from involvement in military operations in a proposal to reorganize the Defense Department.

NEW YORK — The Consolidated Edison Co. bought power from as far away as Tennessee to keep electricity flowing in sweltering, smog shrouded New York City. Even with the extra power, Con Ed was forced to cut back 5 per cent of its output.

Luncheon Is Served — For Good Causes

Tasty Way To Raise The Funds

Corte Madera's Women's Improvement Group hoped to install a number of neighborhood improvements. They called Peg Hardy.

St. Mary's College Guild, including many Marin alumni, needed to increase their scholarship fund. They called Peg Hardy.

Novato's Triple C Club needed more funds so the group could continue its various philanthropies. They called Peg Hardy.

Who is Peg Hardy?

ACTUALLY HER name is Margaret, though she much prefers Peg, and, as you may have guessed, she is one of Mill Valley's most sought-after residents.

It's not merely Peg's natural charm, of which she has plenty. Peg is Bay Area hostess for a national service organization, Luncheon Is Served Inc., which specializes in assisting nonprofit groups with fund-raising projects.

Now in its 25th year, the organization has helped women's groups throughout the nation collect over 15 million dollars for projects ranging from scholarships for youngsters to Christmas parties for senior citizens, from rehabilitation programs for paraplegics to a trip to a music festival for a high school band.

LUNCHEON IS Served has been a going program in San Francisco and on the Peninsula for some time, but really came alive in Marin County only after Peg Hardy took over its leadership a little more than a year ago.

"This is the most rewarding work I can imagine," Peg says. "I don't think of it as my work, but rather as my way of life. We hear so often these days, especially from the young people, how important it is that one's work is meaningful. I guess I'm pretty lucky, because mine is."

Suppose your club or service group has a fund-raising project in mind. You'd call Peg.

From her home office, among towering redwoods in "typically Marin" fashion, high in the hills off the Panoramic Highway, she'd recommend a luncheon or dinner.

YOU SELECT the date. Peg, and Luncheon Is Served, will provide all the food.

Luncheon Is Served's own cooks, Ruth Olson and Marion Zurfluh, also of Mill Valley, do all the preparation. Between courses, Peg entertains the guests with helpful hints on menu planning, nutrition, economical shopping and new recipes. After the meal, she awards food products as door prizes. Sponsors' coupons are also distributed to guests.

Your group has only to provide a place to hold the luncheon, appoint a handful of volunteers to assist with the serving, and sell as many tickets as you can (which Peg also furnishes) at whatever price you choose. Proceeds remain in your club treasury, except for a very small service fee, usually about $25 except for unusually large groups, to be used for your favorite project.

SOUNDS SIMPLE. What's the catch?

"No catch at all really," Peg smiles. "You might consider us the 'public relations arm' of some of the country's biggest food manufacturers. It's actually the manufacturers themselves who provide the food.

"Luncheon Is Served acts as a coordinating service, where the clubs can obtain a complete three-course meal from one source, rather than phoning a dozen or more food suppliers and then filling in the gaps from among their own members."

INVARIABLY, AFTER a luncheon, the clubwomen are pleased with the ease and fun of using the LIS service as compared to prior efforts in which club members have done all preparation.

None of the club members has spent hours in the kitchen, none has driven miles to procure food. Peg even helps with table decorations and her attractively arranged table on which the door prizes are displayed adds a bright and decorative touch to the dining area. Guests often comment on an air of elegance usually missing in less-coordinated efforts.

Wrote Mrs. Lyle Cuykendall of the Corte Madera Women's Improvement Club Inc. after that group had enjoyed Luncheon Is Served hospitality:

"Many of our women expressed their delight for an extremely entertaining day. The food was delicious, and the management of the luncheon was a credit to you and your assistants."

THERE IS sometimes more to it than simply enjoying the meal, Peg admits. Manufacturers on occasion ask the assembled ladies to "taste-test" new products or new recipes or to evaluate new packaging, and give their opinions as to whether the manufacturer should go ahead with his plans.

"Luncheon guests seem to enjoy that most of all," Peg says.

At least once, the collective opinions of several hundred clubwomen who had attended Luncheon Is Served gatherings overruled the experts of one of America's biggest companies, and the prospective product was never introduced to the market. On numerous occasions, the

"Why Did My Silk Dress Split?"

Examination of your silk dress shows that the lengthwise silk warp yarns are very fine, compared with the filling yarns. The constant bending and flexing of the fabric causes the more delicate yarns to break, often before the garment is drycleaned.

The strain from repeated bending and flexing of the garment cannot be prevented. Therefore the fault lies with the manufacturer who should have made the silk fabric with a balanced construction. This would not have permitted the warp yarns to give way and produce the splits. Unfortunately, there is no remedy for this fabric weakness.

women's opinions have resulted in modifications of product or packaging.

"WE ALSO fit right into today's consumer interests," Peg points out. "If a luncheon guest has a complaint about one of our sponsor's products, we make sure it goes directly to the manufacturer where something can be done about it. If she has a question about a product that we can't answer, we'll make sure she gets a satisfactory answer.

"Happily, we find that compliments far outnumber complaints. But we have noticed that this year, more than ever before, our sponsors are really eager to hear what their customers have to say about them and their products."

A group booking a luncheon now would be served a menu similar to the following (menus fluctuate from time to time in consideration of the sponsors' marketing programs):

APPETIZERS including Kraft's Squeez-a-Snak cheese with celery and crackers, Four Fishermen petite fish bits in Kikkoman teriyaki sauce, Swift's sausage bits, Circus pizza chips and regular and dry-roasted nuts, a crisp green salad with choice of four Bernstein's dressings and a Clamato cocktail.

The main course would be Swift's premium hostess ham or Foster Farms chicken, with

OTHER REGULAR sponsors are General Foods, Borden Co., Campbell Soups, Ingram Foods, Stouffer's, Seabrook Farms, Glidden-Durkee, and a host of others.

These manufacturers have found that Luncheon Is Served provides not only an effective means for obtaining consumer response and to assure new products are introduced to prospective customers under optimum conditions, it also presents a simplified method for handling the many requests they receive for donated foodstuffs. Many of the sponsors now donate only through LIS.

The summer months of July and August are Peg's rest time, since luncheons are not ordinarily served during the vacation months. (This year, a group of wives did manage to talk big-hearted Peg into entertaining them with a luncheon while their husbands were engaged in a golf tournament on the Fourth of July. As on many occasions, the luncheon was combined with other activities to make a full afternoon of festivities.)

TAKING reservations for the new season starting in September occupies a good deal of Peg's vacation time. The rest she spends in volunteer work, civic affairs, camping and sewing.

A 20-year resident of Marin, she is past president of the Muir Woods Park Improvement Association.

This summer, her "vacation" will include training hostesses to operate new Luncheon Is Served units just opened in San Jose, Sacramento and Fresno.

ALTHOUGH primarily intended as a fund-raising vehicle, the Luncheon Is Servied services are available to any recognized non-profit women's civic or service club that can provide cooking facilities. A Santa Rosa association recently booked a luncheon merely to provide an inexpensive and entertaining social occasion for its members.

Her most memorable luncheon? Peg's hearty laugh indicates that most are truly memorable.

"I suppose the most outstanding would be the outdoor buffet we gave for the San Jose City Panhellenic Women last fall. There were more than 850 guests! But it was worth the effort. The club cleared over $1,500 for their scholarship fund."

MOST LUNCHEONS average 100 to 150 guests. LIS prefers groups to number 80 or more, but will on occasion cater to smaller groups.

"That Panhellenic luncheon really kept us hopping for awhile. I hope we never have another that big," Peg sighs. Then smiles, "No, on second thought, I hope we do."

Any group, whether 850 or less, interested in the services of Luncheon Is Served is invited to contact Peg Hardy at her home at 48 Ashbury Way, Mill Valley, 94941, or to telephone her — although they might find the line busy. Her telephone rings frequently, especially with those busy autumn days of club activities looming on the horizon.

ALWAYS A POPULAR spot at a Luncheon Is Served feast is the hors d'oeuvres table. It provides food processors with a splendid opportunity to subject to the exacting taste test of the guests some of the snack and specialty items that are now pouring onto the market. Here women at the Muir Woods Improvement Club choose from among the goodies.

At Last A History Of West Marin —

Jack Mason Writes Story

By DON KEOWN

"I consider it the biggest and best thing I have ever done in my life," says Jack Mason of Inverness of his newly-published book "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land."

The historian, a retired newspaper man, says his history of West Marin has such significance for him because it plows new ground, chronicling events in an area that previously had not been recorded in book form.

"And to me" he adds, "Point Reyes has become the most important part of Marin County — the section with the greatest potential."

TO SUPPORT that assertion he points to the thousands already visiting the national seashore each day, and to projections which show that those figures are certain to multiply in coming years.

To Mason, "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land" outranks even his current project, a history of early days in the entire county, tentatively entitled "Lords of Marin," which he is writing under Marin County Historical Society auspices.

"Lords of Marin," if it is so-named, will be something of a catch-all, a gathering, with the help of his researcher Helen Van Cleave Park and his archivist Dr. Leo L. Stanley, organizing and editing of available material, a good deal of which has already been published in other sources.

"WE FEEL IT will be a valuable contribution toward the perpetuation of our traditions, and a most needed one," he says.

But to Mason "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land" remains "my own thing, and thus it has a special importance to me. And it fills a real void in our record-keeping."

Mason is a native of West Marin, a member of a family that has lived on Point Reyes for five generations.

HE GRADUATED from the University of California in 1932 and was for 32 years with the Oakland Tribune including service as assistant managing editor.

He and his wife Jean now live in the old Inverness Hotel annex which they remodeled in 1959 for their home. He runs the Station House Coffee Shop in Point Reyes Station, and writes. The Masons have a married daughter, Mrs. Richard (Barbara) Gallagher, and three grandchildren in Point Reyes Station.

Mason, long interested in the preservation of Marin history and landmarks, says "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land" had its beginnings two and a half years ago when Karen Zetterquist, widow of Gustav Zetterquist, one of the last of the Point Reyes Lighthouse keepers, and herself the postmistress on the point, brought to him the original lighthouse log.

MASON FOUND the contents fascinating and working from it authored three articles for the weekly Point Reyes Light for which he regularly writes a column.

Those articles created a stir of interest among West Marin history buffs who began bringing to Mason other records, mementoes and collections.

"The columns unlocked a storehouse of history," Mason says.

HIS OWN investigations also disclosed that very little about West Marin had been put down in writing previously. "To my astonishment," he says, "I could not even find a published picture of James McMillan Shafter (a central figure in the Point Reyes story)."

Mason set about to rectify the void in the chronicles of Marin County. And as he worked on what was to become "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land." its chapters continued to appear under his byline in the Point Reyes Station.

Mason gave strong preference to documented data over personal recollections.

"OLD-TIMERS were very helpful," he says. "But the human memory is notoriously fallible, especially when reaching back through the decades and recalling stories that they heard only second hand. So I went after the written records."

And found them.

Mason believes his book's great contribution to be its clarification of the stories of the Shafter and Howard families who were the dominant influences upon early-day West Marin.

FOR INSTANCE, says Mason, his book puts to rest one of the region's oldest myths — that the Shafters acquired their huge holds out of rapacity and through the use of the old "legal fee racket" by taking over property whose holders were unable to pay the high costs of their services as attorneys.

"I found the pioneer Shafters to be, not scamps, but honorable people," says Mason.

The Shafter-Howard story that wraps up so much of West Marin's history is a story of a fortune accumulated and a fortune lost, of the wealth built up by Judge James McMillan Shafter only to have most of it evaporated by the time of his death. It is a story, too, of some violence and considerable controversy. Mason tells it candidly and with zest, but fairly.

THERE ARE chapters, too, in his book on the "riddle" of Sir Francis Drake's disputed landing, the coastal Miwok Indians, the first white claimants to the land of Point Reyes — James Richard Berry and Rafael Garcia — the murder of Dr. Andrew Randall, the pioneer dairymen the arrival of the tourists, the lighthouse and its personnel, shipwrecks, the 1906 earthquake, bootlegging and rumrunning, the schools, the ranches, the conservationists and ultimately the establishment of the national seashore.

With the dedication of the national seashore by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson on Sept. 20, 1966, "Point Reyes had finally found the 20th Century," writes Mason.

artifacts and ends with the seashore dedication. The photographs, the author says, came from many sources.

There is also a 10-page index, a section of notes and a bibliography to enhance the book's reference value. The end pages feature maps, one showing Point Reyes historical sites, the other 1960 land ownerships.

The book is dedicated to Helen Van Cleave Park, described by Mason as "a most thorough researcher and a most dedicated historian."

THE BOOK was printed in his Point Reyes Station shop by Don DeWolfe, former editor and publisher of the Point Reyes Light who sold that newspaper in March of this year to Michael Gahagan. Mrs. DeWolfe, says Mason, hand folded 60,000 sheets of paper in assembling the book.

Steve Olmsted of Petaluma, bearer of a name that is familiar to students of Marin history, did the engravings "and a beautiful job of it, I thought."

Nine hundred copies of the book were run off in paperback, priced at $7.50. Another 100 copies in hard-cover, hand-bound by Robert Bruckman of Inverness, are priced at $25 per book.

"WE ARE talking about a 5,000-copy second edition," says Mason. "That would enable us to lower the price somewhat."

Mason says he will be happy if he can "break even" on "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land."

"Anything I might possibly make I will invest in the other history," he says.

"Lords of Marin," if that is to be the title of his Marin County history, is nearing readiness for the publisher, Mason says. Excerpts from it have been running for some time in the Point Reyes Light.

IT WILL BE dedicated to Florence Donnelly, the late Independent-Journal historian whose stories of Marin's early days have long been a special and popular feature of the I-J's Marin Magazine. Manuscripts she completed prior to her death continue to appear from time to time in this supplement.

Mason has in mind yet a third book on his home county.

"Lords of Marin" will focus

upon the original grantees of the county's ranchos, and upon their immediate successors. He plans to follow that with "Modern Marin," to make his coverage of the county's history complete.

THUS, IN actuality, the history-writing he has undertaken under commission from the county's historical society is a two-volume job.

The authorship of books is not an entirely new experience for Mason. Earlier he wrote "Ben's Auto Stage: A Romantic Footnote to the History of West Marin." It was the story of the stage upon which West Marinites and their visitors relied for many years for service between Point Reyes Station and Inverness, driven and later owned by Dewey Sartoris, then later operated by Ben Pedranti under Peter Scilacci's ownership.

The small book was mostly the story of Ben and Edith Pedranti, and was illustrated with historic photos plus sketches by Kent DeWolfe, the son of the then publisher of the Point Reyes Light.

THAT PREVIOUS small venture into literature did not prepare him, Mason admits, for the initial reaction locally to the appearance of "Point Reyes —The Solemn Land."

"It was almost embarrassing," Mason says. "I discovered just how history-conscious West Marin is. People started calling me on the telephone to talk and ask about the book, and the thing didn't quit ringing. I got a call at 4 o'clock in the morning."

But West Marin's limited population means that Mason will have to look elsewhere for anything approaching "mass" sales of his book

HE IS LOOKING in the direction of the tourists who are coming to Point Reyes and its national seashore in growing numbers.

"If you drove all the way from New York or Kansas to visit the Point Reyes Seashore, might not you want to take back home with you a book about the place and its history?" he asks.

And he hopes the answer is an emphatic "yes!"

REGARDLESS of its sales, Mason has the satisfied feeling that his book has anchored down the facts about West Marin's past that formerly were all too prone to shift like the sands of its beaches. He hopes, too, that he has opened up new avenues that will lead him to yet more information upon Marin's history for the two books now in process, and perhaps for others yet to come. And he hopes, finally, that he has given their just due to the Shafters, the Howards and all the others who came to West Marin and found there the peace and space that has made it a haven not only for them, but for others who have followed, like, for instance, the Jack Masons.

So Belrose St Offers Classe

It is no longer enough, not if you have professional or semi-professional aspirations, to master dancing alone.

Entertainment today demands a multiplicity of talents.

That is the reasoning behind the decision of David and Marge Belrose to offer training in dramatic acting as well as dance at their establishment.

Thus the full title of their enterprise at 1415 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, is a long one — Belrose Studio Theater School of Dance and Performing Arts.

DAVID BELROSE, sometimes assisted by his wife, serves as the drama coach.

He has been teaching acting off and on for nine years. Formerly he taught dance classes as well, but Marge Belrose now handles that part of the studio's curriculum. The versatile Belrose is also a published songwriter with two releases of his work on the Warner Brothers and Capitol labels.

THE YOUNG couple opened their studio in San Rafael 15 years ago, moving to Marin for that purpose.

"We were free to go wherever we wanted to go, and we chose Marin simply because we liked the county," they say.

...Studio Also ...ses In Acting

dancing operation, teaching ballet, jazz, ballroom and tap techniques in the Pierce Building on Second Street. The ballroom dancing has since been dropped from the curriculum.

FROM THE start, however, the Belroses felt a need to incorporate instruction in acting in their program. And their opportunity came when they moved into the former Trinity Lutheran Church building across the street from the San Rafael Public Library.

"We moved in with pews, altar and pulpit still there," Mrs. Belrose says, looking back eight years.

What the Belroses had been seeking was an unused warehouse that would provide them with sufficient space for theatrical classes as well as dancing. "But the ones we looked at just wouldn't do. They were too barn-like."

THE FORMER church, however, provided ample space.

Belrose's 20 to 25 drama students almost all take dancing lessons as well. And the emphasis is upon the "lighter" kinds of acting as preparation for the musicals and the improvisations with which dancers might well find themselves involved in the integrated theater of today.

Some attention, however, is paid to straight drama as well.

MOST OF Belrose's students are girls and young women — "We would like to have more men." Ages run from 8 and 9-year-olds to the middle 20s.

The classes meet for an hour and a half once a week. Those same students generally take another hour or two hours a week of dance instruction — "although some come in every day."

The students perform in a musical each year written by Belrose and thus especially tailored for their talents.

STARTING IN September, the Belroses plan a separate department at the studio devoted specifically to musical comedy training. "It will be for the person who wants all-around instruction in connection with his future aspirations, for personal development or just for fun and as a hobby."

Included will be sufficient ballet, jazz and tap dancing plus chorus singing to equip the students for participation in musical plays.

And, as with all Belrose classes, there will be separate sessions for different age groups.

"WE THINK it is a new idea for a theatrical school, and one that really fills a contemporary need," they say.

The Belroses have at times in the past offered lessons by a professional voice coach, and they plan to re-establish that service.

Giving the Belroses yet a further tie-in with the stage is the fact that their studio theater serves as home base for young Greg Norgaard's Artists Repertory Company.

NORGAARD AND his talented troupe use it in the evenings after the Belrose classes are over and will be opening "Death of a Salesman" there Aug. 14.

The Belroses are enthusiastic about Norgaard's approach to the stage. And they hope that eventually their own theater classes will prove a useful source of talent for Norgaard's polished productions.

Meanwhile dancing continues as the major activity at the studio. Mrs. Belrose's students range from 3-year-olds to men in their late 30s. The Belroses have two children of their own, Dea, 11, and David, 14, and both take lessons. Young David's ambition: "Some day I'm going to have a television show of my own."

IF HE DOES, he'll be well prepared, from tap dancing to enunciating, from ballet to vocalizing.

And he can thank his parents who believe that "just dancing" is no longer enough for the young person eyeing a show business career or even the satisfaction of participation in amateur community programs, revues and productions.

...ost of them also drama pupils at the Bel-...chool of Dance and Performing Arts, enjoy ...ractice a jazz number. And so does their teacher, Marge Belrose, at far right. The dancers are, left to right, Eric Wright, David Belrose, Linda Watson (a teaching assistant at the studio), Signe Seastrom, Mike McLean and Wayne Wrischnik. The studio is placing increased emphasis upon the kind of dancing and acting training that is especially helpful in musical comedy. (Photos by Marge and David Belrose)

Check Your Insurance Before You Leave

The Travel Pages

By MURRAY J BROWN

NEW YORK (UPI)—The car has been lubricated and checked by the mechanic. Mother and the children are belted in. You've made a final check and locked all the doors and windows in the house and garage.

You are ready to go. But first, a quick review. You have your credit cards and traveler checks; arranged for the care of the lawn and family pets; and informed the postman, milkman, newsboy, police, relatives and friends.

In fact, everyone seems to know of the family vacation plans.

BUT WHAT ABOUT your insurance agent? Did you call him, too?

If not, suggests Myron DuBrain, a senior vice president for Firemen's Fund American Insurance Cos. of San Francisco, get your agent on the telephone right now. He could help save you time and trouble.

"For example," DuBain said in an interview, "if you are traveling by automobile and are protected by the minimum amount of insurance required in your home state, your policy may not be accepted as security under the financial responsibility statutes in another state. Your agent can check and provide, if necessary, additional coverage."

DUBAIN NOTED that if your travel plans include Canada, the problem of being able to demonstrate financial responsibility becomes even greater.

"You must have your liability coverage in order and be able to present proof of insurance upon request," he said. "Although the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario do not require such proof upon entering their borders, a minor accident can result in aggravating delays if you find it difficult to demonstrate financial responsibility."

Other provinces in Canada do require such proof, DuBain said. This usually takes the form of a government-approved card which is available on request from your insurance agent, he said.

DuBAIN WARNED that if you are planning to drive in Mexico, you must see your agent because unless you are properly informed and insured your visit "could turn into a costly nightmare."

"Insurance laws in Mexico are quite unlike those in the United States," he said, "and few U.S. travelers are aware that only insurance companies located in Mexico are recognized by Mexican law."

In addition, he said, contracts of insurance written by non-Mexican companies are not in Some U.S. insurance companies force while driving in Mexico. provide policies with a "Mexican auto endorsement" but these are meaningless, he said.

"AS A MATTER of record, the government of Mexico resents this practice and contends that U.S. companies should not extend coverage in a country where they are not licensed to do business or adjust claims," DuBain said.

He said the U.S. motorist could run into "real trouble" if involved in even a minor accident in Mexico.

DuBain stressed he was not suggesting U.S. motorists cancel auto vacations through Mexico, only that they have their agents purchase insurance from Mexican companies for the duration of their visit.

Here are some other tips from DuBain:

IF YOU ARE planning to travel by rental car, make sure to read the clauses in the agreement concerning insurance coverage. Some have restrictions that might deny coverage under certain circumstances. Your insurance agent can tell you if your own automobile insurance will help if the coverage that comes with the rental car is not adequate.

Check your agent, too, on whether your home-owners policy will protect you against loss or theft of personal belongings while traveling.

No one expects to get ill on vacation but it can happen. It is a good idea to check with your agent, or with your personnel department if you have a company group plan, to see whether your health and accident insurance will be good while traveling, especially overseas. If not, purchase extra insurance so you won't have to use your vacation money if you should have to be hospitalized.

There's Still Room At Yosemite Park

"There's room for you — and a room for you — at Yosemite National Park this summer," advises Charles Davenport who is reservation manager for Yosemite Park and Curry Co., principal concessioner.

"The word's been spread around that Yosemite is crowded," he continues. "In part, the word is right. In part, the word is wrong. Some days Yosemite 'looks' crowded.

"However, while the numbers of people in the park during the day have increased in recent years, the numbers of people who stay in the park overnight are down."

Davenport pointed out that there are two ways to add enjoyment to a visit to Yosemite:

"First, stay overnight — there's too much to see at Yosemite, in the valley and in the high country that is now opening up, to whiz in and out in a day. Day visitation — in and out in your car — doesn't give you or Yosemite a chance to know and appreciate each other.

"Secondly, while there are many cars on a given day, all the visitor has to do for a private experience is to park his car and leave the beaten path in any direction. I'd bet that a walk of from 100 to 200 yards in any direction from the road would give a visitor his own spot in Yosemite."

EUROPEANS AND Americans traveling in Europe continue to enjoy a standard of comfort and luxury in train travel that has become a thing of the past for Americans at home. Switzerland is one such country where train transportation remains justly popular with the passengers. Shown on this page are some of the reasons. At upper left, the seating arrangements provide ample space so that the traveler can shift about without annoying passengers near him. And the facing seats provide a natural stimulus for the making of new friends abroad. At upper right, most long-trip trains in Switzerland feature well-stocked bars that offer the finest wines of Europe and provide a relaxed place where passengers can mingle socially. At center left, the Swiss penchant for perfection is reflected in the full-course gourmet meals served in the dining cars. Food and service are equal to that found in the best restaurants of Europe. And bottom left, specially designed ramps at Swiss stations allow cars to be loaded and unloaded easily for quick rail transportation through Alpine tunnels. The cars are leaving a car-carrying train at Airolo.

Gibraltar In Essays And Tales

THE ROCK by John Masters; G.P. Putnam's Sons, 383 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

"The Rock" is billed as a novel about Gibraltar, but actually it is a combination of an historical essay and a series of tenuously linked tales used to dramatize the chronology. The result is a gear-tooth meshing of factual events and fictional people.

To minimize the disjointedness of his presentation, Masters has built his tales around the Jewish community of Gibraltar, because they have been a part of the Rock's population since pre-Roman times, regardless of who was in power.

The fictional portion of the book is really a series of tales tied together by their relationship to the history of Gibraltar and by the reappearance of successive generations of the early Jewish inhabitants. This technique is similar to the construction of "The Canterbury Tales" or the "Decameron" where the episodes are related by the circumstances of their telling, not by their content.

The historical essay is a well-researched picture of the changing historical role of Gibraltar from the cave-dwellers through the hegemony of Rome, the Moors and England to the present day.

The combination of fact and fiction serves to constantly remind the reader that the seemingly impersonal "facts" of history have a very personal impact on the lives of the people involved. As obvious as this relationship seems when stated baldly, anyone who has sat through high school and college history classes knows that only the rare teacher conveys the flesh-and-blood sense of the interrelationship between events and people.

The tales themselves are earthy and well-written. While they are not tightly connected to each other they are perceptively illustrative of the historical data, making it clearer and more memorable.

Masters, best known for his novels about British India, is a skilled craftsman, at home with both fact and fancy.

In "The Rock," Masters has separated fact and fiction and then intertwined them, rather than intermingling them more inconspicuously. The result is a history/tale, rather than an historical novel, and because of the skill of the author, it is informative and rewarding for the reader.

Beautiful Writing By Horgan Is Rare Piece Of Literature

Paul Horgan, who won a Pulitzer Prize for his "Great River: the Rio Grande in North American History," treats the Rio Grande Valley again in "The Heroic Triad."

This, however, is not a history book. It is a series of essays on the three societies making up the triad that has inhabited that valley: the Indians (primarily the Pueblos), the Spanish-Mexicans, and the Yankees.

Horgan writes beautifully. And to each of these so-different cultures he brings sympathy and understanding.

The Pueblo Indian, with his stylized pattern of life built upon what to him was religion but what to us is superstition; the Spaniard, daring all "in service of God and king" for a different sort of religion (or superstition); the American, the almost-complete individualist to whom all the continent was his for the taking in the name of "manifest destiny" — each is treated with a depth of feeling that neither damns nor deifies.

Shaking Up Historians

THE POLITICS OF HISTORY by Howard Zinn; Beacon Press, 368 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Because he is an activist, Zinn challenges history itself. The historian, he holds, has an obligation to make history "relevant."

He seeks to do so in "The Politics of History." He uses bits and pieces of history to upset cherished historical traditions, to shake up the historian's own concept of the material with which he deals.

In doing so, he is not above using his personal experiences as a World War II bombardier as a part of history. In fact, this is quite in keeping with his activist role, in which he projects himself into the events he describes and becomes a partisan in what he records.

Whether the result is history is up to the reader to decide. But, like all learned activists, Zinn succeeds in disturbing and causing the reader to think and question, even while he pursues his own hypotheses with sometimes scant regard for the firmness of their bases.

American Prisons As Seen By Four Convicts

AN EYE FOR AN EYE by H. Jack Griswold, Mike Misenheimer, Art Powers and Ed Tremanhauser; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 288 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Norm Howard.

The recent newspaper articles about the infamous conditions at the Con Son prison in South Vietnam could hardly have come as a surprise to the authors of "An Eye for an Eye." What may have given them a wry chuckle is the high dudgeon in which outraged visiting American congressmen marched to the nearest microphones and cameras to tell all.

As Griswold, et. al., tells it, conditions are not so much better in some American prisons over which congressmen presumably have some influence.

"An Eye for an Eye" is a collection of essays by four inmates of Indiana State Prison. Together, they account for more than 50 years behind bars.

It is going to be easy for a lot of people to dismiss a good portion of this material as self-serving rationalization. People who do so will thus be able to sleep well. But for the rest of us, this book raised disturbing questions which are not easily laid to rest.

The authors have approached their situation intelligently, with a good deal of understanding of themselves, the people who run the prisons and of the political caprice which sometimes governs their lives.

There seems to be no question that punishment rather than rehabilitation continues to dominate prison philosophy in America. This is unfortunate since punishment stimulates revenge and thus continues a dreary cycle of crime and punishment that prevents the return of offenders to a useful place in society, results in further crimes against innocent victims and creates a kind of inflationary crime spiral.

The Nixon administration is currently pressuring congress to pass an agglomeration of so-called anti-crime bills. Some of them simply propose drastically lengthening the sentences for some crimes. In "An Eye for an Eye" the authors make a good case for the point of view that this is a waste of everyone's time.

Without forgetting that they are convicted criminals, it is possible to sympathize with the authors and to realize that locking men up in a hopeless, degrading situation ultimately degrades society itself.

Lest one approach this book as a chore, be advised that it is by turns dramatic, witty, sardonic. And it reaches a respectable level of craftsmanship throughout.

For those who attempt to stifle any discussion of penology by saying, "What about the victims of crime," there is an answer of equal sophistication to their retort: "Two wrongs do not make a right."

A Priestly Voice From A Prison

PRISON JOURNALS OF A PRIEST REVOLUTIONARY by Philip Berrigan; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 198 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Paul Brindel.

The author is a Josephite priest and a World War II combat officer, now serving a six-year federal prison sentence for destroying draft board records in Baltimore and Catonsville, Md.

"He is perhaps the first priest confined by the United States government for a political crime against the state," avers the book's editor, Vincent McGee, who transcribed most of the text from taped interviews. The author's elder brother, Daniel, a Jesuit priest, also sentenced to prison as one of the "Catonsville Nine," "went underground" several months ago while at liberty on an appeal bond.

This book poses questions as to "The Establishment" and today's society in general, and Christianity, especially Catholicism, in particular. Even as the fall of the Bastille in 1789 triggered the French revolution, the author asserts that "certainly Vatican II (the Ecumencial Council, 1962-65) is at fault with its emphasis on freedom of conscience."

He continues: "Always in the background has been the long preparation of the ground by the Catholic Worker movement . . . the challenge provided by American young values the Church should champion, put seldom does. Try as it might, the Church cannot entirely kill the Gospel or its Christ. The official Church has lost its fight to maintain control of thought; it must now rely on the indirect repression employed by other bureaucracies."

The author contends that "a man cannot be a Christian without being a revolutionary," but "revolution may be unchristian in certain instances" and that "revolution is today the most feared, and least understood word in our vocabulary." He quotes President John F. Kennedy's warning that "those who oppose peaceful revolution provoke violent revolution, " while admitting "there never has been one in an affluent society."

Paying tribute to Eldridge Cleaver's "Soul on Ice" and to the late Malcolm X, Father Berrigan insists that "when America grows up it will treasure both men who won their humanity in jail." Also, he lauds the late Bishop James A. Pike: "He stood for a questioning and socially relevant Christianity for years."

Thirty-five years ago Sinclair Lewis wrote "It Can't Happen Here!" You finish this Berrigan Manifesto with the uneasy feeling that it can happen unless. . . .

World's Feverish Sore

By DON KEOWN

THE MIDNIGHTERS by Rowland Barber; Crown, 304 pages, $5.95.

If there is to be a third — and probably final — world war, the experts tell us it is likely to begin in the Middle East where old and new hates are festering.

And should Americans, unhappily, find themselves critically involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict, it is unlikely that they would be any better prepared for an historical evaluation than they were in the more limited, but still ghastly, struggle in Southeast Asia.

Those Americans with any knowledge at all of the Middle East's past are usually limited to two eras, Biblical times, and the post-World War II period when the Jews re-established a homeland and fought off bitterly hostile neighbors.

The centuries in-between are almost entirely blank. This is especially true of the earlier decades of the 20th Century, prior to and during World War II. For those fateful years in the Middle East, the average American has some vague ideas of a romantic figure called Lawrence of Arabia, of Legionnaires trodding desert sands and doing battle with Arabs, and that is about all.

"The Second Arab Awakening" by Jon Kimche, veteran English newspaper and magazine editor and correspondent and co-author of "Both Sides of the Hill" covering the Palestine war of 1948, is a book designed to help fill in the void.

It is, Kimche tells us, something of a sequel to George Antonius' "The Arab Awakening," published a half-century ago, describing the first stirrings of the Arabs against Turkish domination, and read by very few of us.

With the disintegration of the Ottoman Empire, and armed with authority and privilege bestowed upon her by the Paris Conference of 1919, Great Britain became the dominant power in the Middle East. But English control was always to be precarious. Bubbling beneath that lid were all sorts of Arab aspirations that eventually erupted into full-fledged revolution against western influence and restraints. And in Palestine, the Jewish home state movement, originally under a kind of British sponsorship, ultimately was completed in the face of Anglo opposition.

With Britain no longer the self-anoited policeman for the area, a battle royal developed. International politics and oil brought the two great post-World War II powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, into the arena. France, England and other European states tried desperately to keep their feet inside the door. But the two key countries in deciding the future course of history in the Middle East were not the outside powers, but Egypt and Israel.

Kimche reviews the whole sorry record of the region for the 20th Century — the greedy, opportunistic, erratic exploitive, short-sighted occupation by the imperialists that planted so many of the bitter seeds for today's global distrust of the West. The record, too, of misrule endured by Arabs at the hands of their own inept or corrupt leaders. Kimche obviously regards Gamal Abdel Nasser as one of the worst in a long series of such disasters.

"Egypt remains the natural powerhouse of the Arab world," he writes. "So long as she is not free and healthy, the whole region will suffer. . . .there can be no Middle Eastern peace or progress so long as the Middle East's Egyptian heart remains sick."

Kimche obviously regards the Jewish accomplishments in Israel with admiration and considerable sympathy. But Israel does not escape criticism.

Israel, he says, must abandon the doctrine that its only solution to its predicament is a military one — "an admission of political bankruptcy."

Kimche does see hope for a solution of the crucial refugee problem in the new generation of Israelis and Palestinian Arabs, some of whom, he says, are beginning to ask themselves whether it is really true that their conflicts are as insoluble as they have been told by their leaders and by their backers among the Great Powers. But, he admits, they remain comparatively few.

Kimche has his own suggestion for a settlement — a "federal" formula that would set up a Palestinian Arab state along the West Bank in territory that belonged to Jordan from 1948 until 1967 when it was lost to Israel. This new state would be tied closely economically to its Jewish neighbor. The plan, Kimche says, conforms to the thinking of the late Dag Hammarskjold that "only a purely Palestinian settlement could effectively defuse the Middle Eastern situation," and that outsiders, be they Egyptian, Russian, British, American or French, serve only to complicate and heat up the problems.

Which does not mean that Americans should not sharpen their understanding of the forces involved there. A reading of Kimche's book — a tragic record of missed opportunities — will do that.

He is hard on the Arab leaders — though not on the Arab people — and no doubt will be accused of writing from a pro-Israeli stance. He cannot, however, be charged with favoring his own country or other interventionists with their arrogance and air of "honest hypocrisy." Their responsibilities for today's perils are clearly delineated. And therein may lie another lesson for Americans, to be applied to Southeast Asia, where, just possibly, we might be guilty of an "honest hypocrisy" of our own.

GAMAL ABDEL NASSER
A disaster for the Arab cause?

"THE MIDNIGHTERS," a realistic, well-written "documentary novel" by Rowland Barber, deals, too, with the Mid-East, but is concerned not with the deepest roots of the strife there, but with the momentous events of 1948 by which Israel was created.

It is based upon the experiences of Marty Ribakoff, the American pilot who became an Israeli hero, and the men who worked and flew with him in airlifting desperately-needed supplies to the beleaguered Jewish forces. Thus it is indeed, as much "documentary" as "novel."

Barber, who was Rocky Graziano's collaborator on "Somebody Up There Likes Me" and the author of "The Night They Raided Minsky's," tells how Ribakoff, the unemployed flyer and cynic, was induced to join "the world's first all-Jewish airline" without any real awareness of what lay ahead. But once in Israel, Ribakoff rediscovered his long dormant "Jewishness." The mercenary becomes the zealot.

Barber's story tells us a number of interesting truths including the part that spiritual fervor played in the Israelis' success — a factor neglected by Kimche. He shows us, too, that hard, war-toughened men can still experience emotion — and be the better for it.

But he also gives us a more subtle and disturbing insight into war's effects: That even as the participant gains in partiotic idealism, he loses in his sensitivity toward other people as individuals. He becomes totally engrossed in the cause or causes, so that the single human being virtually vanishes from his mind.

Thus we have the pilot who participated in the first bombing mission against Cairo learning that one bomb struck a movie theater and hoping, not that there was no children's matinee going on inside, but that it wasn't a William Bendix movie playing. And Ribakoff taking his 6-year-old son along on a mission and allowing him to release upon the enemy one of the bombs that was to turn men below into bits of flesh and splinters of bone.

There is, it seems, always a price the human soul must pay when it is subjected to the dehumanizing trauma of war, no matter how lofty the cause.

Barber's book, for all of that, stands as a deserved tribute to some daring and dedicated men who faced a task that seemed impossible, and performed it none the less. With all of one's misgivings about war of any kind, "The Midnighters" still makes engrossing reading that is revealing in what it tells us about inspired people in a time of ordeal and the keeping of a date with destiny.

TO THEIR believers "sciences," to the skeptics "fads," astrology, palmistry and graphology are three fields very much in vogue right now.

Zolar, self-styled "world's most popular astrologer," combines them all in "Success at Your Fingertips," published by Fawcett as a 95-cent Gold Medal original paperback. The idea is that through astrological and palmistry forecasts plus handwriting analysis one can evaluate his personality and chart his best route toward a more satisfying life.

This one is strictly for believers.

They have been heard on KPFA in Berkeley, and these two LPs are a goldmine of way-out satire in astonishing stereo. The use of sound effects is especially excellent and the pace seldom lets up, with puns and stream-of-consciousness humor abounding.

One of the best sketches is "Temporarily Humboldt County" on the first record, which sums up in a few minutes the entire history of how the white man has done in the American Indian.

"Le Trente-Huit Cunegonde" is about a world of the future in which it is a crime not to be hip and turned-on.

The second disc gets so wild it is well-nigh indescribable.

"The Further Adventures of Nick Danger" is a dig at the current re-birth of interest in old time network radio shows of thirty years ago. You won't believe your eras — (I'd meant to say ears, but eras fits even better and demonstrates the air of the unexpected which prevades the Firesign Theater's creations in sound.)

Like Barbra Streisand, Mabel Mercer, and several other New York thrushes, Miss Nyro has a voice that doesn't nearly meet the usual requisites of beauty of "bel canto" style.

You'll probably either love or hate her and her original tunes which have been dubbed by one critic "tuna fish music." Her voice changes timbre every several notes up the scale and she swoops up into the high ones like an Apollo take-off.

I dug a few of the tunes — "Save the Country" and "Time and Love" especially. You may too but I don't guarantee it.

THE CHICAGO TRANSIT AUTHORITY — Columbia GP 8:

This top-flight rock group from Chicago has changed its name to simply "Chicago" in the many months since release of this album.

Most two-disc sets are such a letdown I really want to plug this one because of the excellence and variety it offers. The brass behind the rock sextet and the jazz influence often reminds one of Blood, Sweat and Tears, certainly on the tune "Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is?" "I'm a Man" is a tremendous blues number and "Someday" effectively uses actual sounds taped during the Chicago Convention hassle.

THELONIOUS SPHERE MONK — "Monk's Blues" — Orchestra arranged and conducted by Oliver Nelson — Columbia CS 9806;

Every Monk LP is an event worth noting and this one, although not the first to balance his angular piano improvisations against a big band, is surely the most successful. Nelson is a masterful arranger and obviously digs Thelonious, because he never covers up his piano with too heavy backing yet adds dynamically to the power and thrust of the music.

Monk favorites like "Rootie Tootie," and "Straight, No Chaser," are featured, as well as some others that were unfamiliar to this Monk fan. The smashing stereo reproduction is the final fillup to this gas of an LP.

GROFE: "The Grand Canyon Suite" — Andre Kostelanetz and His Orchestra — Columbia MS 7425:

COPLAND — "Copland Conducts Copland" — An Outdoor Overture; Our Town; Two Pieces for String Orchestra; Quiet City — London Symphony Orchestra — Columbia MS 7375:

Welcome new stereo version with the stamp of authenticity from the composer himself of four smaller and very American-sounding (if there is such a thing as that) instrumental compositions. Three of them date from around 1940, with the string orchestra pieces being an effort of the 20s.

"Quiet City" is a brooding and atmospheric little gem which attempts to reflect thought extremely appropriate to this very minute. "The nostalgia and inner distress of a society profoundly aware of its own insecurity."

Schuller has reconstructed and edited a number of Ives compositions for chamber orchestra and produced an important single-disc collection of the amazing American composer's most avant-garde instrumental music. Included in the above album title are the "Sets" Nos. 1, 2, and 3, "Tones Roads" Nos. 1 and 3, and such short but unique pieces as the evocative "From the Steeples and the Mountains," "The Pond," and the rhythmically atonal surprises of "Over the Pavements," a scherzo penned way back in 1906!

More super-Romantic piano virtuosity by the long-time master of the genre. The 30-minute-length "Kreisleriana" is a fantasy-like spinning of music "composed in fire" according to Schumann's letters. It is the embodiment of Florestan as "Scenes of Childhood" is the embodiment of the introspective Eusibius. Horowitz' powers are as great as ever.

This is one of the finest solo piano albums of the year.

The spectacular pianism of Lewenthal is equalled only by his spectacular impression of himself as the foremost authority on and interpreter of virtuoso piano music of the Romantic era. The odd thing is that he is probably right.

Seems like Lewenthal's "Romantic Revival Series" is coming along at just the right time. It no longer is gauche to profess a love of Tchaikovsky or Schumann, and if you go ape over Rubinstein or Scharwenka, so much the better.

Perhaps I sound sarcastic but don't wish to be; this overheated stuff turns me on as much as anybody, especially on fine equipment with the volume way up there and chords with giant reaches of thirteenths and fourteenths crashing about the room in profusion. First stereo discing of the very exciting Rubinstein concerto.

A seven-inch stereo disc accompanies the album, featuring Lewenthal in a Lenny Bernstein-type entertaining analysis of the music. If you dig this, pick up also on the earlier album Lewenthal recorded performing the Henselt Concerto in F Minor and his own re-working of Liszt's "Totentanz" (Columbia MS 7252).

Life is easier today. . .and more complicated.

A contradiction? Not necessarily. Take lawns for instance. Go back a thousand years, and you see that man never had to worry about cutting them. It wasn't considered fashionable. But hay had to be cut, for feeding the animals. And the scythe involved fewer safety rules than does the modern power mower.

What about a short century ago?

In another tax era, the affluent could merely send his gardener out to complete the task. But with a better distribution of wealth today, virtually every household can afford a good power mower. The trick is not how to get one. But how to use it properly!

TO BEGIN with, read, understand and comply with all the rules in your operator's handbook. You've probably been mowing a lawn for years, but there's a good chance even an old pro can find one or two safety items he's been neglecting.

Here's a 10-question exam prepared by the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute to test your prowess. Grades for each question are indicated in the parentheses. Rate yourself severely; lawn safety is extremely underrated. Only a perfect score indicates a safe mower operator. An 85 to 95 means you're only near perfect — just imperfect enough to seriously hurt yourself or a loved one. Below 85, and you'd better put the mower aside and re-read your owner's manual until you've mastered the technique.

SO, HERE goes — true or false?

1. When your mower runs out of gas after you've been operating it awhile, refill the tank quickly to make sure it will re-start easily. (10)

2. Make sure children and pets are at least five feet away from an operating lawn mower. (15)

3. The latest lawn mowers, especially riding models, are powerful enough to forego the old rule about clearing a field of stones and twigs before mowing. (15)

4. It's best to cut grass while it is wet. (5)

5. It is always better to push instead of pull your mower. (10)

6. Never attempt to unclog your mower while the motor is running. (5)

7. Mow steep slopes sideways with a walk-behind mower. (10)

8. When using a riding mower, mow steep slopes up and down — in a vertical direction. (10)

9. Mowing is a fine American pastime and one of the best ways for a young child to pick up some extra change. (10)

10. If you've turned off the engine, it's safe to work on a mower. (10)

NOW FOR the answers:

1. False. Refueling a hot engine can cause the gasoline to ignite and explode. And always remember to refuel out of doors.

2. False. That's much too close. Make sure they're completely off the field. Children and pets can be seriously hurt by small objects flying from the discharge chute, or by accidentally backing into them if you use a rider mower.

3. False. Pebbles, twigs, etc., when picked up and hurled from the mower's discharge chute, can fly at bullet speeds. It makes no difference whether the machine is new or old, pusher-type or rider.

4. False. Wet grass can cause you to slip and catch your foot under any type of mower.

5. True. If you pull your mower, you can easily slip and pull it over yourself.

6. True. This is one of the most common causes of power mower accidents, when a hand gets caught in a moving blade. When clogging occurs, always shut off motor and discharge gears.

7. True. Up-and-down mowing on grades with a walk-behind power mower can cause the operator to lose control and have the mower slip onto him.

8. True. The rule for steep hill mowing is: With riding mowers — up-and-down; with walk-behind mowers — sideways.

9. False. Power mowing can be a dangerous tool for most youngsters under 16. Never allow small children near a power mower.

10. False. Without the spark-plug wire disconnected, your mower's blade can start like a plane's propeller. One turn of the blade and you're in real trouble.

How'd you make out? Less than 100? Then go back and review that part again. Better be safe than sorry.

And that beautifully trimmed lawn will be reward enough for a job well — and safely — done.

University Pamphlets Revised

Flower gardeners in California will find the University of California's "one-sheet answers" on houseplants and dahlias again available for distribution.

Both are revisions of earlier informational sheets written by the late Harry Morton Butterfield, agriculturist emeritus with the agricultural extension service and associated with the university for nearly 60 years.

Butterfield died in his Berkeley home April 5, 1970.

One of the revised publications is "Growing Dahlias," OSA-8, which covers most of the answers to dahlia production in California, from variety selection, through soil preparation, cultivation, and fertilization to post-bloom care of the plants.

The other revision is "Care of House Plants," OSA-40, which analyzes the important considerations for care, including location in the home, watering, fertilizing, repotting, and pest control. Butterfield's publication also suggests that potted plants need an occasional rest, and tells how to provide this "relaxation period" to best advantage.

The two one-sheet answers are among nearly 100 publications written by the eminent California horticulturist during his long service with the University. Many of them deal with home gardening, flowers, and ornamentals.

The two revised publications and others on gardening and floriculture may be obtained from the public service offices of agricultural extension on the Berkeley and Davis campuses of the university or through the Marin County farm adviser's office.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✓ Don't overlook the ferns when looking for plants that will lend a refreshingly cool touch to your garden. There are numerous varieties, many of which do well in Marin.

✓ And for the hanging baskets on your patio, think in terms of such beauties as the ivy geraniums, fuchsias and tuberous begonias. If you do not have such additions to your outdoor decor, take care of that oversight now.

✓ Remember that fuchsias and camellias appreciate frequent overhead sprinklings during the summer, especially when the weather is unusually warm.

✓ Continue to water the lawn regularly and deeply. If too much water runs off, your ground needs to have that hard, top crust opened up. Nurseries and hardware stores have effective tools for this job.

If You're High On A Windy Hill

Living high on a windy hill, as many Marinites do, can be refreshing, especially when the landscape utilizes plant materials that provide beauty despite this tough environment created by prevailing winds.

It can be rough going for some garden shrubs, but nurserymen offer a long list of plant materials that can take it — whether along the seashore or a windy, sun-baked inland plot.

COTONEASTERS are plants that revel in the rough going. These robust berried shrubs, from the contour-hugging Rockspray Cotoneaster to the graceful, arching Silver Leaf variety, will serve you well in any soil, with a minimum of attention to water.

For windbreak purposes, the Silver Leaf Cotoneaster excels.

The Juniper family offers a large number of beautiful candidates for breezy planting areas. There are groundcover types, medium-to-large growers which spread in attractive manners, and upright, columnar growers.

NURSERIES WILL have a large selection of Junipers for you to choose from.

Flowering shrubs? Rely on Oleanders, whose durability in all sorts of conditions have made these prolific bloomers a California favorite.

Also, Abelia Grandiflora, with its graceful growth and profusion of white flowers is hard to beat.

The compact Oregon Grape and Flax Plant rate consideration, too. The low-growing Oregon Grape variety is an ideal foundation plant and Flax, with its vaselike shape and sword-like fronds, is a stunning accent in the garden.

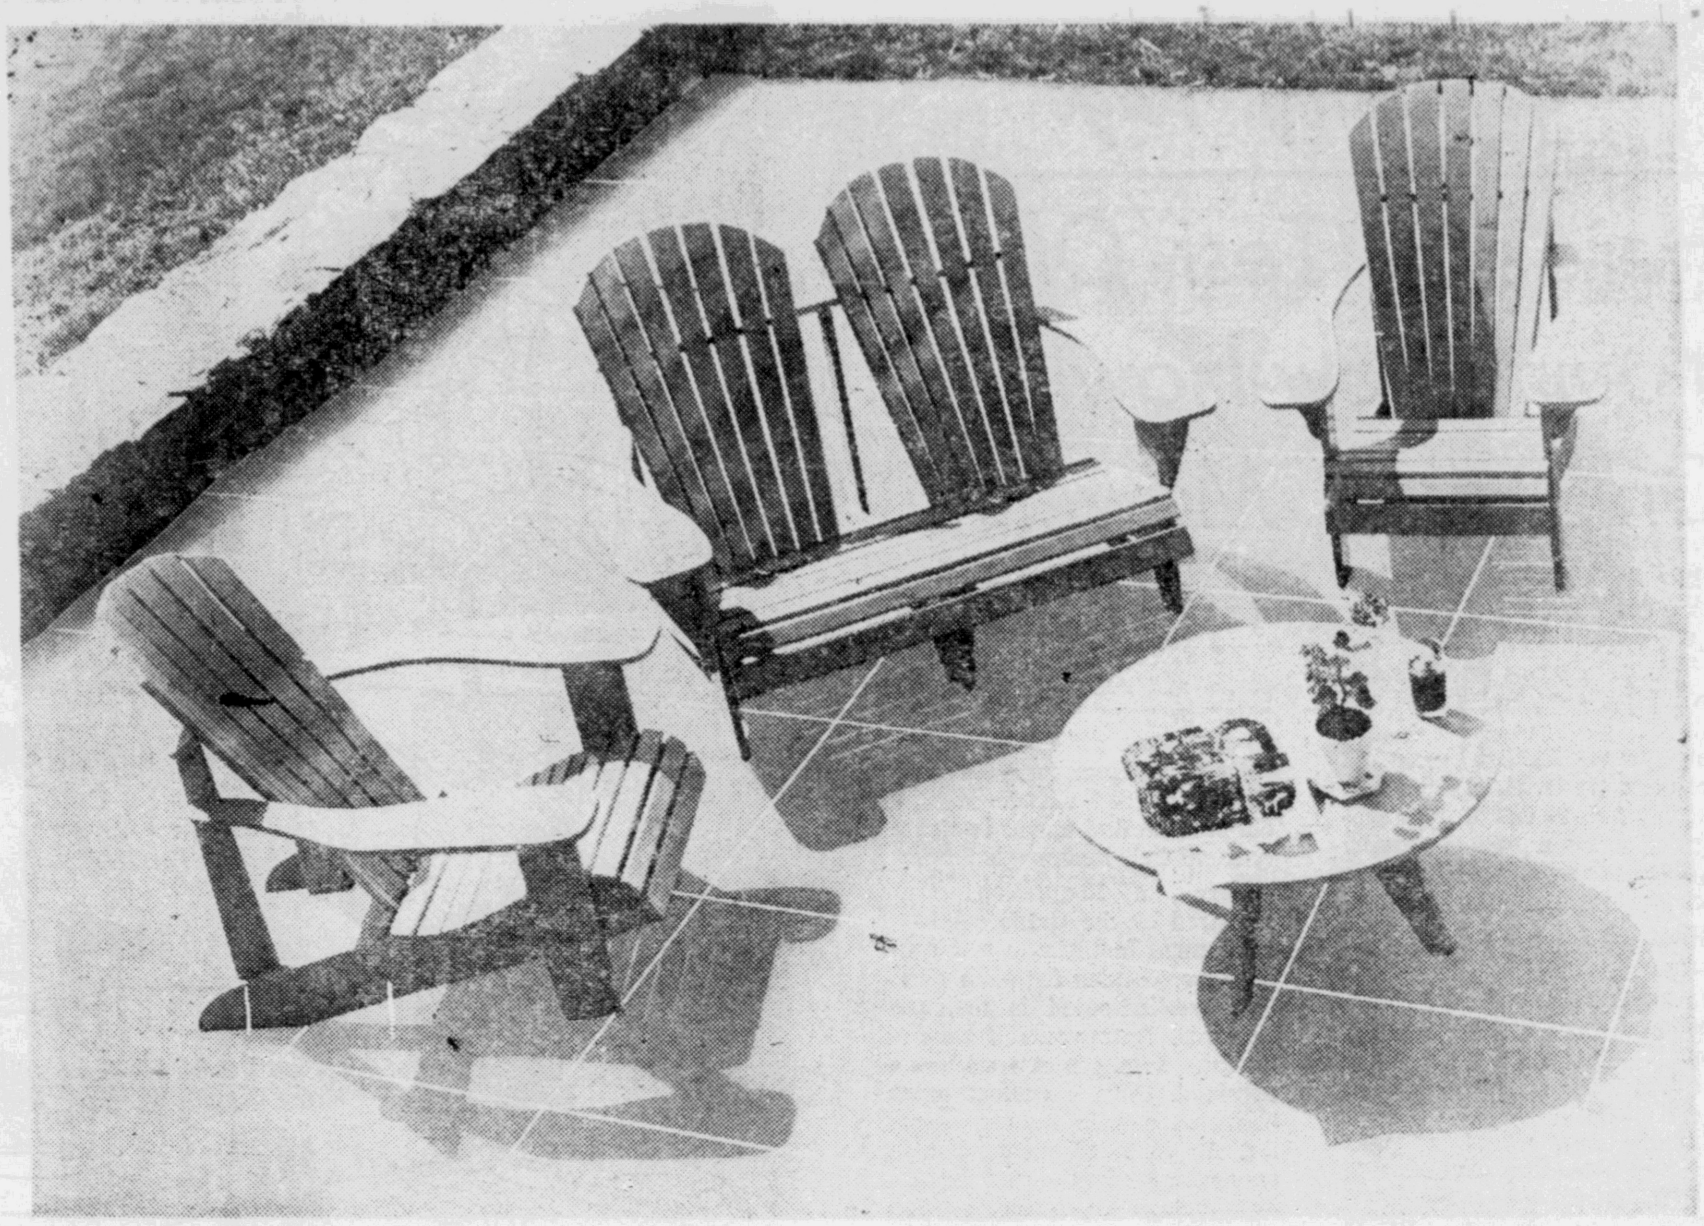
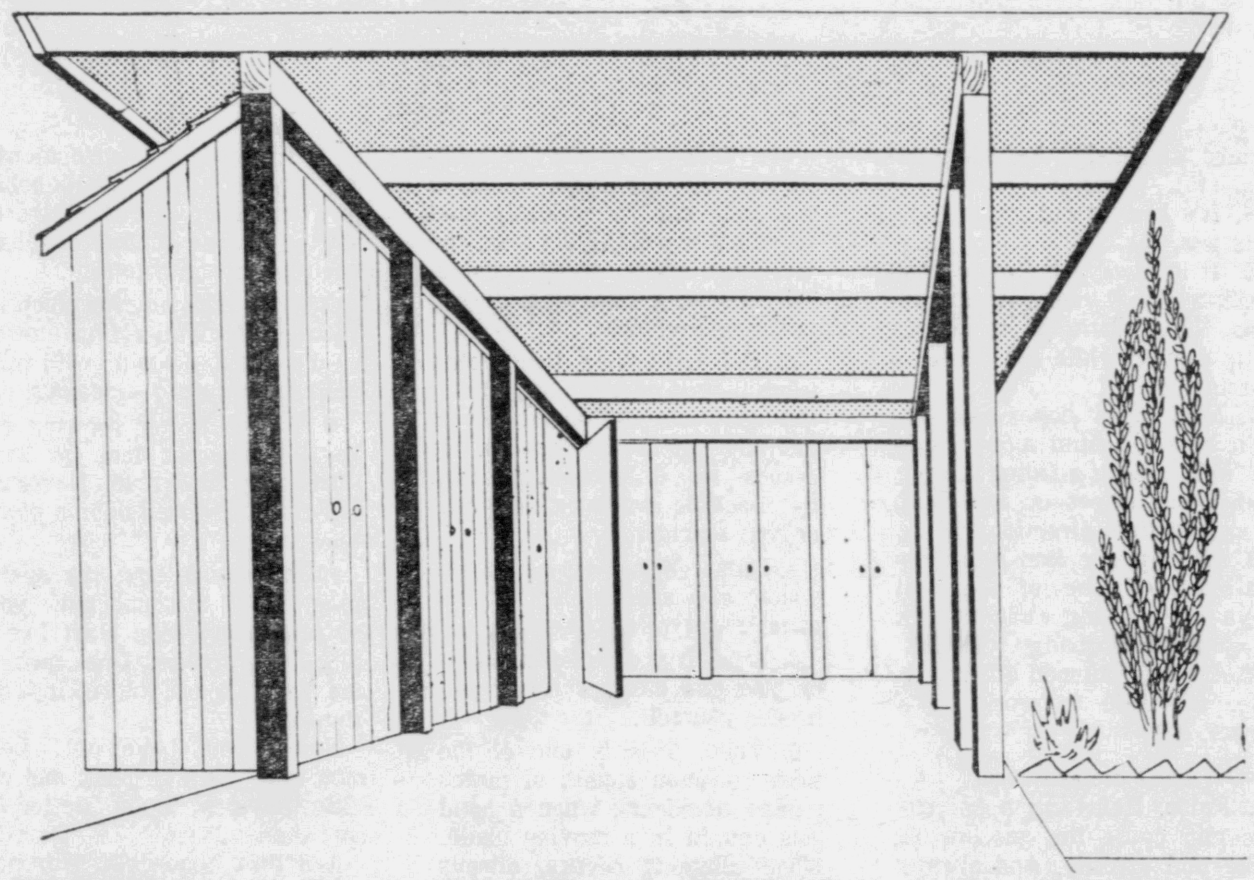
Handyman's Pages

FOR MANY Marinites, their patio is almost as important as their living room. Especially is this true during the summer months now with us. And, thanks to the new, easy-to-mix concrete products now available, anyone can pave a patio with attractive cement squares such as those shown at right. The method is outlined and the necessary patterns provided in Easi-Bild's Pattern No. 591, Pave Your Own Patio, available for 75 cents from the Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510. After you have carried out those directions and constructed a patio, there are also available Easi-Bild patterns that will permit you to build your own outdoor furniture. Terrace Table Pattern No. 326 costs 75 cents. Lawn Chair and Settee Patterns 32 and 39 go for 50 cents each.





THE CARPORT often offers an ideal site for storage. Built-in units will hold mower, wheelbarrow and other large items, and can contain shelves and hooks for smaller implements and supplies. You can build with Douglas fir one-by-fours or wider lumber. Use full-width double doors for easy access.

Build Storage Into The Carport

When building or buying a home, a couple checks out the indoor storage spaces with much care. But many people overlook the need for outdoor storage for garden and sports equipment.

One place that's almost always handy is the carport. If it isn't big enough for built-in storage, try a built-out. It's convenient and it also provides an insulating wall.

A three-foot wide addition, the length of one wall, will house mowers, skis, bikes, even fireplace wood.

Set the framework on concrete footings for a firm foundation and remove enough dirt to allow a "floor" of gravel for drainage. If you prefer, surface the floor with spaced wood decking.

Fancying Up Cement

When doing concrete work, interesting effects can be achieved by dragging a long-handled brush across the surface while it is still fairly wet. It not only gives the concrete a kind of character but makes it less slippery.

The carpeting is no problem for a handyman. Begin by attaching the outer posts and beams to the existing carport. The size and location of doors are important, so plan them for easy access to the items you expect to store.

If you house has wood siding, use matching lumber and paint or stain. It it's brick or stucco, use Douglas fir, cedar or pine and finish it to match the house trim. Slant the roof outward for drainage and cover it to match existing roofing.

Check Roof Drainage Before Rains Start

This isn't the time of year in Marin County when many of us are thinking about roof gutters and downspouts.

But it is exactly the season that we should be thinking along that line.

Now, not when the rains come, is the time for maintenance. And a simple, but faithfully executed routine, can assure you of many years of trouble-free performance from the rain-carrying system atop your roof, according to the Roof Drainage Manufacturers Institute.

A PROPERLY installed gutter should carry away rain as fast as it falls, so there must be enough pitch to properly drain out all the water.

An easy way to check is to run some water through it and watch for innocent looking little puddles that remain. These should be eliminated, because they eventually cause your gutter to rust or corrode, and are excellent breeding places for mosquitos.

To correct the condition, bend the gutter hangers slightly with a pair of pliers. Where this is not effective, the hanger may have to be replaced or repositioned.

WATCH FOR accumulated debris that clogs gutters and downspouts and traps water for long periods of time. A strainer at the point where gutter and downspout meet is often helpful.

Clean out the accumulation at this point several times yearly, most certainly after the last leaf has fallen.

Elbows in the downspout just below the eaves are likely places for leaves and debris to accumulate and clog up the drain. If not too solidly packed in, they often yield to the force of a hose.

Where pinholes and rust have made headway, clean with a wire brush, or scrape and then follow with a whisk broom. Paint the inside with a lead primer, followed by a coat of asphalt.

SMALL PINHOLES can be temporarily sealed with a fiberglass fabric which you can then protect with asphalt paint.

Peeling of gutters indicates that paint was not properly applied, or that galvanized metal was painted too soon after hanging. Ordinary galvanized steel must weather at least six months in order to etch the surface for good paint adhesion. Peeling can virtually be eliminated by specifying that gutters and downspouts be made of a specially treated steel which has been factory attached to grip paint more securely.

Where ordinary galvanized metal is used, try one of the special paints for use on this type of surface.

Factory-finished rain carrying equipment supplies the greatest insurance against unsightly peeling, the institute points out. Most manufacturers of factory painted products guarantee them in writing for a period of years.

Chain Is Useful Thing To Have Around The Yard

NEW YORK (UPI)—Chains play an important role in summer outdoor living by helping insure privacy, security and convenience.

For example, you can shield open patios or decks from wind by building a simple privacy barrier of lengths of fiberglass panels, fastened to wooden or metal posts by short lengths of chains. Panels may also be of painted exterior plywood or heavy-duty canvas.

And for more convenient outdoor cookery, you can build chain-hung tables or shelves from walls or fence rails adjoining your barbecue area.

OTHER EASY and economical ways to use chains to advantage include:

—Keep young children safer on decks and raised porches or terraces by stretching three lengths of chain about a foot apart between posts at least four feet high.

—Make an ever-ready dog run for the family pooch by extending a wire between trees or buildings and fastening a chain to the wire to permit freedom of movement.

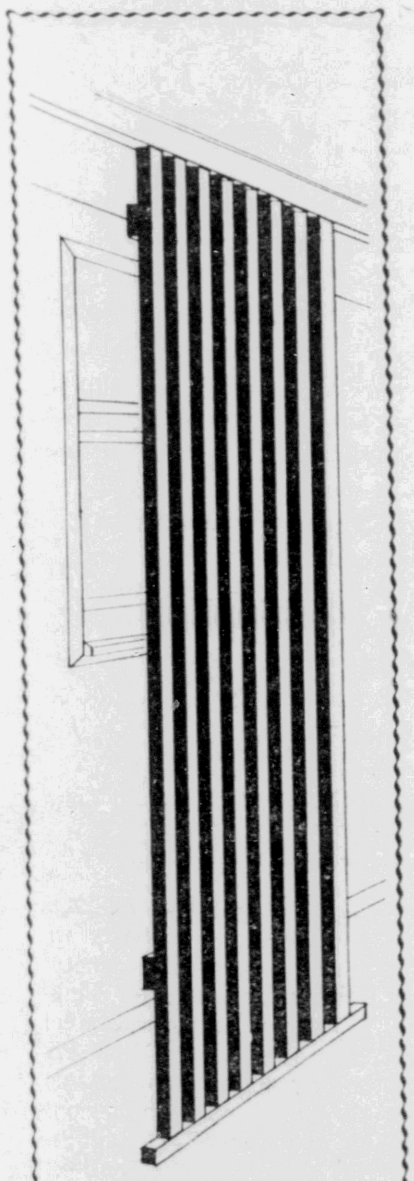
—Protect lawns and flower beds with barriers made by extending a single piece of chain between metal posts about three feet high.

—Protect lawn furniture from theft by securing it with chains to nearby trees or buildings. This same precaution can be taken with bicycles, scooters, lawn mowers and other gardening equipment stored in garages where doors or locks may be vulnerable.

—Define limits of your yard's outdoor parking areas with single-strand chain fence to guide visitors' cars and protect lawns from damage.

—A chain across the street entrance of your driveway will discourage random entrance by trucks or motorists looking for shortcuts. A padlocked chain across your carport will help deter car thieves. Many motorists go a step further—chaining their parked cars to street signs or trees.

—Be sure that hanging container plants or any decorative accessories are equipped with sufficiently strong chain. You can easily do this by weighing pot plants or other material you plan to hang and asking your hardware store for the proper strength chains. All new chains are identified according to their "working load limits."



A WOODEN screen can provide privacy, shut out an ugly view and serve as an attractive addition to your home. A screen such as this one can be built of western pine or Douglas fir two-by-two lumber mounted on a two-by-two-inch base, and braced with horizontal two-by-fours.

Wood Door Will Give Desk Space

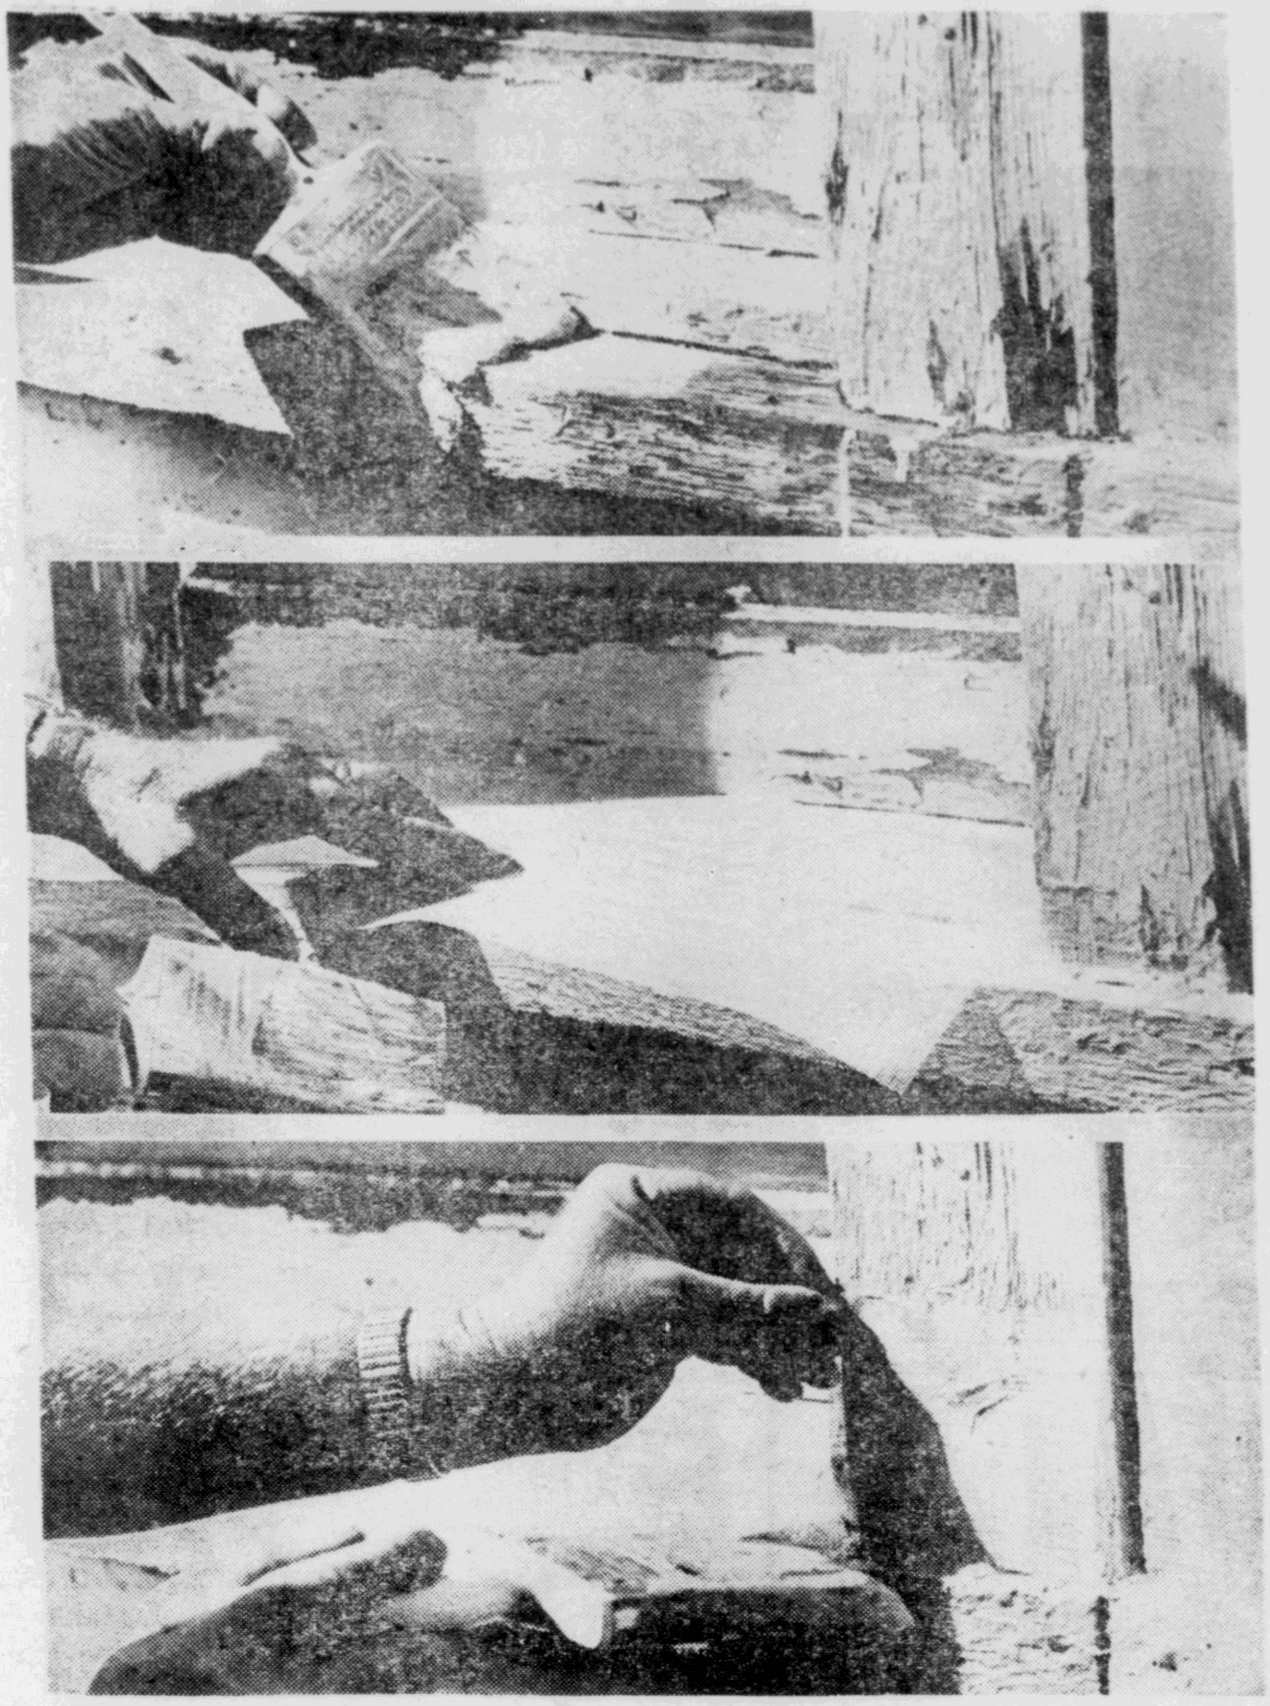
Want to encourage the back-to-schoolers in your family to hit the books? Give them desk space with lots of elbow room.

One very simple method is to buy a ready-made flush wood door, rest it in a horizontal support attached to the wall, and suspend the outer corners on chains attached to either a center ceiling hook, or one on each side if preferred.

Nail a two-by-two-inch piece the same length as the door-desk, and in the same finish, along the wall 30 inches from the floor — or lower for smaller fry. Screw in a heavy hook, or hooks, to a ceiling joist, and attach chains at the outer corners of the desk. The solid door provides a handsome, sturdy working surface.

For the more ambitious handyman, shelving or wood file dividers may be attached to the desk above or below the working surface. If extra strength is needed, you can install diagonal braces, made from two-by-fours, between the baseboard and the outer corners of the desk.

Take care to provide a chair of proper height and encouraging a good posture, to complete a perfect study set-up.



THREE STEPS IN the restoration of weather-worn wood window sills are illustrated in the picture series above. First, the sill is coated with a mastic compound. Then glass fabric cut to size is applied to the surface and face of the sill. Finally, after drying, the entire surface is given another coating of the mastic compound. Badly deteriorated sills are a common problem in older Marin homes, particularly those with a heavy condensation of moisture upon the window glass.

A New Technique That Restores Wood Sills Damaged By Water

Waterproofing and resurfacing of wood window sills is simplified by a new system which utilizes a mastic compound and glass fabric. Even badly deteriorated sills are quickly and inexpensively repaired.

The entire sill is coated with the mastic compound, then glass fabric (previously cut to size and shape) is applied to surface and face of sill, and smoothed into place, while being imbedded into the compound. Butted seams and cracks are also covered.

MASTIC IS LEFT to dry until it becomes tacky.

Following this, the entire surface is recoated with the mastic compound, then smoothed into a new surface, using the inexpensive applicator.

Following this waterproofing and resurfacing procedure, repair should be left to dry, preferably overnight. Renewed sill can be primed and painted according to paint manufacturer's directions. The work can be done from inside the building or from the outside.

SILLS ARE THE most vulnerable spot on any building, as they present a natural gathering place for moisture and condensation. Sills receive more direct sunlight than building walls and must withstand temperature cycles with moisture in direct contact. As a result, paint on sills weathers three times as fast as paint on the rest of the frame and sash.

Paint films rupture quickly, frequently crack and peel, contributing further to the deterioration of sills.

Four Quentin Inmates Fail In Escape Swim

Try Ends Within Grounds

A swim for freedom by four convicted murderers at San Quentin Prison ended short of breath last night when one was spotted staggering ashore within prison confines after the quartet escaped its cell block using a prison-made rope.

Associate Warden Albert R. Jacobs said today all four men, serving life sentences for first degree murder, were captured shortly after the first was spotted at 10:30 p.m.

"They were damn cold and willing to give themselves up," another prison official commented after the prisoners were apprehended near a bayside parking lot.

CUT VENT

Jacobs said the men escaped by cutting through a vent in the ceiling of the east cell block, a medium security section, then crawling over the roof of the yellow building and lowering themselves to the ground with a braided denim rope. A hacksaw was found below the air vent on the walkway of the building's fifth level.

The inmates waded into the bay and were swimming parallel to shore about 25 yards out, trying to get beyond a prison fence protruding into the bay near the parking lot, when a guard spotted one tired swimmer, Jacobs said.

Other guards, who rushed to the parking lot to pick up the swimmer, spotted the others in the bay. A cell block head count, in progress at the time of the escape, indicated the four men as missing.

FOUR IDENTIFIED

The escapers were identified as Rex Spross, 38, committed in 1959 from San Diego County; Charles Beckett, 26, committed in 1968 from Sonoma County; Dennis Hanson, 25, committed in 1968 from Los Angeles County, and Victor Carrafa, 27, committed in 1967 from San Francisco County.

Helicopters' Marin Service Might Be Cut

I-J Special Report

OAKLAND — San Francisco-Oakland Helicopter Airlines asked the Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday to approve a temporary halt in service to Marin and other parts of the Bay Area, effective Aug. 15.

SFO president Joseph A. Young said the cutback was sought to give the airline "a chance for successful survival." He added the company hoped to undertake a general reorganization soon.

No proposed time limit on the suspension was given.

The cutback also would affect Berkeley, San Jose and Palo Alto flights, but the airline will continue a daily schedule of 52 trips between San Francisco and Oakland international airports. Forty daily trips would be temporarily eliminated under the proposed discontinuance.

Young said 14 of his 22 pilots were notified of their pending layoff and added his 225-employee operation would be reduced to about 90 under the proposed reorganization.

"SFO finds itself unable to continue operation of its present schedule and consequently must move to a position commensurate with its ability to serve the public and satisfy its fiscal responsibility," Young said.

"We are curtailing our general operation to concentrate on our most productive route, in the hope that the national decline in airline passenger traffic will be of a temporary nature," he added.

Young said a complex captial-raising venture undertaken in July was abandoned because declining national air traffic ticket sales cut deeper into SFT's income. SFO depends on major airlines for most of its business.

Last spring, SFO was granted a $1 fare increase for North Bay flights. A $2 boost for San Jose trips was approved in May.

The company uses the Richardson Bay Heliport for Marin service.

ACTION CALLED 'TOO HASTY'

Sausalito Trustees Pick Principals For Two Schools

The Sausalito School District board today chose two out-of-county educators as principals of Martin Luther King and Central schools, despite objections from spectators and the board president that the action was hasty.

On a 2-0 vote, with president Nathaniel Johnson abstaining, the board hired Armando Renzullo as principal of Central and Henry E. Hopkins, a black, as principal of troubled Martin Luther King.

Renzullo, whose last job was as a principal in the Las Virgenes Unified School District in Los Angeles County, and Hopkins, the only black candidate for the two posts, is vice principal of a Beaumont, Tex., junior high school.

Trustee Jerry L. Whitcomb moved that the men be awarded one-year contracts each at a $16,591 salary.

Johnson said his abstention "does not reflect on Mr. Renzullo or Mr. Hopkins," but he felt that "the board is moving too hastily."

He cited three reasons to delay filling the positions: discontent in the district, especially Marin City, over the quality of the applicants; the large number of students transferring to other districts and the request by Rev. A. Cecil Williams of San Francisco, who had been asked by the board to help in the selection, that all five final candidates be rejected.

"In light of these facts, I don't believe we should choose the principals now," Johnson said.

Eleanor Dixon, a former work-study employee of the district, questioned "the purpose of today's absurb deadline" in choosing principals.

"You seem to have taken a week to choose two principals for a year," she said, "after getting rid of one of the most highly qualified principals in the country."

The reference was to Sidney F. Walton Jr., fiery black educator dismissed by the board as Martin Luther King principal in May.

Interim Supt. Robert E. Spain explained today's date was not a deadline. "The board in June accepted a time-line for appointment by Aug. 1 in order to give them (new principals) 30 days to find out what's going on in this district. They could use a year," he said.

"Every minute that they have

Towns Under Enemy Siege In Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Three Communists units totaling 3,000 men launched a thrust into northern Cambodia today, attacking the provincial capital of Kompong Thom and two other towns and cutting Highway 6 between Kompong Thom and Phnom Penh in several places.

A Cambodian commander near one of the besieged towns said the defense of it was "hopeless."

Military spokesman said three Communists units estimated at 1,000 men each drove on Kompong Thom, 80 miles north of Phnom Penh; Skoun, 38 miles northeast of the capital, and on the village of Pralay Meas, between Kompong Thom and Skoun.

Capt. Chan Than, commander of a 150-man government company 12 miles from Skoun, a town of 3,000, said Commu-

Israel Drafts Reply, Cabinet Crisis Seen

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

An Israeli ministerial committee today drafted the nation's formal reply accepting the U.S. Middle East pecae plan. Political sources said the acceptance portends the most serious Israeli cabinet crisis since the 1967 war.

Arab nations reacted cautiously to Israel's positive response to the U.S. proposal but Palestine guerrillas vowed to step up the fight against Israel to try to frustrate any peaceful settlement.

In Moscow, the Soviets today criticized Iraq's ruling Baathist party for opposing the last Middle East peace proposals, but failed to take public notice of Israel's acceptance of them.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, discussed the peace plan in a report from its Cairo correspondent. The initiative was described as being the work of President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, not of the United States.

As the politicians conferred, Jordanian troops clashed with an Israeli patrol on the Jordan River cease-fire line in the north Jordan Valley Friday night. A Jordan military spokesman said the fighting lasted an hour and was without Jordanian casualties.

The Israeli cabinet adjourned after recommending Friday to accept the American proposal, including a 90-day cease-fire on all fronts.

The right wing Gahal party threatened to quit the cabinet if the government accepted the plan. Gahal leader Menahem Begin said the decision meant "a repartition of the native land. It is Gahal's duty to leave the cabinet." He said the party would decide whether to pull out of Premier Golda Meir's 24-member cabinet in a meeting Monday.

Even if Gahal did withdraw, Mrs. Meir still would have a comfortable parliamentary majority of 76 on which to base any new government, political sources said.

The Israeli cabinet's recommendation to accept the American peace plan was approved by a 17-6 vote Friday.

A cabinet spokesman said Israel would "appoint at the appropriate time, a representative for talks under auspices of the United Nations representative, Gunnar V. Jarring."

Announcing the approval Friday afternoon, Government Secretary Michael Arnon said the cabinet had named an eight man ministerial committee under Mrs. Meir to write the Israeli reply to the United States.

Despite Gahal's rejection of the plan, the government invited it to name two nominees to the committee.

Shifts Avert Month's Delay On Medi-Cal

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Controversial Reagan administration changes in the Medi-Cal program went into effect today after getting the approval of a superior court judge.

Judge Irving H. Perluss Friday revoked a one-month delay in the implementation of the new regulations when a disputed clause was revised to conform with federal law.

The California Rural Legal Assistance had asked for a restraining order to stop the Medi-Cal revision on grounds they would adversely affect 50,000 recipients in the medically indigent category. Perluss Thursday delayed action on the request until Sept. 1 to give both sides time to work out a compromise over the measure.

In a surprise move, Dr. Earl W. Brian, director of the State Health Care Services Department, appeared in court Friday and said he was changing the controversial clause to bring it in line with standards set by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

As originally proposed the clause said a single person earning more than $150 a month in net income would have to pay part of his medical bills before getting full benefits. The changes raised the level to

ASKS CENSORSHIP

Hargis Attacks Liberal Senators

TULSA, Okla. (UPI)—The founder-director of one of the nation's most conservative, anti-Communist organizations Saturday called on the country to "literally repudiate" and "politically censor" four powerful United States senators.

Billy James Hargis, in his annual "state of the union" message to the 12th annual session of the Christian Crusade, said if America didn't take action against "our new left isolationists . . . we can expect to see our military alliances destroyed within the next five years and face an armed invasion coming at us from the north, east, south and west."

Fulbright is chairman of the foreign relations committee. All are strongly opposed to the Vietnam war and have called on President Nixon to bring American troops home.

"These liberal politicians of both political parties, and their liberal counterparts in church and educational circles, are America's fifth column during World War III in which we are presently engaged," Hargis said.

"Having hypocritically forsaken their former internationalist stance, the outspoken 'soft on communism' liberals push their isolationist schemes with utter disregard of the inevitable confrontation between free world forces and communist slave masters.

"Demanding that our military missions be withdrawn from Southeast Asia without a military solution, they now pressure this administration to further dishonor our NATO and SEATO commitments and call for wholesale abandonment of our military bases in the Philippines, Korea, Taiwan, and even Portgual and Spain.

"The student anarchists and dissidents merely follow the orchestration of their liberal leaders in politics, religion and education."

Hargis told a packed cathedral audience the thinking of a growing majority of Americans is "switching to the right or conservative position which demands a military solution in Vietnam and a get-tough-with-communist policy internally."

He called it "the most heartening and promising hope of this year."

"These extreme political expedient liberals who gamble for their own political aggrandizement, have had their day, and the November elections will undoubtedly indicate that, as has the recent British repudiation of the socialist regime of Harold Wilson," Hargis said.

Lobbyists Join Campaign To Break Loose Tax Deadlock

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A dozen lobbyists, representing interests ranging from oil to horseracing, having joined the campaign to break loose Gov. Ronald Reagan's deadlocked $1 billion tax shift plan.

On a separate front, the governor aided hometown pressure campaigns directed against 12 Democratic senators and one Republican who have blocked the proposal on the Senate floor only two votes away from approval.

Assemblyman William T. Bagley, chief author of Reagan's tax program, disclosed Friday that he has "asked literally a dozen legislative advocates (lobbyists) to help me round up votes in any legitimate way possible."

"We are doing everything in our power to bring the necessary pressures to bear and by 'we' I mean the governor's office, too," the San Rafael Republican told newsmen.

Included were lobbyists re-

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Landowner Beheaded

NEW DELHI (UPI)—A band of 25 Communist-led Naxalite guerrillas invaded the home of a landowner in Kerala state as his family was eating dinner, sacked the household then beheaded the landowner, the Press Trust of India said today.

The dagger-wielding Naxalites broke into the home of Narayana Nair, 63, Thursday night and robbed the house of jewelry and cash then dragged Nair from the house and cut off his head before his screaming wife and daughters, PI said. The attackers escaped into the night.

No Firing Orders

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — A Ohio National Guard investigation into the killing of four Kent State University students reports that guardsmen fired without orders but believed their lives were in danger, Scripps-Howard newspaper said today.

The newspapers said the investigation revealed there was no sniper fire as first reported by the state adjutant general S. T. Del Corso and other guard officers.

The students were killed May 4 during a campus confrontation with National Guard troops. Nine other students were wounded.

Fire Hits Subway

NEW YORK (UPI)—At least one person, a woman, was killed today and 50 to 60 passengers were reported injured in a subway fire in Manhattan's financial district.

Transit Authorities said the Brooklyn-bound train was evacuated after fire erupted at 7:20 a.m. The injured were taken to Beekman-Downtown and Bellevue hospitals.

Szell Memorial Set

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland Orchestra will perform a public memorial service Monday in honor of its conductor, George Szell, who died Thursday.

Szell 73, conductor of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra for 24 years, had beeen rated by some music critics as second only to Toscanini.

Soviets Fire Missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union has fired two intercontinental ballistic missiles into the Pacific Ocean, apparently testing a system designed to fool antimissile defenses, sources said Friday.

Pentagon officials said that the two improrved SS11 missiles were fired from deep in South Russia on Monday and Tuesday, but the officials refused to say how the firings were monitored by the United States or what the purpose of the firings was.

Second Quake Hits

LIMA, Peru (UPI)—A strong earthquake capable of causing great damage shook Latin America from Mexico to Argentina, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Friday, exactly two months after a quake of similar intensity killed more than 50,000 persons in Peru.

The quake's epicenter occurred more than 400 miles below the Amazon jungle at the sparsely inhabited juncture of the Peruvian, Ecuadorean and Colombian borders, the Peruvian earthquake observatory said.

Little damage and no victims have been reported.

Shrine For Those Killed In Toyotas

TATESHINA, Japan (UPI) — The president of Japan's Toyota Motor Co has put up a $445,000 shrine for the repose of the souls of persons killed in Toyota cars.

The shrine, a 600-square-foot building made of ferro-concrete and painted red, stands in this mountain resort community where some Toyota executives have summer homes. Inside is a statue of Kannon, the Buddhist deity of mercy.

"I have been feeling very sorry for the persons who died in traffic accidents and who might have perished on the roads in vehicles made in our factories," said Toyota president Shotaro Kamiya, 72.

He said that after years of soul-searching he finally decided to put up some money for the shrine. Toyota dealers, Kamiya's personal friends and an American oil company were among other contributors.

Residents of the neighborhood call the statue in the shrine, which is a little over three feet high, "Kotsu Anzen Kannon-Do" — the traffic safety Kannon.

There is no shortage of souls to pray for. Japanese automakers will turn out a record 5 million cars and trucks this year and the traffic death toll now runs close to 18,000 lives a year — this in a nation where cars were relatively scarce 20 years ago.

The Japanese are supposed to be a fatalistic people, but they have not yet achieved the American public's resignation to traffic deaths as a price for speed and mobility.

Families of accident victims are organizing to campaign for higher damage settlements and to force the automakers themselves to do more about safety. Most of their ideas would cost the manufacturers money.

Some anthorpologists think the ancient Japanese had fears of reprisals from the dead and there are several modern survivals of this belief.

Japanese farmers, for instance, formerly provided Buddhist funerals for cows they killed for beef. In prewar Japan, some companies held religious services for wornout machinery that was about to be junked.

Even today, tailors in Tokyo gather each year at a temple for a Buddhist mass for needles that were worn out that year and thrown away.

Syndicated Columnist Doris Fleeson Dies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Doris Fleeson, a syndicated political columnist for 25 years, died today on the 12th anniversary of her marriage to Dan A. Kimball, former Navy secretary who died just 36 hours earlier.

The reporting career of Miss Fleeson, 69, dated from the 1920s when she graduated from the University of Kansas. Beginning in 1945 she wrote a five-times-a-week column distributed by United Feature Syndicate until her semi-retirement in 1967.

Cause of death was listed as "massive thrombosis."

She was a champion of women's rights and led a battle for installation of rest room facilities in the Senate press gallery during the 1940s.

An intimate friend of the Franklin D. Roosevelt family, Miss Fleeson covered the terms of five presidents, including John F. Kennedy who wrote on a picture taken of the two of them talking on the White House lawn in 1963:

"Dear Doris: There are many presidents who can read your column, but it is only a happy few who have it delivered to them in person. Sincerely, John Kennedy."

A columnist colleague called Miss Fleeson "a great perfectionist and absolute professional. She never missed a deadline."

Born May 20, 1901, at Sterling, Kan., she took her first newspaper job for a suburban Chicago newspaper in the early 1920s. Her next was for a Great Neck, N. Y., paper, but she made daily train trips into New York City to get a job on the New York Daily News.

She finally won a job on the News as a police reporter and later established her reputation with her coverage of the Seabury political scandals in New York.

From 1927 to 1942, Miss Fleeson was Washington correspondent for the News. For the next two years she was a war correspondent for Woman's Home Companion. In 1945 she began writing her syndicated column.

She was recipient of several journalism awards, including the Raymond Clapper Award, Theta Sigma Phi Headliner Award and the Missouri Journalism Award.

Miss Fleeson's marriage to John O'Donnell, a colleague on the News, ended in divorce in 1940. They had one daughter, Doris, surviving of New York City.

On Aug. 1, 1958, she married Dan Kimball, a World War I Pilot with Jimmy Doolittle who later became Navy secretary in the Truman administration. He had recently retired as head of the Aerojet General Corp. Cause of his death Thursday has not been determined.

Kimball's burial was set for Arlington National Cemetery at 10:30 a.m. EDT. Funeral arrangements for Miss Fleeson were incomplete.

Five Killed In Head-On Crash

LEWISTON, Idaho (UPI)—Five persons died early today in a high-speed, head-on collision between a station wagon and a car 24 miles east of this northern Idaho city.

State police said the victims apparently included two teenagers and three construction workers headed for the Dworshak Dam Project on the Clearwater River.

Names of the victims were being withheld until families of the dead could be notified.

Four of the victims died at the scene and a fifth died a short time later at St. Joseph's Hospital here.

Rioters In Belfast Defy Peace Pleas

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—Rioters attacked British troops with steel-tipped arrows, bricks and bottles today in a Roman Catholic district, ignoring appeals for peace from the father of a youth shot to death by army riflemen in Friday's disorders.

Gunfire broke out early today along barricades separating Catholic and protestant districts.

A British army spokesman said troops were ordered to shoot to kill anyone throwing Molotov cocktails as shots fired by unidentified civilians rang out along Crumlin Road.

Several shots were heard along the barricaded road soon after troops moved in shortly before dawn and dispersed rioters manning the blazing barricades.

A British Marine opened fire today at a man preparing to throw a gasoline bomb. An Army spokesman said the would-be bomber fled without throwing the bomb, pursued by rapid fire shots aimed by a Marine crouched behind a barbed-wire barricade.

Six persons were arrested, a police spokesman said.

About 300 troops replied with CS nausea gas and water cannon, sealed off the area and moved in to remove the barricades while holding their fire and avoiding direct clashes

ICC Official Admits Fraud, Resigns Post

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It took H. Neil Garson 21 years to climb through the ranks to the Interstate Commerce Commission's top career post as ICC secretary. Friday, his $30,000 a year job crashed around him in a moment of tears at a congressional hearing table.

"I want to say that I did a very foolish and improper thing," Garson said through tears that blurred his glasses. His short, chunky body squirmed in the witness chair as three members of a House Commerce subcommittee, staff investigators and a small crowd of newsmen and spectators looked on in embarrassment.

Only two days earlier, Garson sat at the same table and told the same committee that several months before, he had reimbursed industry groups who had picked up his tab at their conventions. He presented the dated check stubs to prove his point.

But on Friday, dabbing his eyes with a handkerchief and speaking in a barely audible voice, he admitted that he had painstakingly rewritten almost three months of stubs in an effort to disprove subcommittee charges he was guilty of accepting money from the ICC-regulated rroups while in at least one instance accepting government expense money.

reputation, without having the counsel, I prepared substitute check stubs," Garson said softly.

"These later prepared stubs were for the purpose of supporting a date of payment which I believed, and still believe, to be correct, but for which I have no written record. The actual check was one out of my wallet and not from my check book."

Almost as an afterthought, he said, "It is my intention on Monday to tender my resignation as secretary."

Rep. Torbert MacDonald, D-Mass., acting subcommittee chairman, said Garson's action could open him to perjury charges and a contempt of Congress citation.

"It is obvious Mr. Garson lied to us under oath," MacDonald said.

In a sworn statement introduced before Garson's admission, Miss Norma L. Iser, executive secretary of the Association of Interstate Commission Practitioners, said that Garson offered to pay hotel bills which the association had picked up and asked her to backdate receipts for the payments.

Miss Iser said Garson gave her between $200 and $300 and asked her to date a receipt back to Jan. 1, 1970. She said the offer was made on June 11

PETER PALMER finds Francine York a surprisingly affectionate hostess at what he thought was to be a square gathering in the "Love and the Wild Party" segment on "Love, American Style," Friday at 10 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

New Faces Join Danny

There will be at least two new regular faces on "The Danny Thomas Show," which comes back in the fall after an absence of several seasons, this time to the ABC network, where, incidentally, the original long-long-run series started life and almost expired in its first season, being rescued by transfer to CBS.

The new faces will be Rosey Grier, former pro football star who has the role of accompanist to night club entertainer Danny Thomas Williams, and Michael Hughes, playing Danny's six-year-old grandson. Time does march on. Back will be such familiars as Marjorie Lord as Mrs. Williams, Angela Cartwright as their teen-aged daughter, Rusty Hamer as an adult son, wonderful Hans Conried as Uncle Toonoose and Sid Melton as the nightclub owner.

ALL OF A SUDDEN, A TIGHT SQUEEZE

Motorists through Sausalito are often surprised as they head North on Bridgeway from downtown to find the wide, two-lane street narrow sharply into one tight lane for a few hundred feet, then blossom into two lanes. According to City Engineer Norman Wohlschlaeger, the bottleneck will be eliminated as soon as the Northwestern Pacific Railroad takes steps to grant a city request for an easement west of the present narrow strip of road, between Easterby and Olive streets. Until the railroad acts, he said, the city is trying to lessen the hazard by leaving open a planned city island to create what amounts to a second emergency lane. (Independent-Journal photo)

July Classified Ads Hit Record 38,018

The Independent-Journal last month set a record in the number of classified advertisements.

During July, 38,018 advertisements appeared in the I-J's classified columns, reported Carl R. Lehman Jr., classified advertising manager. This exceeded by nearly 700 the former record of 37,349 classified advertisements in one month, set in July 1965.

Ten years ago, the July total was 21,964, Lehman noted.

"This represents the confidence of the people of Marin County in the I-J and in its ability to supply their needs and help them dispose of items they no longer want," said Lehman. "It also testifies to the result-getting power of I-J want ads, due to the penetration of the market by the newspaper."

Advertisements placed by private parties in the I-J "want ad" columns outnumber those by commercial firms about 4-to-1, he commented.

Marin's 'James Bond' Fired From Post

I - J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Sausalito's "James Bond" has been fired as night head of San Francisco's Juvenile Hall for "questionable judgment."

Kenneth Theodore Chelton, 41, who received mail at his 370 Ebbtide Avenue apartment under the fictional British spy's name, was dismissed Wednesday because he was arrested for possessing a machine gun, because he was involved in a brawl and because the Internal Revenue Service has placed a lien on his salary, Robert Botka, chief juvenile probation officer, said.

Botka said Chelton would not be reinstated even if he is found blameless. "The basic charge against him was being intemperate and getting involved with the police so often," said Botka who held disciplinary hearing July 15 in which the charges were made.

Chelton's problems began April 13 when Sausalito police, responding to complaints, found him lying in a pool of blood in his apartment badly beaten with an Aztec war club.

Investigating the brawl, police found a machine gun and charged him with illegally possessing it although he said it belonged to a roommate.

Less than a week later tax collectors filed a lien against his wages alleging nonpayment of taxes.

Puppetry Group Sets Plays In San Rafael

The Puppet Government, a Marin puppetry group, will present performances of humorous puppet plays at two playgrounds in San Rafael next week.

Performances are scheduled at 2 p.m. Monday at Hartzell School playground and at 2 and 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at Albert Park.

Public Presentation Of Novato Study Set

The first public presentation of the downtown Novato study prepared by consultants Sedway and Cooke will be made to a joint session of the Novato City Council, planning commission and downtown study committee at 8 p.m. Monday at Hill Junior High School.

The study, begun in 1968, makes comprehensive recommendations on the structure and development of a downtown section of Novato to solve present problems and assure future development.

Acquisition by the city or by a specially created private corporation, closely guided by the city, of more than 100 acres of downtown Novato and building a major shopping center are recommended in the report.

Other recommendations concern housing, parking, streets and business development other than the center.

The downtown area contemplated in the report is largely west of the future Highway 101 bypass, south of the proposed Atherton Avenue - Highway 101 interchange and northeast of Novato Boulevard.

The name Oahu, capital island of Hawaii, means "the gather place" in Hawaiian.

Freedom Lovers!

You enjoy the freedom from all those exterior chores. Somebody else does the work as you do lazy things like loafing around the swimming pool or club house. What a life! You don't even have to lift a hand to care for the pool, never cut or water a lawn or paint the outside of your home.

So ingeniously has its space been utilized, that structures cover only about 20 percent of the land, making possible the large professionally landscaped areas . . . yet not one home is stacked on another, and more than half are single story homes.

It represents the modern approach to living by combining the best features of home ownership with the carefree features of the finest apartment dwelling.

And don't let the price fool you. Extensive research and planning have resulted in a superior home where you will be proud to live today and tomorrow.

We have many more exciting things to tell you about ecology and economics; more about freedom too! That is, if you have the time now.

Hub Superintendent Search Down To One

San Anselmo School District trustees have narrowed selection of a new superintendent to one candidate, but it may take an unusual effort to find out if he will be the man ultimately selected.

Board president Elmer A. Weden Jr. said today he and another board member are considering a trip into California's mountains this weekend to question the applicant, now on a backpacking vacation.

"We have narrowed the field to one, " Dr. Weden said, "but that doesn't mean we have tentatively selected a superintendent."

Weden said two board members have some "reservations" about the man who is the last of 60 applicants still being considered for the position following the board's closed session yesterday. Weden would not disclose the candidate's identity.

He added that the remaining three trustees, including himself, are satisfied with the man's qualifications, "but I will not vote in favor of him if any board member still has serious reservations."

A new superintendent is being sought to replace Stephen L. Parodi, who is stepping down to serve as assistant superintendent in charge of business administration.

Should Weden and the other board member reach the applicant tomorrow, the board president said he would arrange a public meeting of the board with the candidate on Monday.

Linda Denies Life-Saving Manson Story

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Linda Kasabian, the witness whose testimony could send Charles Manson and three young women to the gas chamber, was asked Friday if she was telling the story of the Tate-LaBianca slayings to save her own life.

"I'd give my life if none of this had happened — for the people who were killed," she said.

In an emotional exchange with Fitzgerald, Mrs. Kasabian admitted she knew she would be granted immunity from prosecution if she told the story of the seven slayings.

Fitzgerald asked if she knew what might happen if she did not testify for the prosecution. She said she presumed she might be prosecuted herself.

"Do you understand what the penalty is?"

"Yes, the gas chamber."

"Are you testifying in order to save your life?"

"I'd give my life if none of this had happened—for the people who were killed."

Earlier she told Fitzgerald she "felt like a blind little girl in the forest and I took the first path that came to me" when he asked if she considered herself still impressionable, naive and innocent when she came to the Spahn Ranch.

She said she "loved Charley" when she first joined the family and she thought of him as a "messiah. . . the second coming of Christ."

Fitzgerald asked her how many girls were at the ranch when she first came there and she replied there were about 20.

"Did he divide his time equally among them?"

"Not equally."

"Did some get more attention than others?"

"Yes."

"Were you one of them?"

"At the beginning I was. He would talk with me and tell me about his philosophies and make love to me."

"How many times did he make love to you?"

"Four times. Once in the cave, once at the waterfall, once in the trailer and once in the house."

"Why do you remember them?"

"I don't know why. They just stick in mind."

Fitzgerald asked when she made love to the other men at the ranch.

"I can't remember the dates," she replied. "I eventually got around to making love to all of them."

Mrs. Kasabian testified that Manson talked with her at length about his philosophy, parts of which she said she did not agree with. But she said she never questioned Manson because "the girls told me that everything he did and said was always right."

the men after their capture and said they would be referred to the Marin district attorney's office for possible prosecution on escape charges.

It was the first major attempt at a prison break at San Quentin since New Year's Eve in 1969, when six inmates tried to escape with a makeshift rope. The prisoner's were caught when the rope snapped on the prison's south wall.

In January 1967, four condemned prisoners failed in a escape try after sawing their way out of cells.

TAXES

presenting oil companies, manufacturers, Los Angeles County and horseracing, Bagley said.

In exchange for support of race track interests, he said he agreed to use one of his own bills as a vehicle to give the horseracing industry a $13.5 million revenue break.

"I'm using every bit of legislative strength that I have, including the assistance of any legislative advocates who I can ask to help me if they have some particular friends in the Senate," he said.

"This is the norm," he said. "It's par for this kind of course" in seeking to overcome "deliberate, overt obstructionism" of the 13 intransigent senators.

Bagley agreed to use a minor technical bill he was carrying and accept the race amendments in the Senate Governmental Organization Committee which increased from 14 to 16 per cent the take-out of each dollar bet at the tracks.

Of the additional annual revenue produced, $6 million would go to the tracks, $5.5 million to horse owners and breeders and $2.1 million to the state.

The horserace bill had no direct connection with the stalled tax revision programm

"It's not a deal," Bagley said. "It's not a quid pro quo. A good dozen legislative advocates have been helping me — not as a transaction but as a courtesy."

He said that representatives of the horserace industry and officials in the State Department of Finance agreed months ago that "the industry needed an economic shot in the arm" He said he was told that the "industry is making less than 5 per cent on their money."

Meantime, Reagan assistants reported details of the measure, aimed at shifting $1 billion away from the property tax in the next four years, were provided to Republican State Senate candidates and local county officials for use as ammunition against the holdouts.

Included is veteran Republican Sen. Clark Bradley of San Jose who voted against the program because he said it unfairly required sales taxpayers to finance relief for property taxpayers.

"We are making every attempt to make sure that we can get the word out as widely as possible who the people are that are holding up the bill," said George Steffes, the governor's legislative secretary.

"And that goes for everyone of them, including Clark Bradley," Steffes said.

He said in Bradley's case Santa Clara County officials were provided with "impact" details about the package and now supported it. But in the case of Sen. Walter Stiern, D-Bakersfield, his election opponent was handed the information.

Steffes said that Bill Park, the Republican nominee for Stiern's seat, "has requested and received from us complete information on the impact of the tax bill and is making it a major issue in the campaign."

Stiern led the Democrats Friday in redeclaring their opposition to the program. Bradley issued a separate statement recommending his opposition "based on principles and not on politics."

One feature of the bill, increasing the state sales tax from five to six cents on the dollar, was to have taken effect today and would have provided $1.3 million daily.

Bagley said the measure will be "adjusted" to compensate for that loss and reported that another vote on the bill probably would not be attempted Monday unless the impasse broke suddenly.

Big Search For Victims Of Kidnap

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (UPI) — Police and soldiers sealed off the Uruguayan capital today and raided suspected hideouts to search for Latin America's latest political kidnap victims, an American diplomat with a bullet hole in his chest and a Brazilian envoy abducted before the eyes of his wife and child.

Two other Americans nursed sore heads inflicted by pistol whippings during frustrated kidnap attempts.

Authorities announced one arrest in the massive manhunt but withheld comment on the kidnapers' demand for release of fellow terrorists in exchange for the captive diplomats.

The government urged a "war against sedition" in the wake of Friday's quadruple assault by the Tupamaro terrorists.

"At the moment we're making raids and taking advantage of tips," Interior Minister Antonio Francese, Uruguay's chief of security, said early today.

He appealed to the people to join the search and warned of "severe measures" to combat terrorism in this nation of 2.5 million.

The kidnap victims were identified as Dan Mitrione, 50, of Richmond, Ind., a U.S. aid mission police adviser who is the best informed U.S. official on terrorism here, and Aloysio Mares Dias Gomide, 41, Brazilian consul in Montevideo.

The two who escaped their assailants were Gordon Jones, 27, of San Luis Obispo, Calif., U.S. Embassy second secretary, and Nathan Rosenfeld, 48, of Herkimer, N.Y., the cultural attache.

Jones, bound and bleeding from head injuries, flung himself from beneath a blanket onto the pavement while his abductors' car was traveling through a working-class district of Montevideo.

Rosenfeld, who was also bleeding from head injuries, fought off his kidnapers in an apartment building garage.

Mitrione's car was rammed by a pickup truck while he was en route to work and six men with machineguns and revolvers leaped out and grabbed him.

Witnesses did not report shots but the kidnapers said later Mitrione was shot in the chest during the assult.

Dias Gomide was taken from his home in the presence of his wife and three-year-old son by 10 armed men who gained entry posing as a telephone repair crew.

Rosenfeld and Jones were jumped in the garage of Jones, apartment house by Tupamaro gunmen. Rosenfeld fought free and ran for help. Jones was forced into the car from which he later escaped.

Authorittes announced the arrest of Sergio da Rosa Silveira, 24, an agriculture student suspected of participating in the attack on Jones and Rosenfeld.

A Tupamaro communique demanded "immediate release of political prisoners to be identified opportunely in exchange for the freedom of diplomatic officials detained by our organization."

Car Crashes Into Building, Driver Killed

NEW YORK (UPI)—A man driving a large car on the sidewalk at high speed crashed into an apartment house in lower Manhattan Saturday, shearing a support beam that caused part of five floors to collapse.

The driver of the car was killed instantly and at least eight residents of the 100-year-old apartment building were injured.

Witnesses said the car mounted the sidewalk a block from the apartment building at 137 Forsythe Street, hit a fire plug and broke it off, knocked down a maple tree, ripped an apartment house bannister and then crossed the street and crashed into the building.

Residents who were outside the house said the car was traveling "on the sidewalk at a high rate of speed." The car exploded in flames when it hit and the crash brought the corner of the brick building down, exposing living rooms and bedrooms and throwing some residents to the street below.

Five Nabbed After Sale Of Weed

Five persons were arrested in San Anselmo yesterday following the sale of 20 kilos of marijuana to narcotics agents.

New Base Store Building Begins

Construction of a $894,800 base exchange store across the street from the commissary near the north gate of Hamilton Air Force Base is underway, with completion expected in mid-November, the base information office reports.

Profits from the base exchange are financing the construction.

nist guerrillas had blown up a bridge on the northern side while a large Communist force in the Prey Kong jungle blocked the southern entry. Hundreds of residents were fleeing the town, he said.

"No reinforcements can get in," he said. "It is hopeless to defend."

Lt. Col. Mon Cheng, commander of the Kompong Chnang military district said 30 recruits defending Pralay Meas surrendered or fled in an attack Friday by some 100 Viet Cong guerrillas.

"The Communists are attempting to drive their way south of Kompong Cham," a Mekong River provincial capital 30 miles due east of Skoun, the spokesman said. He said the Communist attackers appeared to be fresh troops well equipped with 120mm rockets and 82mm mortars.

The heaviest attacks were reported around Kompong Thom, the important communications center which has been under siege for weeks. The commander there reported the Communists "are attacking from every side."

Cambodian troops supported by tanks and armored cars, in the meantime, swept down Highway 4 linking Phnom Penh with the nation's only deepwater port of Kompong Som in an effort to reopen the highway over which the capital gets much of its supplies and fuel.

The Communists cut the roadway three days ago after siezing the Kirirom Plateau, 56 miles west-southwest of Phnom Penh. Cambodian commanders were in the process of sending reinforcements to the counter-attack against the plateau.

$158 a month, as required by federal standards.

Levels were changed correspondingly for persons with dependents.

The regulations also included one which brought 150,000 persons into the full Medi-Cal program for the first time. Previously, they only received partial benefits. The CRIA did not dispute this change.

A spokesman for the department said all the changes, many of which were administrative, would result in a savings of $7 million the first year. As originally offered they would have saved the state $9 million.

Brian said telegrams were sent to all county welfare administrators informing them the regulation is take effect today.

Despite his change in the controversial revision, Brian said he did not agree with the federal formula. He said the maintenance need formula of HEW was "being misinterpreted in Washington."

"But in the interest of saving the system and to avoid confusion among the medically needy, we are willing to raise the income formula a few dollars for each person."

At a public hearing in June, Medi-Cal recipients vigorously opposed the changes affecting the 50,000 persons.

Abdel Nasser called an emergency meeting of the Arab Socialist Union's higher executive committee today. The committee, Egypt's highest policy making body, will study Egypt's next move in relation to the Israeli acceptance of the plan.

In Amman, a spokesman for the Arab guerrilla central committee said, "the Israeli decision does not affect us.

"We are not bound by any agreement and we shall continue to escalate our attacks."

"The Commandos will keep fighting until full liberation (of Palestine)," the guerrillas said.

Guerrilla leader Yassir Arafat told thousands of Palestinian demonstrators in Amman Friday, "the Palestinian revolution is determined to liberate all of Palestine. We will fight the war with all our strength."

Syria, the Sudan and Iraq led the opposition in the Arab world to the American peace plan.

Authoritative sources in Washington said today two of the four Egyptian MIG21s shot down by Israeli planes over the Suez Canal Thursday were flown by Soviet pilots.

The sources could not say what happened to the downed Soviet pilots. An Israeli announcement Thursday said the three pilots were seen parachuting out of their stricken craft over Israel territory.

Housing Shortage Solutions Offered

To ease what has been described as a critical housing shortage, Marin should protect older homes from commercial takeover, allow more prefabricated homes, open up second floors of shopping centers as living units and even permit single family homes to add living units or convert garages.

These recommendations are made in a housing report entitled, "Countywide Initial Housing Element," prepared by the county planning department for the city-county planning council.

The council will receive the report at its meeting at 8 p.m. Aug. 6 in the planning commission chambers at the Civic Center.

Albert Solnit, chief of advance planning, said local action must be taken on several fronts to ease the housing shortage. Recommendations made in the report include:

1. Raise income ceilings and remove residence restrictions for the leased public housing program.

2. Require each new private housing development to have some low income units, through local regulations and review.

3. Provide elderly housing in locations such as over central city parking lots and second stories overlooking shopping centers.

4. Encourage more moderate income homes through density bonuses, planned unit zoning and support of nonprofit developers.

5. Use surplus public lands for housing, allow prefabricated housing, and open mobile home parks to families with children.

6. Protect older homes near business districts by zoning so that they will not be razed for commercial use.

7. Provide tax rebates to low and moderate income homeowners through new legislation.

8. Seek federal urban renewal funds.

"A radical idea, but nonetheless worth exploring, is to allow some single family homes to add a second unit or to connect the garage for use by the elderly," says the report.

Marin Bridge Players High In Tournament

Marin County bridge players captured several near-tops yesterday on the first of a three-day tournament at the National Guard Armory in Santa Venetia.

In the men's pairs, Court Smith and Ian W. Miller, both of San Rafael, took second overall, behind Fred Carpenter and Frank Fee of Berkeley.

Harry Lees of Greenbrae and James Myers of Kentfield were third overall, and James F. Price of San Rafael, teamed with Leslie H. West of Oakland, came in fourth overall.

In the women's pairs, Mildred Mazza of Greenbrae and Marguerite Tognoli of San Rafael took third overall, followed by Shirley Smith and Janet London of San Rafael. Marie Marcelli and Sandra LeVine of San Rafael placed sixth overall.

First overall in the women's pairs went to Jeanie Salvato of Glen Ellen and Jackie Portoian of San Bruno.

In last night's mixed pairs, Alan Hewett and Augusta Stillson of San Rafael were the top Marin performers with a sixth overall. Ruth Bertauche of San Rafael, teamed with Ron Von Der Porton of San Francisco, captured a section first. Winners of the mixed pairs were Buote Madave of Walnut Creek and Mrs. J.E. Mitchell of Orinda.

In the evening junior event, Jay and Marilyn Segal of San Rafael captured first overall, followed by Ronald and Maureen Studen of San Anselmo.

Many other Marin players won points by placing in their sections.

Play resumed this afternoon and a two-session open pairs was scheduled for 8 p.m.

The tournament, hosted by the Marin unit of the American Contract Bridge League, will wind up tomorrow with a double session team-of-four event.

Side games are scheduled for each afternoon and evening session.

Narcotics Charges Dismissed For Four

Assorted narcotics charges against four persons arrested in a Jan. 23 drug raid in Fairfax were dismissed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court, at the request of the district attorney.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said a principal witness in the case was not available to testify. The charges were dropped against Carl Romona Victoria Gomez, 25, accused of possessing amphetamine; Richard William Snyder, 35, possessing amphetamine and marijuana; Lynda Louise Jupp, and Alec Arthur Jupp, both 26, charged with possession of pot and amphetamine as well as a hypodermic needle.

Two Teen Suspects Face Juvenile Court

Two teen-agers accused in the July 16 burglary of a San Rafael liquor warehouse have been accepted for further action in juvenile court.

Donald Albert Johnson, 18, and Jack Llewelly Keith, 19, both of Corte Madera, and a companion, Donald George Riley, 17, of Tiburon were arrested by police outside the Trobetta Liquors warehouse. Riley was processed through Juvenile Hall.

Hub Man Guilty Of Ring Theft

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A San Anselmo man has been given a six-month suspended jail term and placed on two years' probation by Municipal Court Judge Charles E. Goff for stealing an expensive diamond and emerald ring from a San Francisco home on June 9.

Kenneth S. Grove, 37, of 356 Redwood Road, pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of petty theft. He had earlier been accused of grand theft.

Irate Taxpayers Plan Questions

Candidates for public office in November will be asked to answer written questions prepared by the Irate Taxpayers of Marin.

Philip Maley, recording secretary of the group, said a committee was formed at Thursday night's meeting of the Irate Taxpayers to formulate the questions.

He said the questionnaire will allow voters to grade the candidates on their answers.

The group will not meet in August, Maley said, and the next meeting will be at 8 p.m. Sept. 24.

Reed Trustees To Study Budget

Reed School District trustees will consider adoption of a 1970-71 operating budget of $2,284,046 Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Del Mar School.

The board will also hear a report from Interim Supt. Stanley H. Friese on organization of sixth, seventh and eighth grade programs at Del Mar and Reedland Woods schools.

Friese said trustees will meet in closed session at 4 p.m. Tuesday with members of a screening committee to interview two candidates for the post of superintendent.

Suspected Molester Hearing Scheduled

Preliminary hearing for Ronald Paul Rowell, 23, of Novato, accused of molesting several small girls in Novato, will be held Aug. 13 in Marin Municipal Court.

Authority On Harbors Feted On Retirement

Paul L. Vredenburg of Sausalito has retired as the most honored employee in the history of the San Francisco District of the Army Corps of Engineers.

During a 33-year career, which he completed as chief of the construction-operations division, Vredenburg's awards included the meritorious civilian service medal, six consecutive annual citations for outstanding performance, a citation and plaque from the postmaster general and numerous commendations from congressmen and Army officials.

In 1968 he was the lone nominee for the national civil service league career service award.

In California, he has been commended by a Senate resolution marking his retirement.

A civil engineer and authority on harbor development and maintenance, Vredenburg has represented the United States at numerous international conferences and served as consultant for South American harbor work.

He supervised recovery operations in Northern California following the floods of 1964-65 and has been involved in flood control work.

Hearing Is Continued On Tear Gas Charge

Preliminary hearing for Gary Lee Yoder, 24, of San Francisco, on a charge of carrying a tear gas device has been continued to Aug. 14 in Marin Municipal Court.

Yoder was arrested July 4 in Inverness for speeding, then charged with the felony after a search of his car turned up a tear gas device he said he had bought for self-protection.

Cable TV Firm To Ask Added Fees

A cable television company will ask the San Rafael City Council Monday to vary requirements attached to its operating license so that the company can start charging for services in the city.

The ordinance which granted the licenses to Tele-Vue Systems outlined a five-phase plan for wiring cable service to San Rafael.

According to the license, the company cannot charge for service in areas outlined by phases two through five, until all of the phase one area is served.

The company says that while much of the service has been installed, forces beyond its control prevent 100 per cent service, and is asking the license requirement be waived.

The council will consider the request at its 8 p.m. meeting.

A request from the county for an additional $8,110 for the city's share of a $56,219 joint powers agreement for the installation of traffic signals and channelization at Freitas Parkway and Las Gallians Avenue will also be considered. The City has already budgeted $20,000 for the project.

Drinking Water's Nitrates Attacked

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

SAN FRANCISCO — Nitrates in drinking water may be a far greater health risk than previously suspected, an Israeli scientist cautioned yesterday.

Dr. Hillel Shuval, who headed a study of the problem by Hebrew University in Jerusalem, reported findings of a connection between high nitrate counts in drinking water and an increased incidence of the blood disorder in infants known as "blue babies."

He noted with concern that nitrate levels were growing in drinking water supplies around the world and predicted that health authorities will have to reevaluate currently permissable limits.

ers.

Nitrates commonly come from sewage and industrial wastes and chemical fertilizers.

Shuval, professor of environmental health in the department of medical ecology at Hebrew University, disclosed his findings at the International Water Pollution Research Conference, of which he is vice president.

He said a study of the fetus of a pregnant laboratory animal had found evidence of methemoglobinemia, known as "blue babies," after experiments with nitrates.

Shuval stressed that the extent to which the findings can be extended to humans was unknown, but later noted that an unexplained high incidence of the disorder apparently has been found in areas where drinking water has as low a count of nitrates as 18 parts per million.

The nitrate limit in drinking water in California and throughout much of the world is 45 parts per million, which is recommended by the United Nations World Health organization.

Shuval reported that laboratory study found indications that a subclinical or chronic form of the disorder may exist in infants in areas having excess nitrates in drinking water.

In an aside, he noted that fresh spinach can contain up to 3,000 parts per million, and that the federal government's limit on nitrates in hot dogs is 200 parts per million. Neither should be fed to infants up to about six months of age, he suggested. Older infants apparently are less likely to be affected by nitrates, he said.

Shuval's warnings were seconded by Dr. John Goldsmith, chief of the California's environmental epidemiology unit in the state Department of Public Health. In a joint news conference with Shuval, Goldsmith said the current limit of 45 parts per million "perhaps should be even stricter."

He noted that the detergent industry, facing complaints about water pollution from phosphates in detergents, was considering changing its products to a nitrate base — which may pose a human health problem in place of the problem phosphates are to aquatic life.

Goldsmith said that only three of the 1,000 community water systems in California have water far exceeding the nitrate limit of 45 parts per million. They are at La Sierra and Home Gardens in Riverside County, and Delano in Kern County. The highest county is at La Sierra, with a county of about 90 parts per million, he said.

But some 100,000 persons in California live where the drinking water has a count of over 45, he said.

He estimated that only 2,000 cases of the disorder throughout the world since 1945 have been traces directly to nitrates in water, but added that the actual number probably was far higher because it is not a reportable disease.

Nitrates also may affect pregnancy, the two men acknowledged. Cattle eating grass with high nitrate content tend to abort, Dr. Goldsmith said.

"Our problem is to set a reasonable standard," he said.

Six Of Marin Make College Dean's List

Six students from Marin have been named to the 1970 dean's list at Lone Mountain College in San Francisco.

Named were Sister Mary Flynn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Flynn, 749 Hilary Drive, Tiburon; Gay French, 120 Bulkley Street, and Dorothy Hillman, 215 Main Street, both of Sausalito; Maureen Hunter, 502 Tamalpais Drive, Homestead Valley; John Lennon, 60 Marinita Drive, San Rafael, and Mary Ramsaur, 78 Calypso Shores, Bel Marin Keys.

Dairymen Organize To Combat Pollution

Dairymen of north and west Marin have formed an advisory committee to cut down on pollution of streams that feed into Tomales Bay and San Pablo Bay.

Donald Meisaac of Tocaloma heads the committee called the Marin County Farm Bureau Environmental Control Advisory Committee. Other members of the committee are Wilson D. Beebe, Al Poncia, John Duggan, Clarence Rogers, John Zimmerman, and county farm advisor Donald L. Brittsan.

The purpose of the committee, said Beebe, is self regulation by the dairymen themselves. In the past, state fish and game officials and sanitation officials have contacted each property owner individually whenever pollution was suspected. Hereafter, such complaints will be turned over to the committee for self-regulation.

Beebe, who was fined $100 last year for allowing manure to pollute Olema Creek, has installed a $9,000 pit and pumping system on his Olema ranch to keep pollutants away from the creek.

Beebe said the pollution problem will be handled by the newly formed committee of dairymen, but the county should do something about the flooding that occurs where Olema Creek feeds into Papermill Creek, between Shoreline Highway and Bear Valley Road. Beebe leases about 200 acres from James Lockhart in that area.

"Every year I've spent about $150 to $200 for the past eight years to clean up the debris to prevent flooding," said Beebe. "I asked the county to open up the creek so that water won't go all over the flats, but the county has done nothing."

Albert Lindelli, superintendent of the road crews for the county department of public works, explained that the county has no funds to go into private property to clean up creeks. "Under the county's ordinance, each property owner is responsible for cleaning creeks on his own property."

Beebe agreed that the land is private. "But doesn't the county own the water?" asked Beebe. "Its gotta be somebody's water."

A sensitive human eye can discern more than 10 million colors under ideal conrritions, says the National Bureau of Standards.

Bay Area Cities' Car Thefts Down

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Car theft was down significantly in the first half of 1970 in three Bay Area cities, the National Automobile Theft Bureau reported today.

Theft was reduced 25.7 per cent in Oakland, 21 per cent in San Francisco, and 19.3 per cent in San Jose.

There were still many autos stolen, however—2,379 in Oakland, 6,022 in San Francisco, and 1,055 in San Jose.

The bureau, sponsored by insurance companies, attributed the reduced rate to "the vigilance and efficiency of our police."

Doctor Really Knows The Fury Of A Woman

WASHINGTON (UPI) — By his own count Dr. Edgar Berman has treated thousands of women over the years and developed strong views about what ails them. Now he knows first hand about a woman's fury.

He quit the Democratic party's national priorities committee Friday for the "good of my party and my best friend," former patient Hubert H. Humphrey. Berman did so with a blast at Rep. Patsy Mink, D-Hawaii, in particular and the women's liberation movement in general.

"I've never said women are inferior to men," Berman told a news conference. "They're different." He added, "The difference, I think, is a credit to both sexes."

On learning of Berman's resignation, Mrs. Mink said, "Dr. Berman brought this whole incident upon himself. I did not release any of the correspondence or the transcript. I am glad he saw fit to resign."

At a committee hearing April 30, Berman said he felt the decision-making powers of women in high office might be affected by their menstrual period or menopause. The statements drew wrathful replies from congresswoman Mink, 42, and woman's lib. They said he was prejudiced against women and ought to resign.

"During the hearings, I engaged in what I consider light banterk with congresswoman Mink. She obviously took it otherwise," Berman said in his statement Friday.

"Then 60 days later for some strange reason in a stern letter, she demanded my expulsion from the committee. I answered her more kindly — at least in tone.

"As a physician, I reiterate my scientific position that women are different physically, physiologically and psychologically, regardless of politics — medical or otherwise."

Berman said, "I believe in women's rights, equal opportunity and equal pay. I do not believe that marriage is a matter of rape and peonage. I don't think prostitution is the greatest profession.

"I believe woman's greatest job is to bring up the next generation well, well-motivated, responsible, intelligent and decent."

But he stuck by his opinions expressed last April:

"All things being equal, I would still rather have had a male John F. Kennedy make the Cuban missile decisions than a female of similar age . . ."

Hearing In Attack Case Is Thursday

A preliminary hearing for a Fairfax ex-convict, charged with attacking a San Rafael woman with a sawed-off .22-caliber rifle only days after getting out of jail on a forgery conviction, will be held Thursday in Marin Municipal Court.

Robert Wayne Kitzmiller, 34, was refused release on his own recognizance when he appeared before Judge Peter Alelh Smith in municipal court yesterday for hearing on bail and setting of the preliminary hearing.

Kitzmiller is charged with possession of an illegal weapon, with being an ex-felon in possession of a weapon, with brandishing the rifle in an alarming and threatening manner, and with the gun. He was arrested that night in his home.

MUSICAL DIVERSION

Connecticut Concert Battles Drug Crisis

MIDDLEFIELD, Conn. (UPI) — Rock music reverberated across the ski slopes of Powder Ridge today in an attempt to divert an estimated 30,000 young people away from drugs. A physician predicted a "drug crisis" unless more medical supplies arrive.

The canceled rock music festival was on again to some degree as medical personnel and others pleaded for music to distract the crowd.

Abruzzi Friday predicted a drug crisis today "if we don't get more staff. We're getting more kids in here every hour and I think it is building."

Abruzzi said he had treated 800 or 900 "bad trip" drug cases, "far more than at Woodstock," and added, "In a crowd this size, you could expect 200 bad trips at the most."

"These kids are really flipping out," the doctor added. "It's a question of how much the kids are entertained," Abruzzi said. "The more you frustrate kids, the more you give them a hard time, the more they're going to resort to drugs."

Two bands played off stage Friday night, using generators for the amplifiers. Another rock group plugged in their equipment to the ski area's power supply.

The festival was banned by a Superior Court order earlier this week and later upheld by the State Supreme Court. But the young people flocked to the scene anyway.

The ski area has only two toilets, and the 100 portable toilets brought in for the gathering began to overfill, posing a health problem.

A Superior Court appearance was postponed until Monday for owners Louis and Herman Zemel and sound specialist William Hanley, arrested Thursday on contempt of court charges because the crowd refused to leave the scene.

Abruzzi urged the young people to stay out of "Powder Puddle," the small lake between the twin ridges of the ski area. Several thousand bathers, many nude, took advantage of the cooling waters Friday.

In New York City, festival producer Alan Sheer announced the concert would be moved to Yankee Stadium Aug. 22 -23, but later stadium officials said they had decided against it because "the complexities of transferring the Powder Ridge concert to the stadium render it impractical."

Louis Zemel discounted the drug problem at the site. "That it is increasing I'm not aware of," he said. "I would guess the drug culture exists all over the country . . . This is typical of the drug culture."

At a news conference Friday night, Zemel said "We are walking a tight rope and the stakes are very high."

Farm Labor March Heads For Salinas

WATSONVILLE, Calif. (UPI) —Cesar Chavez and his followers marched today toward a battle with the Teamsters Union over the right to represent farm workers in the Salinas Valley.

A three-day march which attracted about 100 persons in the early stages ends today with a rally at Salinas, where Chavez plans to move the headquarters of his United Farm Workers Organizing Committee.

The labor leader announced the move from Delano, where he won his long struggle to organize grape vineyards this week, to this vegetable growing area at a rally attended by 500 farm workers Friday night.

During the day, his backers marched from Hollister, Greenfield, Gilroy and Aptos toward Salinas. Many of those on the trek were union organizers and workers. They sang Spanish songs and waved the union's flag.

The Teamsters this week announced they had reached agreements with growers in the Salinas and Santa Maria valleys to represent their field hands. Chavez denounced the agreements as "sweetheart contracts" and vowed "all-out war" against the Teamsters.

He called Friday night for settlement of the dispute by a secret ballot election between the two unions.

Senate ABM Critics Will Fight Expansion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Contending that two existing antiballistics missile sites give President Nixon an "ample bargaining point" for the Strategic Arms Limitations Talks with the Soviet Union, Senate critics of the safeguard ABM have decided to fight any expansion to new locations.

The bi-partisan bloc, which came within a vote of killing the ABM last year, reluctantly agreed not to interfere with continued development at Malmstrom, Mont., and Grand Forks, N.D. — two sites authorized in 1969.

But they rallied around an amendment, which they feel will "attract the broadest possible support" that would forbid a proposed expansion to Whiteman AFB in Missouri and Warren AFB in Wyoming.

Sens. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., and John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., revealed the group's strategy Friday when they outlined their amendment to the $19.2 billion Military Procurement Act which contains funds for an expansion of the ABM to Whiteman and Warren.

Although a recent UPI poll showed 49 votes for such an amendment, Hart said, "Neither side should prudently claim victory at this moment."

In contrast to last year's debate which lasted a month, Hart and Cooper agreed that a final vote could come within a week.

Chairman John C. Stennis, D-Miss. of the Senate Armed Services Committee, indicated supporters of the ABM also wanted an early showdown.

In a speech coupling the ABM with other proposed changes in the bill, Stennis said, "the disposition of the various amendments should not require an inordinate amount of time because the issues will be clear cut; most of the information is already well known. The same issues were debated last year."

The amendment's sponsors indicated that the SALT talks played a key part in the group's decision not to press for a total ban on ABM work, with the exception of research and development.

In a brief speech in the Senate, Cooper said that if the Senate approves the amendment, Nixon would retain "ample funds for a necessary bargaining position" at the SALT talks. He said continued development and deployment at Malmstrom and Grand Forks would serve as an "ample bargaining point."

Hart said some senators were "persuaded by the President's request that the Senate not deny him the ABM" at the SALT talks in Vienna.

Matson Will Curtail Far East Freighting

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Matson Navigation Company announced yesterday it is discontinuing freight service to a number of major Far Eastern ports.

The company said its "feeder" service to Inchon, Taiwan, Manila and Hong Kong would be discontinued as soon as possible and that service between California and Japan also will be suspended as quickly as possible.

M. H. Blaisdell, Matson president, said the decision to suspend service indefinitely in both areas "was made after a comprehensive study of future prospects showed that continued operation of the services was not justified."

Steal Laundry Coins

About $20 in quarters was looted from two coin boxes of Bay Coin-Op Laundries at 173-175 Novato Street, San Rafael, between midnight and 8 a.m. Thursday, police reported.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Teenagers Concerned About War, Hunger, And Pollution Can Help

DEAR HELEN:

People may think this sounds funny, but I sat down and cried the other night. About what? Well —

1. The men being killed in Vietnam.

2. The civilians being killed in Cambodia and Vietnam and other places all around the world.

3. The children that don't know why there's a war, and yet they die or are crippled.

4. The starving people in the world.

5. The campus disorders and the students who are dead and the parents of those students.

6. The anger between the white and black people.

7. The hate and confusion in the world today; the ugliness of pollution; the fear of the future.

Helen, I'm only 15 but I'm aware of our problems and I know the rest of the youth are too. We know we'll have to face them, and try to solve them. I wish there were more organized groups where young people could really get involved in working toward answers. I want to learn all I can so when the time comes, I'll be ready. And maybe right now I could join with others to help race relations and the fight against poverty, etc. — CONCERNED TEEN

DEAR TEEN:

If you're the leader type (and I think you are), why not organize a Junior Active Club in your town? Find a Service Club to sponsor you,and seek out projects where volunteer work is needed.

A good start. Locate a misused stretch of public beach or parkland and get busy. Haul away the trash, clean out old bottles and cans, make it shine. In the process you'll earn publicity that will bring more members to your group.

There are numberless ways active young people can help in community affairs. But they need leaders who will inspire the interested and not get too discouraged by the drop-outs. How about it, Teen? Are you concerned enough? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

Here is my version of What Is A Neighbor?

A neighbor is the person down the street who finds out you'd like to earn money so she asks you to babysit, and then recommends you to her friends.

She is the person who helps you learn to sew when you need a summer wardrobe.

She's the one who rushes out and buys the right earrings for you so your newly pierced ears won't get infected.

She is the life saver who sees you sitting on the front porch on a hot night, and tells you to get in the car because "We're going to the Dairy Queen."

Give a guess at who is a second mother and best friend to everyone on the block: That's my neighbor. — M.M.

P.S. If you print this I'm going to tape it to her door.

DEAR M.:

I wouldn't miss.

. . . And if I know "best neighbors," she'll cry a bit, then invite the whole kaboodle of you in for homemade doughnuts. — H.

SEW SIMPLE

No Pull Up With Proper Fit

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I have found that when I make my dresses or have them made by a dressmaker, they pull up when I raise my arms and stay up unless I pull them down. I use a half-size pattern. Could it be that the waist isn't long enough?

MRS. A. McL.

DEAR MRS. A. McL.:

I am inclined to think that perhaps the bodice is too long from the shoulder to the waist and consequently, your dress doesn't slip down where it belongs on your hips. If you are extremely short waisted, you must watch the area just below the waist and be sure it is large enough to permit the garment to slide down easily with no pull or strain. If your garment fits correctly in this area, there is no reason for the dress to stay pulled up when you raise your arms.

MRS. RAYMOND DeWit, Pella, Iowa, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following sewing suggestion:

"When making a circular poncho which has hit the fashion scene with a bang, mark the circle on the wrong side of your fabric. Then, using the wide zig-zag stitch of your machine, stitch on this marked line. Next, cut just to the outside of the zig-zag and you will eliminate any bias stretch. The cut edges may be finished with a double edge braid or purchased fringe. They can be made in a matter of minutes and look just as professional as the purchased ones for only a fraction of the cost."

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I love using your fabric conversion chart but recently, I have noticed that so many knits are 68 to 72 inches wide. The chart doesn't include this width. How would we go about converting this width to our pattern?

MRS. N. E. McL.

DEAR MRS. N. E. McL.:

You must always count on one length for your dress, depending on the width of the skirt, perhaps you will also have to add the sleeve length. If your garment has an unusual neckline or is double-breasted, that too will require extra yardage.

I shall give you only one example: If your skirt measures 50 inches at the hemline, and has six gores, you must add a minimum of 12 inches to the original 50 inch width for the seams and the extra width needed at the cut edge of the hem. This would take us up to 62 inches and if your fabric was only 68 inches in the beginning, you can be sure it won't be wide enough to include the sleeves.

Use good judgment when deciding to cut down on the amount of fabric you purchase. Sometimes buying a few extra inches can prevent going back and purchasing an extra yard because you lacked those few inches. No fabric shop would purposely oversell you fabric. They all want you to come back as a happy customer, so try to have a little respect for their judgment.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I must attend a formal dinner in the near future and need help. My gown is sleeveless with a matching, lightweight stole of the same fabric as the gown. Do I wear the stole during the dinner and dance which follows? Also, must I wear long gloves? The neckline is rather scooped. Do I need a necklace or jeweled trim on my dress?

MRS. N.S.

DEAR MRS. N.S.:

The area where you live has much to do with the questions you have asked. Also, the degree of protocol when it comes to formal occasions. A stole is very difficult to wear gracefully, especially while eating. It is usually carefully arranged and the minute you relax, it isn't as attractive. For this reason, I wouldn't consider wearing it while eating or dancing. As to long gloves, in my part of the country, short, wrist length gloves are considered proper for the most formal occasions. The only exception perhaps would be the gloves worn by young girls at the most formal balls. However, even in this case, short gloves are proper.

The treatment of the neckline and the jewelry you wear is very individual. Just try to look your most beautiful and no overdo with too much detail that would detract from you or the gown you will be wearing. Always remember, you'll only look beautiful if you feel comfortable and you won't feel comfortable if you're dressed to the teeth when you're not used to it.

MRS. NORMAN LANQUIST
The former Gisela Contreras

Chilean Lady Visiting Area

Many Independent-Journal readers will be interested to hear the latest news of the former Gisela Contreras, now Mrs. Norman Lanquist, who was a protegee of a group of Sausalito women for more than four years.

As a young student from Santiago, Chile, Gisela, nearly blind herself, came to this country to finish her education in rehabilitation and counseling of the blind. The group in Sausalito became interested in helping her as a result of their interest in Sausalito's sister city program in connection with Vina Del Mar.

Mrs. Earl G. Thompson of Sausalito, with whom Gisela lived part of the time, reports that Gisela and her husband and 14 month-old daughter, Lennea, have been visiting her friends in the Bay Area and his parents in Grass Valley.

After receiving a master's degree in teaching the handicapped from San Francisco State College, the remarkable young woman taught one year at the Berkeley School for the Blind. For the past year, the Lanquists have been living in Safford, Ariz., where he is teaching English in a junior college.

When the community learned of Gisela's special training, they established a center for retarded adults, and Gisela is now in charge of that center.

Purses No Problem

When women shop for fall and winter clothes, there is one department in which they will have no problems at all —the handbag department.

The National Handbag Association advises that for the longer skirts there are new elongated handbags suspended from long handles and little clutches held in the hand.

There are even some that combine the two effecsts: little clutches with long skinny handles that can be wrapped around the wrist for a short look or slung over the shoulder for the elongated north-south effect.

WOMEN ASK WOMEN

Fight Whatever Is Oppresive On Suffrage Day Aug. 26

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If groups fighting for women's liberation have their way, here's what you may see on Aug. 26, the 50th anniversary of woman's suffrage:

Housewives won't cook, sew or wash dishes; secretaries will wear slacks instead of skirts; others will strike or stage a work slowdown, and some mothers will take babies to the father's office to have him baby sit.

Stores will be devoid of women except for clerks forced to work. Presumably some women will refuse to wear bras, walk through doors held open by males, take a seat offered them on a bus or wear anything that smacks of the latest in fashion.

Part of that, at least, is the dream of Darby Costello, secretary of the Washington chapter of the National Organization for Women.

She is calling for women nationwide to use that day to free themselves of "whatever is oppressive in their lives." She used a news conference Thursday to exhort women to "demonstrate against continuing discrimination and subjugation of women to inferior supportive roles."

"We're calling on housewives, secretaries, professionals, women in poverty and students to cease doing on Aug. 26 whatever is oppressive in their lives. We're asking for a strike, a sick-out or a slowdown. We're also advocating a total consumer boycott as strong objection to the consumer role that essentially exploits women."

Miss Costello said coalitions of women's groups are being formed in 36 cities to dramatize the inequality of women.

As Miss Costello announced the plans of women, Dr. Edgar F. Berman, a personal physician to former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, shrugged off criticism and refused to budge from his contention women are inherently limited in leadership potential.

"I stumbled on a hornet's nest," Berman said, "and I am nursing the stings." He had said on April 30 that the decision-making powers of women in high office might be affected by their menstrual periods or menopause.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Being Able To Accept Old Age Depends On Personality Type

Our population explosion may be due to the increasing number of older people rather than to our rising birth rate. Nineteen million people make up this age group, and millions more will join them as our senior citizens live longer as a result of better health care. But since life is not free of problems, the majority of oldsters must adjust to the physical, emotional, amd mental changes that come with each passing year.

How a person adjusts to aging depends upon his basic personality when he was young. According to Wilma Donahue, Ph.D., writing in The Care of the Geriatric Patient (C.V. Mosby Co., St. Louis), individual characteristics are intensified, and the oldster exhibits his innermost traits.

SHE CITES a study involving male workers, 55 to 84 years of age, in which five different pedsonality types were identified. Each had a distinct pattern of adjustment to growing old.

THE FIRST was the mature personality. These individuals entered their declining years with a constructive rather than an impulsive or defensive approach.

THE NEXT group had an armored personality with a well-developed defense against anxiety. The first two types needed activity to maintain their zest for living.

THE ROCKING chair personality was found in men who preferred to take it easy and lean on others. These individuals thrived when let alone and as the two previous types, made a satisfactory adjustment to the aging process.

THE LAST two types characterized individuals who adjusted poorly. One was the angry hostile man who blames others for his frustration. The other was the self-hatef who also is angry but blames himself. We have very little to offer these individuals, although they might be happier if they understood why they believe life is so cruel.

COCKTAILS NOT FOR DIETER

A reader writes: I read somewhere that a person who drinks liquor cannot reduce. Will you please tell me why?

REPLY

It is difficult to imbile and reduce too. Alcoholic drinks are loaded with calories. In addtiion, many persons lose their will power after a cocktail or two and go overboard on eating. On the other hand, chronic alcoholics lose weight because they neglect to eat.

HEPATITIS IS CONTAGIOUS

Mrs. C.S. writes: Is hepatitis the condition that makes your skin and eyes yellow? Is it contagious?

REPLY

Hepatitis is one cause of jaundice and it is contagious. The disease is passed along via contaminated food or drink and in this respect is not so contagious as measles or mumps.

DIET AND ANGINA

T.A. writes: Will a bland diet help a person with angina pectoris?

REPLY

Only if his heart condition is aggravated by gas, indigestion, or an irritable colon. Overeating may bring on chest pain, but food per se does not cause anginal attacks or make them less frequent.

PROTEST MARCH — To the surprise of campaign people inside, ten social workers picketed Gov. Ronald Reagan's soon-to-be-opened headquarters in San Rafael yesterday. They were protesting the governor's welfare policies.

PROTESTING REAGAN

Social Workers Hold March

Ten Marin social workers marched in front of Gov. Ronald Reagan's headquarters in San Rafael yesterday to protest the governor's welfare policies.

The marchers carried placards that read:

"Governor shifting many of state taxes to county taxpayers."

"Reagan Slogan — Hurt The Handicapped, Cut Aid to Disabled, Blind and Retarded."

"Social Workers Don't Terrorize, Reagan Does. The Truth Hurts."

"Reagan's Welfare Economy Cuts Actually Cost You Money."

The marchers, all members of Social Workers Local 535, AFL-CIO, were led by Gerald Fisher, representative to the state executive board of Local 535, and William H. Schutt, president of the Marin Chapter of the Social Workers Union.

"We are marching for the county taxpayers of Marin and the Marin Board of Supervisors," said Fisher. He noted the supervisors had filed a suit against the state to halt a new system of auditing that would increase Marin's burden of welfare cost.

The new system would cost $21 million to counties statewide, said Fisher. He also complained the governor's program on intermediate care would shift aged and disabled in convalescent hospitals to boarding homes, lowering the quality of care and transferring the cost burden from state and federal sources to the counties.

Schutt claimed the governor also is trimming the work incentive program, which means reduced training for mothers and more people on welfare.

"Most importantly, what we are marching against is the governor's failure to admit that these are false economies, and it is he who is responsible for the fear that he is creating and not Social Workers Union 535," Fisher said.

Reagan had accused social workers of "terrorizing" needy recipients by ordering their aid stopped after the governor announced plans to slash welfare spending by $25 million by cutting back attendant care for the blind, aged and disabled. Reagan rescinded the $25 million cut, however.

His San Rafael headquarters, at Fourth and D streets, has not been formally opened for the November campaign.

There are no signs or literature, and workers were still painting desks in preparation for opening in about two weeks.

Mrs. William P. Gage of Belvedere, Reagan chairman for Marin, said they had no advance notice of the social workers' march. "We knew nothing about it. They just suddenly appeared.

Hearing Set In Sausalito Barrier Case

Sausaltio tobacconist William Thompson, charged in connection with Sausalito's controversial Bridgeway barricade, is to appear again Thursday in Marin Municipal Court for further hearing on his demand for prompt jury trial or dismissal of the complaint against him.

He and Sausalito hotel owner Harold Hobbs were arrested July 13 while allegedly destroying some of the city's planter boxes.

The bearded, sailor-garbed Thompson yesterday told Judge Peter Allen Smith he wants to get it all over with so he can return to the East Coast where he formerly lived. He has been serving as his own attorney.

Attorney Sol Abrams, representing Hobbs, argued that the two defendants should have separate trials.

He suggested that the district attorney inspect the reports on the case, and might then want to dismiss the charges against Thompson.

"If the matter is as trivial as you say, it is not going to have two juries," Judge Smith declared. In ordering Thompson to return Thursday, Judge Smith said that if the charges are pressed by the district attorney, Hobbs' attorney will be notified and arrangements made to consolidate the two trials for an early date.

Fairfax Churches Announce Selection Of Joint Pastor

The Fairfax Community and St. Augustine Episcopal churches which have for the past several years been ministered by one pastor under the same roof will be able to continue the unique program, it was announced this week.

Without a pastor since April, the congregations have selected Rev. Steven H. Knight as resident pastor of the joint membership of some 200 families.

Knight, who is currently on the staff of the Department of Urban Ministries with the Episcopal Diocese of California, will deliver his first sermon at both services tomorrow.

He will succeed Rev. Richard N. Wilmington who resigned to accept a post with the Episcopal Diocese in San Francisco.

REV. STEPHEN H. KNIGHT
Accepts Fairfax posts

Knight, 37, a native of Detroit, received his theological training at the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass. Prior to his Bay Area post he served in a number of positions in Massachusetts and Michigan.

Recently he has been engaged in special studies and programs dealing with urban problems and working in local and state penal institutions. He is the author of many articles, the most recent concerning rehabilitation of prisoners in the Detroit House of Corrections.

He and his wife and two children currently reside in Mill Valley.

Finn Is New President Of Lutheran Body

Juva succeeds Dr. Fredrik A. Schiotz of Minneapolis, president the American Lutheran Church. The retiring president has headed the LWF since its Fourth Assembly in Helsinki seven years ago.

The Finnish clergyman was elected on the first ballot, defeating Bishop Fridtjov Birkeli of Oslo, 66-year-old head of the (Lutheran) Church of Norway, by a vote of 148-to-59. The election was held last week.

FIRST CONTEST

It was the first contested election for the presidency in the 24 year history of the federation, a global organization which has 82 member bodies in 44 countries with a combined constituency of more than 53 million.

The election procedure differed from that of past assemblies. Previously a single slate of nominees for president and Executive Committee was presented by a nominating committee.

The method was widened under pressure from youth and other delegates.

No additional candidates were nominated, although some younger delegates had indicated earlier their support for a 48-year-old Indian layman, Dr. Kunchala Rajaratnam, a professor of economics at the University of Madras.

Observers said the decision not to nominate the Indian churchman stemmed in part from a belief by youth supporters that his candidacy might reduce the vote for Dr. Juva and might eliminate him as an Executive Committee nominee.

ONLY 14 SHORT

The 207 votes cast in the presidential election were only 14 short of the 221 delegates registered.

Both Juva and Bishop Birkeli were suggested by the nominating committee.

Widely traveled, Juva has a varied background in academic fields, the ecumenical movement, and youth activities.

He was graduated from the University of Turku, Finland. He then pursued post graduate studies at the University of Helsinki and was awarded doctorates in both theology and philosophy.

He was ordained by the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Finland in 1944 and two years later pursued studies at the Lutheran Seminary in Gettysburg, Pa.

Juva is a former general secretary of the Finnish Student Christian Movement, a member of the Executive Committee of the World Student Christian Federation, and past president of the Finnish National Union of students.

He frequently has voiced belief that the church should be actively engaged in the world, particularly in local environments. At a press conference prior to the elections, he said the church has a special responsibility to influence those in power to change socio-economic patterns which produce discrimination and widen the gap between rich and poor.

Nun Invades Madison Avenue

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI)—First there was the Singing Nun, then the Flying Nun — now there's the Madison Avenue Nun.

She's Sister Mary Elizabeth Fitzgerald, a member of the Congregation of Notre Dame and her salary is $10,000-a-year at Doyle, Dane Bernbach, one of the country's top advertising agencies.

But you won't find her producing television commercials or mapping newspaper advertising strategy. Sister Mary Elizabeth is teaching a Job Opportunities in the Business Sector (JOBS) class at the agency and her salary is turned over to her religious community.

"Most of the people here just call me Mary Elizabeth," she said, smiling and relaxed in a conference room, neatly feminine in a knee-length brown and white print dress, and sleekly bouffant hairdo.

The 33-year-old nun had been at her new job less than a month and so far had encountered no problems connected with her religious vocation.

She teaches a class of 10 black and Puerto Rican students, ranging in age from 19 to 43, the five basics —math, science, social studies, grammar and literature —that they need to pass the state's high school equivalency test to receive a diploma.

Her students go to school from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. From 2 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. they work in various departments of the ad agency and are paid a basic $90 a week.

JOBS is a joint government-business program in which hard core unemployed are given the chance to continue their education while working, with private industry and the government splitting the tab. The program is part of the National Alliance of Businessmen, an attempt by the private sector to help solve poverty problems.

Sister Mary Elizabeth is well-qualified for the work. A native of Waterbury, Conn., she attended Fordham University, received her Master's at Columbia University, taught in Catholic schools in Providence, R.I., Stamford, Conn., and in the Bronx in New York City, and for the past four years was principal of St. Jean's High School in Manhattan.

"I had asked to do work with high school dropouts," she said, "and when I found out about this it seemed very much the type of program I was interested in.

"This was sort of a growing attitude with me, seeing the great lack in education for these people and being convinced that some of us should be addressing ourselves to that problem."

Sister Mary Elizabeth explained that "Three years ago we were given the option of moving into contemporary dress or keeping the habit. Most of the community adopted contemporary dress while the older people tended to keep to the habit.

"Up to just this June we were only allowed to wear blue, black or grey suits. Now we can wear any color, dresses as well as suits."

She said that only a few other members of the Congregation of Notre Dame —a teaching order —were involved outside the Catholic community, but she said of the other sisters:

"I think they're glad; that they think this is the direction in which things will be moving. They're very interested and wondering what it's all about.

"Our role as Christians is to be aware of the needs of society and if at all possible to try to meet them. Do we need changes in the schooling of the religious? Definitely, yes.

"What I'm doing now is very interesting, I need a different approach to help the people I'm meeting now who are radically different from the people I'm accustomed to meeting in our schools. We have to be flexible enough to adapt to that.

"Some people think of the religious in terms of the habit and things like that —but that's external. The new rules about dress can only swell the number going into this type of work. The young people in our community will move in that direction.

"At this point young people may see a discrepancy between what they want to dedicate their lives to and what the religious are doing. There is no doubt that the number of girls going into religious life has fallen off very greatly in the last four or five years. Perhaps that would change if they saw religious people convinced and fired up to answer the needs of society."

Sister Mary Elizabeth said she had some personal adjusting to do in dealing with her dropout students who have much making-up to do in their six-month courses to gain high school diplomas. She said what they lack in knowledge they often make up in interest, but still:

"They dropped out of school anywhere from the 8th grade to the 10th or 11th —but often that was many years ago. The oldest in my class is a 43-year-old woman with a wide range of interests but it has been a long time since she went to school. And very often the reading skills of my students are well below the grade level they achieved.

"As a teacher you have to draw on different types of experience and resources than in an ordinary school. Take vocabulary —you think you've given a simpler explanation of something but some still don't understand and you have to move to all sorts of things to draw meaning."

To those who would raise an eyebrow at a convent-dwelling nun wearing street clothes and working in an advertising agency, she said: "I really don't think it matters what I'm wearing or the fact that I'm teaching here. What matters is attitude and conviction —and what you're doing in the world."

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI)—There was a 29 per cent increase in the number of Assemblies of God missionaries between 1959 and 1969 and the total of the denomination's appointed missionaries now stands at 1,018, in 82 countries, the Rev. J. Philip Hogan, executive secretary of the Assemblies of God foreign missions department reports.

In a review of the church's mission activities for the past decade, the Rev. Hogan also reports there are 91 overseas Bible schools run by the denomination, currently attended by more than 3,000 potential church leaders.

In addition, 15,537 national workers already are engaged in Assemblies of God ministry to their own people.

Both Sides Stick To Guns In Pro Football Battle

By United Press International

There still don't seem to be any signs that the National Football League Players Association is weakening in its pension plan strike against the owners.

The training camp gates were open for the second straight day Friday but defensive back Jim Hudson of the New York Jets, who's coming back from an injury, was the only established veteran to break ranks.

Hudson and linebacker Mike Curtis of the Baltimore Colts, who entered camp on Thursday, are the only established veterans who've defied the Association.

If the players hold firm, it'll probably mean the majority of the exhibition games scheduled next weekend will have to be canceled. The only game that seems certain to be played will be the Hall of Fame game in Canton, Ohio, between the Vikings and the Saints. It will amount to a rookie game if the veterans don't report but Jim Finks, general manager of the Vikings, said, "We feel an obligation to the Hall of Fame to have a game."

If the players can remain together, they will force the owners into the position of having to make the next move.

But the owners seem just as militant as the players are as the stalemate continues.

Paul Brown, the Cincinnati coach, said, "If the pre-season games are cancelled, it is a new ball game. Our position at this point would be to withdraw the owners' offer because of the change in the financial structure of the clubs."

The owners have been making money on the exhibition games since many of them have been played before capacity crowds. But the players have been annoyed because their pay for the exhibition games is so low.

When Hudson joined the Jet camp to join Curtis as the only established veteran officially working out, Hudson said, "I'm not reporting because I want to defy the Players Association, it's for my own good. I'm coming off a knee injury and need the time to work. I've been working out three times a week to bring the knee around and to have access to the therapy I need to recover."

An incident in Pittsburgh showed how sharp tempers have become in the dispute. The Pittsburgh Press reported that Steeler lineman Joe Greene spat at its football writer, Pat Livingston, last week because Livingston criticized the players in his column.

Livingston ignored the incident when Steeler vice president Dan Rooney assured him that Greene regretted the action. But then Greene told a reporter Thursday that he had "no regrets" and "might do it again if it wouldn't hurt the team."

That comment prompted Press editor John Troan to write an editorial claiming the paper will file a lawsuit if Greene does it again.

"If Greene persists in expectorating his sentiments, he can expect to find himself in a court of law the next time he assaults any Press employe—even if the employe is as forgiving an individual as Pat Livingston. Joe Greene is old enough and big enough to act as grown up as he looks," Troan wrote.

No Contest! Chiefs Bowl Over College Stars

Montreal's Case Of Baseball Heresy

There is an accepted form for almost every human endeavor. You lift a pinky to drink tea. The man leads while dancing. You don't wear evening gowns before nightfall. Chasing foxes is as much a ritual as a High Mass.

Sometimes, primitives misunderstand. We all have seen shots of native chieftains wearing stovepipe hats, or you find head huntsmen wearing breech cloths and admirals' coats with epaulets.

Baseball is our solemn rite of our society,too, and there is a form and ceremony to be observed. Evvets Field was its cathedral, its prelates lined the bleachers, and its cult ran more to the inquisition than the more helpful kind of correction

Wearing Captured Tuxedos

It grieves me to report that the newest entry into big-league religion, the Montreal Expos, are like naked tribesmen wearing captured tuxedos, guys with glasses just because they think they make them look watches unable to tell time by them, or wearing eye-distinguished.

Ron Fairly, the outfielder-first baseman who used to play for the Dodgers, an old, established parish in the religion, was commenting on the heresy gleefully the other night.

"Why," he said proudly, "I got a standing ovation for a pop-up one night! A POP-UP!" He added: "I got polite applause for STRIKING OUT!"

Gene Mauch, the manager, assented "I saw them sit there in 30-degree weather — and the park isn't covered. And we got beat, like 11-0, and NOBODY went home, and NOBODY threw anything! You know, when the other team is at bat, I can WHISPER to my pitcher. When our team is at bat, I have to shout to the man next to me. They cheer everything we do. You don't have to earn it. They line up as we leave the field after a loss and say, 'We'll get 'em next time, boys!'In two languages."

Missionary Work Called For

Clearly, some missionary work is called for. I must hie myself up to Jarry Park, in Montreal, bone up on my French 'til I know a "voltigeur" is an "outfielder," and an "interieur" is an infielder and a "circuit" (pronounced "sir-coo-ey") is a home run.

I propose to watch as a Montreal voltigeur swings lustily at a curve ball and misses. Then, I shall tap the "habitant" next to me. "What is that?" I shall ask. "That?" he will reply. "That was a pretty darned good curve. Mack Jones did his very best to hit it and didn't miss it by much." I shall shake my head sadly. "No," I intend to say, "that was a pitch your grandmother grandmother could hit, ya dum-dum! Why'd you bother to bring a bat if you were just going to stand there?' "

One night, I am reliably informed by Montreal's could hit. Now, repeat after me: 'That was a pitch my Bob Bailey, Juan Marichal shut out the Expos. The reaction of the town was pride. "Well," the refrain went, "he's a $100,000 pitcher and we almost beat him. If we could have got any runs off him, we might have."

I intend to treat this schism firmly, to sit next to a man in a beret and cigaret stub the next time Marichal pitches. As he mows down the side, I shall lean over and say, "I suppose you think there's nothing they can do with such good pitching, eh, mon vieux?" When he agrees, I shall straighten him out: "No, cochon! What you were meant to say is, 'He hasn't got a thing out there, you pimples, you excuses for baesball players! What's the matter, are you all hung over?"

When the Montreal pitcher is getting racked, and some fan gives a gallic shrug and says, "What do you expect, Atlanta is a very heavy-hitting club?" I intend to correct him. "Henri, what you should say is, 'Hey Mauch, get that tub of lard outta there, this isn't batting practice! I've seen better pitchers with lemonade in them!"

My ambition is to go to Montreal some night and hear some fan with the cords in his neck sticking out, screamnig at the home team in French, and I will tap the man next to me and say, "What'd he say?" and the man will sigh and answer, "Well, it loses something in the translation, but it comes out something like, 'Call yourselves a ball team? You look like the opera Comique to me! I seen better arms on Venue de Milo! What's the outfield posing for — statues? Whyn't ya ship 'em all to the Louvre? What's that pitcher's first name — Alice? Did ya get that infield outta the Yellow Pages? This team couldn't get in the World Series with a broom! And if that catcher didn't pay to get in, too, I want MY money back. And you otta put that first baseman out of the park for interfering with a ball in play that somebody might have caught.' "

Only then will we have true believers, full-fledged members of the baseball faith in Canada.

Dawson Passes Pace 24-3 Win

By ED SAINSBURY

CHICAGO (UPI) — Either the Kansas City Chiefs' offense or defense could have beaten the 1970 College All Stars Friday night.

Together they overwhelmed the collegians, 24-3.

Even the one-sided score doesn't tell the whole tale.

This was a pro team with barely a week's practice under supervision under its belt.

It was also a team which elected to quit at the final gun of this game to wait upon a settlement of the pension dispute between the National Football League owners and its players.

Yet Len Dawson, a truly grand pro, stuck in there and completed 17 of 21 passes for 153 yards, one a 36-yard touchdowner to Frank Pitts.

Dawson's passing also set up a 43-yard field goal by Jan Stenerud, the Norwegian-born soccer-style place kicker who converted after each of the Chiefs' three touchdowns.

THREE INTERCEPTIONS

The Chiefs' defense intercepted three All Star passes, returning them a total of 80 yards. Jim Kearney picked up 65 of those yards when he hauled in a Mike Phipps pass and brought it back for a touchdown. A Willie Lanier interception set up a three-yard scoring run by Warren McVea.

All of this happened in the first half of the game, when the Chiefs rolled up a 24-0 lead. Thereafter they were conservative and Dawson said, "There wasn't any sense in giving them something by taking chances."

The surprise of the game to the Chiefs, coach Hank Stram said, was not what the Stars did, but what they did not do. "We expected them to show us the shotgun or the open gate offense," he said, "and we practiced against it. But they did not do anything they didn't do last year."

EIGHTH DEFEAT

Otto Graham, who took his eighth defeat in 10 games as All Star coach, wouldn't detract from the Chiefs' performance, but he complained that lack of scrimmages for the All Stars, "hurt us tremendously," because the offense couldn't perfect its timing.

Graham said the defense did "pretty well." Stram, too, was impressed with the All Stars' front men on defense. "They were big and strong," he said.

The game attracted 69,940 fans, but many of them left second half kickoff while the Chiefs had a 24-0 lead. The rain continued throughout the third period, when the Stars got their only points on Mike Delaney's 29-yard field goal.

SEVENTH STRAIGHT

It was the seventh straight win for the pros in the All Star game and their 26th in 37 contests.

Despite the victory, the future was uncertain for the Chiefs. The players obtained permission from the National

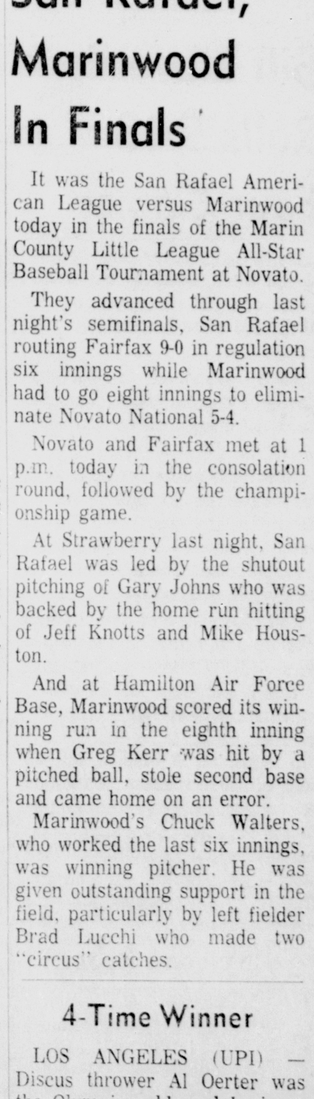
THIS DAY IN SPORTS



San Rafael, Marinwood In Finals

It was the San Rafael American League versus Marinwood today in the finals of the Marin County Little League All-Star Baseball Tournament at Novato.

They advanced through last night's semifinals, San Rafael routing Fairfax 9-0 in regulation six innings while Marinwood had to go eight innings to eliminate Novato National 5-4.

Novato and Fairfax met at 1 p.m. today in the consolation round, followed by the championship game.

At Strawberry last night, San Rafael was led by the shutout pitching of Gary Johns who was backed by the home run hitting of Jeff Knotts and Mike Houston.

And at Hamilton Air Force Base, Marinwood scored its winning run in the eighth inning when Greg Kerr was hit by a pitched ball, stole second base and came home on an error.

Marinwood's Chuck Walters, who worked the last six innings, was winning pitcher. He was given outstanding support in the field, particularly by left fielder Brad Lucchi who made two "circus" catches.

4-Time Winner

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Discus thrower Al Oerter was the Olympic gold medal winner in his specialty at the 1956, 1960, 1964 and 1968 Olympic Games. He won the 1968 medal at age 32, says Rheingold Sports Bureau.

A's Back In Pennant Race

By JOE SARGIS

OAKLAND (UPI)—Manager John McNamara, on shaky legs less than a month ago, now has his Oakland A's playing the kind of ball he always expected, so he isn't the least bit surprised they are in the race again.

"We've always had the personnel, so it shouldn't come as any big surprise we are winning," McNamara said Friday night after his A's rallied from behind in the seventh inning to defeat the Washington Senators, 5-4.

McNamara didn't mean to sound like he was boasting. Far from it. He knows the A's still have a long way to go to catch the front-running Minnesota Twins. But after winning nine of their last 10 games in their best showing of the year the A's today are only seven back in the American League West.

"I've said right along we had a good club," McNamara added. "It was just a matter of playing to our potential. Now, I feel we have a good chance, especially since we have 11 games left with the Twins. If we can let a little closer before we play them again, we could make a good race out of it."

Ted Williams, who sat by Friday night and watched his Senators blow a 4-0 lead, agreed the A's are a solid club with a good chance to win.

GOOD RACE

"I'd like to see them win," said Williams, "because I'd like to see a good race. The A's certainly have the potential."

Giants Get Double Lift In Sweep Over Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (UPI — The sagging pitching staff of the San Francisco Giants has been given a big lift.

Not only did Juan Marichal win his second straight game Friday night, but Frank Reberger added an unexpected near-distance job in the nightcap for a doubleheader sweep over Philadelphia, 8-3 and 7-2.

Marichal, looking even better than he did last weekend in beating Montreal, fired a masterful six-hitter and went the full nine innings to improve his record to 5-9.

He fanned five batters and did not walk a man while mixing his large repertoire of pitches in the clever fashion which had made him the ace of the San Francisco staff until 1970.

EARLY TROUBLES

Not until the season was halfway over did Marichal regain the strength and coordination he lost in an early season bout with injuries and illness.

After six 20-game seasons and a grand total of 191 victories in 10 years, Marichal's current season had been a big letdown. Now he appears to have regained his old form.

Reberger, rifled from the mound both as a starter and reliever throughout the season, pulled the surprise of the night by nearly firing his first complete game in the majors.

The tall righthander went 8 2-3 innings and let Don McMahon get the final out with the bases jammed in the ninth. The victory upped Reberger's record to 3-4. He allowed nine hits and five walks.

HITTING STAR

The hitting star of the twinbill was Ken Henderson. The switch-hitting outfielder raised his average from .306 to .320 by cracking seven hits in eight trips, scoring three runs, driving in five and stealing a pair of bases.

Henderson's 12th homer of the year, a three-run blast, was

49ers Sign Ex-Stanford Kicking Ace

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — Braden Beck, a former kicking star with Stanford who has been attending dental school the last three years, signed his first pro contract Friday with the San Francisco 49ers.

Beck was one of the greatest kickers in Stanford history, booting a school record 17 field goals in two seasons. He was graduated in 1965 and spent the last three years at the University of California at San Francisco studying dentistry.

His addition gives the Forty Niners 34 rookies in camp. The veterans, of course, are still missing because of the player strike.

Author Jim Bouton Gets Farmed Out

HOUSTON (UPI) — Author-pitcher Jim Bouton, optioned to Oklahoma City by the Houston Astros, said Friday night he did not think he was sent to the minors because of his controversial book, "Ball Four."

"I probably would have gone quicker if it hadn't been for the book," the straightforward Bouton said a few minutes after being notified of the move.

"I probably stayed up here longer because they wanted to bend over backwards to show people they weren't going to worry about what I had written," he said.

Bouton's book, which came out in June, told of clubhouse and hotel room incidents which were considered too sacred to be written by those in baseball. It included some unflattering things about Houston manager Harry Walker.

Bouton said the way he was pitching he deserved to be optioned. He had a 4-6 record with a 5.42 earned run average.

"If my ERA was under three, I'd be doing some kicking and screaming," he said. "But it's over five."

To replace Bouton, the Astros brought up southpaw Wade Blasingame, a onetime bonus boy with the then Milwaukee Braves who was sent down by the Astros last winter after a poor season with Houston.

Blasingame, a hard thrower, has an 8-2 record with 3.03 ERA and has struck out 95 in 101 innings.

Bouton said he thought if he did well, he would be brought back up by the Astros. He'll be able to start his climb quickly because he's scheduled to start tonight for Oklahoma City.

HAZELTINE MAY TRY COMEBACK IN NEW YORK

Matt Hazeltine, linebacker 14 years for the San Francisco 49ers, may come out of retirement to join the New York Giants.

Hazeltine, 36, former Tamalpais High School star now living in Los Altos, retired before the 1969 season but said yesterday he probably will accept a one-year contract offered one month ago by the Giants.

"I enjoy playing pro football," Hazeltine said. "I'll give it another try. I feel in relatively good shape."

Casper Protege A Good Student

By STEVE SMILANICH

HARRISON, N.Y. (UPI)—Sophomore pro John Miller of San Francisco says the only difference between him and Billy Casper — besides the million dollars in golf earnings — is the fact "I think I can win but Billy knows he can."

Miller, a 23-year old protege of Casper's who has yet to win his first tournament on the pro golf tour, will get a chance to put his positive thinking to a test today when he tries to hod off the challenge of Casper and others in the third round of the $250,000 Westchester Classic.

The former Brigham Young University player, on the tour for only 14 months, forged a one-stroke lead Friday with a sparkling five-under-par 67 which left him with a 36-hole total of 136

Hot in pursuit of Miller were third year pro Larry Hinson of Douglas, Ga.; Jim Jamieson of Miline, Ill.; Mike Ballo, a club assistant pro from Stamford, Conn.; and John Schroeder, son of former tennis great Ted Schroeder, all at 137.

OLD PROS

While the younger pros were dominating the first two rounds, the established stars such as Casper, Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, were positioned to overtake the leaders.

Casper, with six-under-par 66 in Friday's rain-delayed third round over the 6700-yard, par 72 Westchester Country Club course, was only three strokes off the pace in a group of 139s. That group also included Jack Nicklaus, defending champion Frank Beard, Phil Rodgers, Tommy Jacobs, Gene Littler, Tommy Aaron, Grier Jones and Jerry McGee.

The low 70s and ties survived the cut. Those just making the even par 644 cutoff included Dave Hill, fifth leading money winner on the tour.

Casper, who has always been a strong booster of Miller's, observed: "I told him it wasn't going to be long before he won a tournament.

HOW TO THINK

"I try to help him when I can, particularly on how to think on the course," Casper added.

Miller, who has won $31,541 during his brief stint on the tour compared with Casper's $1,053,459 career earnings, had five straight birdies in the middle of his round and may have done better had the downpour not stopped play. He took his only bogey on the par three 16th hole, putting out even though the green was flooded.

The confident Miller has promised a go for broke effort in the final two rounds.

EXPERIENCE EDGE

"I'm young and I don't have anything to lose. If I choke they'll just say that's what they expect of me," he said.

But Miller added, "You can't beat experience. Even if I play Casper on Sunday, he'll outthink me by four strokes."

Casper birdied seven of the last 10 holes in his superlative round of 66. "I was just getting warmed up. That's more putts than I sank in the previous 90 holes," said the Bonita, Calif., golfer—who is noted for his putting ability.

While noting improvement in Miller's play, Casper isn't quite sure the youngster is ready for victory. "This is the type of course where a lot of young players can shoot low scores but when it comes to the final day, you have to go along with the established players to win it," he said.

CHIEFS

Football League Players Association, now on strike, to go into training camp and play the All Star game.

But they voted unanimously that once the game was over they would walk out of camp if the dispute over the owners' contribution to the players pension fund had not been settled.

It has not been settled and the veteran players are on strike, with only a handful in camp. Chiefs' player representative Jim Tyrer said there was no question of the Chiefs' future action.

Stram said the players were free until 10:30 p.m. Sunday and that "I don't know what'll happen then if the dispute is going on."

Tyrer answered the question. "We're off until Sunday night," he said, "and if it isn't settled by then we just won't go back to camp."

In true pennant winning fashion the A's came up with a different set of heroes in their latest victory. This time fellows like Joe Rudi, Jim Roland and Paul Lindblad were the key figures.

Roland pitched four shutout relief innings to keep the A's in the game and Lindblad picked him up over the final three, holding the Senators hitless while striking out five to gain his fourth victory in five decisions.

"It was my best game," said Lindblad. "It also was the longest I've pitched in any stretch this season. Heck, someone has to pick up Mudcat (Grant). The man needs a little rest."

HEAVY DUTY

Lindblad was referring to the heavy duty Grant has been putting in of late, coming out of the bullpen almost every other game to run up a fantastic streak of four victories and 18 saves and an 0.94 earned run average.

Rudi's single scored the winning run in a two-run seventh inning rally that brought the A's from behind.

Felipe Alou and Tommy Davis, a pair of veteran outfielders who know what it's like to be involved in a pennant drive, were others who figured prominently in the rally.

After the first two men went out, Alou singled to center. When Ed Stroud juggled the ball, Felipe hustled into second, making it by the skin of his teeth with a long head-first slide.

WINNING RUNS

The error had no bearing in the rally since Sal Bando followed with a walk. Then Davis and Rudi, inserted into the lineup because the Senators started lefthander Jim Shellenback, followed with back-to-back singles to score the tying and winning runs.

Frank Fernandez, catching because regular Dave Duncan was off on weekend military duty, hit his 12th homer in the sixth to get the A's close.

The Senators scored two runs in each of the first two innings. A single by Del Unser, a double by Stroud, a single by Mike Epstein and a sacrifice fly by Aurelio Rodriguez netted the first two runs. Two walks, a sacrifict, an infield out and Stroud's second double accounted for the other two runs in the second. Then, Marcel Lachemann, Roland and Lindblad combined to shutout Washington the rest of the way.

A walk to Bando, a single by Davis and Rudi's sacrifice fly scored the A's first run in the second. They got their second run in the third on singles by Bert Campaneris and Alou and Bando's groundout.

Agee's Slump-Snapping Hit Vaults Mets Back To Top

By NEIL HERSHBERG
UPI Sports Writer

Tommie Agee ended a long drought Friday night and it couldn't have come at a more appropriate time for the New York Mets.

The defending world champions vaulted past the Pittsburgh Pirates into first place in the National League's Wild, wild East with a 6-5 triumph over the cellar-dwelling San Diego Padres.

Agee, without an RBI since July 11, drove in two runs with a single during a three-run sixth inning rally to lift the Mets to victory.

"I knew that if I got a base hit I'd drive two runners in," Agee said. "But Harrelson was following me, and they play him in so close he'd only drive in one. So I had to get it."

With one out in the sixth, Wayne Garrett and Cleon Jones started the rally with singles. Joe Foy singled home Jones to cut the Padres' lead to 5-4, and pinch-hitter Dave Marshall was walked by reliever Tom Dukes to load the bases, setting the stage for Agee's single. It boosted his club-leading RBI total to 55.

Agee later disclosed that "the last time I got an RBI we were in first place, too, so that means I gotta keep hitting to keep us there."

SHARES HEROICS

Agee shared the heroics with Jones whose sterling defensive plays saved a few Padre runs from scoring. Jones made two circus catches, the first to open the game (on Dave Campbell) and the other (on Steve Huntz) to get the last out of the game. A runner was on base on the final catch and it would have tied the contest if he had missed. He dived and speared it at arm's length, sliding about 10 feet through a puddle. On the first catch he stabbed it and it bounced out of his hand twice before he ended the juggling act by catching it with his bare hand.

PIRATES FALL

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta downed Pittsburgh 4-3 as the Pirates fell one-half game behind the league-leaders, Chicago swept a doubleheader from Cincinnati 7-1 and 11-7, St. Louis tripped Houston 5-1, San Francisco took a twinbill from Philadelphia 8-3 and 7-2 and Los Angeles defeated Montreal 8-5 in the first game of a doubleheader. The Los Angeles - Montreal nightcap was postponed because of rain.

Ron Santo collected four hits, two of them doubles, and Jim Hickman homered and doubled as Chicago took two from the Western Division leading Reds.

REDS POUNDED

The Cubs pounded five Red pitchers for 16 hits, eight of them for extra bases as they tagged Jim Merritt with his 10th loss against 15 victories.

Glenn Beckert, who had three hits in the second game, led the Cubs' opening-game attack with four hits as Bill Hands won his 13th game. Johnny Bench hit his 36th homer for the Reds.

Mike Lum's single triggered a four-run rally in the second inning that led Atlanta to victory. Pat Jarvis and Hoyt Wilhelm limited the Pirates to eight hits, including Bob Robertson's 12th homer of the year.

Raider Vets Stay Out Of Camp

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI)—The veterans of the Oakland Raiders maintained their stand Friday to stay out of the club's official training camp until the pension dispute between NFL owners and players is settled.

While a full veteran squad conducted a private workout in Alameda, the 27 Raider rookies and free agents went through a routine day of drills at the team's training quarters here.

Coach John Madden and his squad viewed the College All-Star game on television Friday night. He gave the players Saturday morning off and said two-a-day drills probably would resume on Sunday.

For Kimi Fox, Cheryl Cattan and Maura Campion, the journey to the Junior Olympics is over for 1970.

Orioles Tie Mark Of 'Murderers Row'

By JOE FROHLINGER
UPI Sports Writer

What do the current edition of the Baltimore Orioles have in common with the 1927 New York Yankees "murderers row?"

They are co-holders of the American League record for most consecutive victories over a club, 21. The Birds made headway into the record book Friday night by gaining their 21st successive win over the Kansas City Royals in a two-year stretch, as Merv Rettenmund led the way for the Orioles with 2 RBI's enroute to a 3-1 triumph.

The Royals are not giving up without a fight which is proved by their 14 one-run losses to the AL Eastern Division-leaders. Dave McNally, who pitched a strong five-hitter, feels that "we are not overconfident against them but sometimes they just beat themselves . . . and it usually happens against us."

The Orioles play their patsies again today and have a chance to set a new major league record of 22. Considering the torrid winning streak the Birds have embarked upon of late, winning nine of their last 14 games, the Birds just may make a new entry into the record books.

If they do succeed, they will break a record set back in the 19th century by the 1883-84 Boston team which clobbered Philadelphia 21 times in the American Association, which is held by three National League teams with 21, and the AL record set by the 1927 Yankees against the St. Louis Browns.

Elsewhere in the American League, the Detroit Tigers staggered by the Minnesota Twins, 10-9, the New York Yankees set Milwaukee back twice, 7-3 and 5-3, Boston blanked California 2-0, Oakland edged the Washington Senators 5-4, and Chicago beat Cleveland 5-4.

Four Killed In Speedway Crash

WILLIAMSON, U.Y. (UPI) — Four spectators were killed and at least 18 others injured Friday night when a stock car with a jammed accelerator catapulted into the grandstand during the final race at Spencer Speedway.

The injured, several listed in critical condition, were hospitalized in Rochester and Sodus.

The dead were identified as Thomas Hitchcock, 27, of Walworth; Timothy Trumble, 15, and James Reitano, 56 both of Rochester, and Robert Petrocci, 38, of rural Elbridge. Petrocci died in a hospital about seven hours after the accident.

Tiburon Girl In Net Final

Bee Kilgore of Tiburon was to play Jocelyn Grimm of Sacramento today in the finals of the 18 and under age division of the Canadian National Open Tennis Championships at Vancouver, B.C.

Miss Kilgore gained the finals yesterday with a 6-2, 6-4 vicotry over Marcie O'Keefe of Los Altos.

The Tiburon girl also is playing in the final rounds of the girls' 16 singles and 18 doubles, teamed with Ann Lamott, also of Tiburon.

BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER

Always keep your arm close to the body to improve and maintain your accuracy. Such a consistent arm-pattern will result in the same way every time. If the arm moves out from the body, the bowler is likely to become unbalanced.

Cobb Made 4,000

DETROIT (UPI) —Ty Cobb is the only man in major league history to make more than 4,000 hits. Cobb did it during his 24-year career with the Detroit Tigers and the old Philadelphia Athletics of the American League.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, Aug. 1, the 213th day of 1970 with 152 to follow.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning star is Saturn. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

On this date in history:

In 1907 the U.S. Air Corps., now the Air Force, was founded.

In 1946 the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission was formed.

In 1966 Charles Joseph Whitman killed his mother and wife, then fatally shot 13 other persons sniping from the top of a tower at the University of Texas. He wounded 32 others before being killed by the police.

A thought for the day: Gen John Adams Dix said, "If any one attempts to haul down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

More Women Signing As Craft Apprentices

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The latest report on women's participation in craft apprenticeships showed a 72 per cent increase in 1969.

The increase of 700 women apprentices in more than 100 trades has been accented by "invasions" by women into many apprenticeships considered historically and exclusively for men, the report said.

Gun Safety In Canada

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Beginning in 1971, hunters in Quebec will be required to hold firearms proficiency certificates before gaining a license, says the Department of Games and Fisheries. Tourism Minister Gabriel Loubier says the move is part of a general gun safety campaign.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes Avoiding A Finesse Provides Safety Play In Slam

"I can't stand it," the Old Kibitzer complained. "I've just come from watching a bridge game where nobody knows how to take simple finesse. And they're all grown men, too." We sloshed a drink into him, and the old gentleman recovered enough to give us the hand.

AVOIDED RISK

South won the first trick with the ace of spades, and the Old Kibitzer sat back, expecting South to lead the queen of hearts for a finesse. Instead, declarer led a low club to dummy and returned the three of hearts from dummy.

This is where the Old Kibitzer got up shakily from his chair and headed for the bar of his favorite bridge club. We made sympathetic noises at him and bought him a second drink, but our sympathy was all phony. We knew that South had made the right play.

FINESSE WOULD LOSE

South would lose his slam if he led the queen of hearts for a finesse. East would win with the king of hearts and would win a later trump trick with the 10.

South made sure of his slam by his actual trump play. When it turned out that East had all of the trumps, South could cash the ace of hearts and then lead another low heart through East's K-10.

REST IS EASY

If West had held all of the trumps, South's queen would lose to the king of trumps, but South would later lead a low heart from his hand to win a finesse with dummy's nine. The rest would be easy.

What if neither opponent had all four trumps? Then any line of play would bring in 12 tricks. South must exercise care only to guard against four trumps on either side. The safety play is to begin the trumps by leading low from the dummy.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 2 no trump (22 to 24 points), and the next player passes. You hold:

♠—Q 9 7 5
♥—K 10 8 7
♣—6 3 2.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards.

If he can bid hearts or spades, you will raise to game in his suit; and if he bids three diamonds, denying a major, you will go on to game in no-trump.

Clock More Important In Interior Decorating

CHICAGO (UPI) — Clocks are dominating the scene in today's homes, says interior design consultant Mary Ann Wills.

Miss Wills pointed out that "not so many years ago, a clock was usually an afterthought for any room, with the possible exception of the kitchen." However, she said that today "it's not all unusual to begin with a decorative clock in planning wall treatments for important living areas."

NEW ACT PRODUCTION

Michael Learned, Michael Cavanaugh (center) and Philip Kerr act out one of life's more rewarding experiences in a scene from Elaine May's "Adaptation," currently on the double-bill "Adaption Next," which is playing a limited engagement at the Marines' Memorial Theator in San Francisco. The Off-Broadway show is being presented as a post season offering by the American Conservatory Theater of San Francisco.

Author Louis Lomax Killed In Car Crash

SANTA ROSA, N.M. (UPI) — The body of author Louis Lomax, who was killed when he lost control of his car Thursday night, will be sent to Los Angeles for burial.

Lomax, 47, was to have been writer in residence at Hofstra University in West Hempstead, N.Y., this fall.

His body was not identified until Friday. Walter Julian of Julian Mortuary here said he "noticed that he had a graduation ring from Hofstra with his name on it. So I called the university and asked them if they knew of a Lomax there. The president of the college said they'd go out the house and break the news to the family."

Lomax, a former newsman, freelance writer and radio announcer in New York, was writing a Negro history under a $15,000 grant at the time of his death.

His book "Reluctant African" won the Anisfield-Wolf award in 1961. He wrote "Negro Revolt" in 1962 and "When the Word is Given" in 1963.

State police said Lomax' car skidded across Interstate 40 and flipped three times, throwing Lomax from the vehicle. He was pronounced dead at the scene of head and internal injuries.

Mrs. Lomax said she would go to Los Angeles Sunday. Julian said Lomax's body probably would leave Santa Rosa today.

Lomax visited North Vietnam in 1966 and was the first American newsman allowed into that country. He interviewed Ho Chi Minh and Premier Pham Bang Dong.

He was born in Valdosta, Ga., did graduate work at American University and at Yale and was a newspaper reporter in the East from 1941 until 1958.

Capture Of Trawler Only 'Symbolic' Fight

EUREKA (UPI) — As sea battles go, it was definitely a dud.

An American fishing boat which set out three days ago to "capture" a Russian trawler intruding on U.S. fishing grounds settled instead for "a symbolic confrontation" in the Pacific.

It wasn't even much of a confrontation symbolically, as the crews of the 72-foot fishing boat Havana and the Soviet trawler exchanged beer and cigarettes after they "made contact" 19 miles offshore.

A Coast Guard cutter quickly ended the rendezvous, hoisting signal flags which ordered the Havana to "keep clear" and then escorting the boat back to this northern California fishing city.

"The Havana had pulled alongside the Russian ship, close enough so that individuals on both boats could touch one another or exchange goods," the Coast Guard reported.

Jerry Kamstra, a freelance writer who organized the attempt to collect a $6,000 reward offered by a Fort Bragg grocer, termed the brief meeting "a symbolic confrontation" and said the two crews exchanged beer and cigarettes. When the Havana left San Francisco Bay Wednesday, Kamstra was promising to "capture" a trawler.

Both the Coast Guard and the northern Californians who posted the reward were unhappy with the Havana's efforts.

After escorting the fishing boat here, Coast Guardsmen boarded her and checked for any violations of federal boating regulations. They found none.

Jack Azeved, the grocer who raised the reward, said the exchange of cigarettes and beer "was like fraternizing with the enemy" and suggested the voyage of the Havana was "an attempt to discredit us."

A week ago, Azevedo offered a reward for the "capture" of a Soviet trawler fishing inside U.S. territorial waters. But after conferences with Coast Guard officials, the bounty was offered this week to anyone who helps the Guard catch a Russian vessel fishing inside the 12-mile limit.

Operations of a Russian fleet of 40 vessels off the coast have angered California fishermen.

Three Out-Of-State Men Held On Burglary Probe

Three out-of-state men, suspected of taking more than $1,000 worth of loot in two Sausalito burglaries Monday, were being held in Marin County Jail on $15,000 bail each today, pending further investigation by the district attorney's office and Sausalito and San Francisco police.

The three suspects were arrested Monday in San Francisco after police became suspicious and stopped their auto because its license plate was unreadable, according to police reports.

With them was woman, who was not booked in Marin County.

Booked by Sausalito police late Thursday were Roger Eugene Beruth, 35, reportedly a escapee from Nevada State Prison; James Leslie Fouche 21, of Elko, Nev., and Ronald A (Sonny) Lewis, 29, no known address but wanted in Boston Mass., on a burglary charge according to Federal Bureau of Investigation reports.

Police said their car was full of items which four victims who live in apartments at 98 and 10 Rodeo Avenue, Sausalito, identified as being taken from their when the apartments were ran sacked Monday afternoon evening.

Sausalito police listed the victims as Alfred S. Wilsey and Wallace Lordeau, of 100 Rode Avenue, and Sandra deBark and Connie Mae Costner of th neighboring address. The loc included stereo amplifiers, cameras, binoculars, jewelry, liquo and other items, police report ed.

Hearing Rescheduled On Assault Charge

Preliminary hearing for Kenneth Vernon Ross, 25, of San Francisco, on a felony charge of assaulting an officer has be reset for Aug. 13.

Ross allegedly tried to punch a California Highway Patrol officer while being taken into custody July 16 in Lagunitas. Officers said at the time he was walking on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard clad only in a coat.

Meeting Canceled

Because so many commissioners are on vacation, the regular meeting of the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission, scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday in the community house, will not be held, according to Edward W. Adams, parks and recreation director.

239-YEAR TRADITION

End Of Free Rum For Queen's Navy

LONDON (UPI) — Since the days when Britannia ruled the waves from Portsmouth to Singapore, sailors of the Royal Navy have lined up for their daily ration of grog. Today they did without for the first time in 239 years.

The Bosun's pipe tweetered "Up Spirts" and the shout "Stand fast for the Holy Ghost!" rang out on Her Majesty's ships for the last time Friday.

It was the end of free rum for British sailors, a tradition dating back to the time of Capt. William Bligh and Fletcher Christian of Mutiny on the Bounty fame.

The Admiralty said it was all a matter of efficiency.

"There is a marked diminishing of efficiency in a sailor after he's downed his grog," a naval spokesman said.

"The need for it is not so great today as it once was," the spokesman said. "There is no deck scrubbing and there just is not the atmosphere there used to be."

The name grog is derived from Adm. Edward Vernon, who first ordered the rum but with water. He had a habit of appearing on deck in a cloak of burlap-like grogram cloth when the weather was squally.

The shipboard ritual involved the ladling of an eighth of a pint of rum to each seaman from oak barrels marked with brass plaques that said "God Save The Queen" then a quarter pint of wager to cut it.

Seaman Terry Lowe of the Aircraft Carrier Albon at Portsmouth said he doubted his efficiency would have been impaired by more grog.

"The most technical bit of equipment I've had to handle in this Navy is a broom and a bucket," Lowe said.

"I've drunk 200 gallons of the stuff in my time," said the Chief Bosun's Mate of the frigate Andromeda at Portsmouth. "We won the last war on it."

Many sailors wore black armbands Friday when the last grog was ladeled out, shuffling to recorded funeral music to mark the passing of the maritime tradition.

At Portsmouth, Britain's biggest naval base, two scarlet-clad sailors brought a rum barrel across the parade ground in a black-draped truck and delivered it to the mess hall. Inside, the barrel was stood up in an open coffin, candles flickering around in funeral atmosphere.

PRISON TENSION

Guards Are Prone To Heart Attacks

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The tension of being alone with 150 of the state's most violent men makes the prison guard an easy mark for a heart attack.

When a man takes a job as a state correctional officer, he must face the fact that heart attack is a built-in hazard just as the potential of being assaulted or stabbed by an inmate.

This was the opinion today of Sgt. Mel Hart, president of the California Correctional Officers Association, who said guards have the highest incidence of heart seizures in comparison with all other state employes.

"When you're in a room full of inmates—maybe as many as x80 of them—and you're the only officer there, there's a lot of tension and strain.

"Day after day, it wears you down."

Hart, assigned to the reception center at the California Institution for Men at Chino, said in a telephone interview with UPI that at his facility 15 out of 125 officers suffered coronary seizures in the last year.

The 42-year-old Hart, a veteran of 15 years with the state Department of Corrections, said that fears and tension have been intensified recently by the killing of two guards at the Correctional Training Facility at Soledad.

"You get a little skittish when you hear things like this," Hart said in commenting that all officers were more edgy over current conditions.

He pointed out that most correctional officer positions placed the guard in living units alone with from 100 to 180 inmates.

"We're not just school crossing guards," he said. "We're getting tired of the fact that the correctional officer is not being recognized for full credit for a day's work.

"We are not just guards, we perform functions, we just don't turn keys, we counsel, we rehabilitate, we conduct group counseling. We're with the inmates 24 hours a day. We're in his housing unit, we're with him at meals, we work with him."

Hart said he would like to see more staff added to institutions to ease the burden and the tensions of the guard.

"We don't have much time to devote to the inmate" he said. "Our first duty is for the protection of society. Then rehabilitation is second. Why can't people understand we could do this simultaneously if we had enough officers?"

He said the state has about 3,000 guards in 13 institutions and 29 honor camps.

Hart said he has made several attempts to talk with Gov. Ronald Reagan about the situation but has been rebuffed in his efforts.

"He'll meet with strikers but not with us . . ." the CCOA president said.

He said his organization was pushing for passage of a bill that would permit correctional officers to retire at 50 per cent pay at the age of 50.

"We want to be able to get out of the business before we have a heart attack and die," he said.

Hart also pointed out that the nature of the job was getting worse because only the most violent men were being sent to state prison.

A department spokesman said there were 1,000 more murderers, 2,000 more armed robbers and 8,000 more assaulters in the prisons now than there were 10 years ago.

He added that correctional officers earn a monthly salary of from $651 to $751.

Hart said that under current standards an officer with 30 years experience retires at about $350 a month.

"Some of us don't get as much as welfare recipients," Hart said.

Russ Jail Priest For Slander, Whipping Wife

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Russian priest accused of beating his wife and spreading anti-Soviet slander has been sentenced to an undisclosed term in prison, the newspaper Pravda Vostoka said Thursday.

The newspaper said Russian Orthodox Pavel A. Adelheim had been accused of whipping his wife and children with a telephone cord and spreading "literature that slandered the state and our country."

"Neo-realistic and decadent poets and anti-Soviet slanderous works were in his library," the newspaper said.

Marin School Board Gives Monday Agenda

The Marin County Board of Education will study a budget for the new regional occupational education program when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday in the county schools office, 201 Tamal Vista Boulevard, Corte Madera.

The board also will consider nominations for its new personnel commission, and take up a resolution to conduct an experimental program for hearing-handicapped children from 18 months to three years old.

Innocent Plea To Firebombing

FRESNO (UPI)—Virgil B. Lewis, 19, pleaded innocent Thursday to charges stemming from the May 19 firebombing of the Fresno State College computer which preceded four days of demonstrations.

Fresno County Superior Court Judge Denver C. Peckinpah set Nov. 2 for trial.

The judge also denied a defense motion that the charges of arson, conspiracy, to commit arson and possession of a firebomb be dropped because of insufficient evidence.

The firebombing triggered an electrical explosion in the computer center and totally destroyed the $750,000 facility.

College Needs Citizenry's Help To Make Reforms

COMPLAINTS ABOUT Sonoma State College reached a crescendo about the time Ambrose Nichols, the institution's first and thus far only president, announced his resignation.

The list of complaints had grown long.

It was said that the college community was almost totally alienated from the citizenry of the area it was intended to serve.

Militant, activist minorities among faculty and student body were "running the college," effectively thwarting administration efforts to bring the situation under control.

Physical facilities were not being utilized to capacity while qualified applicants were being turned away.

Faculty was "goofing off" in various ways.

To repeat, the list of complaints had grown long.

"Let us hope," this writer said in this space at that time, "that the State College Board of Trustees conducts a full inquiry into the accusations."

EARLIER THIS MONTH, three members of the board of trustees did make an unpublicized but nonetheless official visit to the campus.

This week a special task force from the office of State Colleges Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke spent four days on the Cotati campus digging into records, interviewing students, faculty, administrators and citizenry from the area which the college serves, including Marin.

The task force was headed by Thomas H. McGrath, whose title is assistant to the executive vice chancellor. McGrath and his fellow investigators gave every indication of going at their job in a business-like manner with the object of getting the facts in perspective. Contrary to the innuendo of some published news reports, the McGrath team did not appear to be trying to gather evidence to "hang" any individual or group.

It is only reasonable to expect that the fact-finding mission will be unable to find any substantiation for some accusations which have been voiced in the past. It is equally reasonable to expect that — if they do their job thoroughly — they will find considerable substantiation for some other complaints.

It appears evident, for instance, that the college community IS largely alienated from the citizenry of the area it is intended to serve primarily.

WHAT WILL McGRATH'S group recommend to remedy this situation?

The standard approach would be formation of a "citizens' committee" to work closely with a joint college committee comprised of administration, faculty and student representatives.

Trouble is, such committees are usually ineffectual and short-lived.

Sonoma State already has had, on paper, an advisory board of interested citizens from its service area. One of the commonly heard complaints is that this committee has been ineffective, largely inactive, and sometimes used as a rubber stamp by the administration.

SOON THE STATE College Board of Trustees will be picking a new president for Sonoma State. The principal burden for reform will fall upon him.

But he cannot do it alone. He must have support not only from the trustees, the chancellor's office, from within his own administration as well as from faculty and students. He must also have citizen support from the area the college serves — principally Sonoma, Napa and Marin counties.

There is a part we citizens must play. When time and situation make our help necessary, we must be ready to extend it.

If private enterprise cannot provide adequate housing for students at a price students can pay, for instance, then we of the citizenry must be ready to roll up our sleeves to work for some suitable public housing.

The citizenry has criticised the college community for ignoring its neighbors. When our (the college's neighbors) turn comes, we must not ignore the need of the college for our support and assistance.

We must be willing to cooperate and help where we can to solve faculty, student or administration problems, when we are asked.

—Jack Craemer

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Ross Still Ignores Flooding Problem

In January you published an article headed "Ross Ignores Own Flooding Problem". Summer is here, fall is not far away and winter will surely follow. At Lake Fernlinas (the area to the west of Shady Lane, bounded by Fernhill Avenue and Bolinas Avenue in Ross) some of us are anticipating (without glee) the coming winter sports season, with a possible repeat of last winter's activity, or perhaps even more excitement because the no burning edict will provide more debris to clog the creek.

In any event last winter's sports included:

1. A residence with a pool submerged 18 inches under water flowing rapidly within two inches of the entire floor level of the house.

2. A resident who has applied for a disaster loan in excess of $3,000 for damage done by the flood.

3. A residence with three boys asleep in a basement room who were routed from their beds surrounded by eight inches of water which did considerable damage.

4. A resident who found her car submerged to the level where the engine and upholstery required expensive repairs.

5. A resident who had to bail several inches of water from her living room and had to spend additional money for other damage . . .

On the other hand the sportsmen from the assessor's office seem to highly value the potential because they have assumed that all this property has become much more valuable. They also did this in 1968 after similar flooding in 1967 . . .

The Corte Madera Creek area of Ross has had much publicity — we would like more publicity for our water sportsland.

Official Could Provide Own Car

In regards to the article of July 24, about the top official needs a car.

We understand Mr. (Jack C.) Williams said he needs a car for official business, we of the public housing feel that we should hire someone from the community who can furnish their own transportation. We also feel that Mr. Williams makes enough money to furnish his own transportation, he has been here over a year and we haven't seen anything he has accomplished. If anyone has anything to donate will you please think of help. People have been cut back on welfare and needs any donation you can provide in this matter — such as food, clothing, furniture, etc.

Feels Better After Complaints

I've tried to keep out of this but some of the doings of today are so screwy that I have to chip in.

The doings of Cesar Chavez for instance. When he first came into prominence he was ragtag and poorly clad. Now, judging by the picture of him, he is well dressed and fed. It is ever thus with those who lead the sheep. I have had membership in three unions and in each one the leaders have proved to be dishonest. Can Chavez be any better? Sticking his nose into something that is none of his business. And look at the sheep that followed him. Nuf ced.

And those young rioters. They are the product of a too permissive parenthood. They grew up without knowing about rules, law, or proper behavior. So now they have reached the time when they can't stand to be told. They are bucking what they call the Establishment. What would they do without it? Most are living now on their parents, members of said Establishment. They'd starve without it.

Like that riot in Chicago. Police brutality should be forgotten. Let them break as many heads as they can. And then some.

I feel better now.

Lagunitas.

LINES ON LIVING

Get Away From It All And You Find—Yourself

By Rabbi HAIM KEMELMAN

Summertime is fulfillment of promise. It is delivery after the long expectancy of rolling seasons. It's golden ripening to the brim of fullness.

The gaiety of an active industry, automated by the mysterious hand of some unseen power, permeates all. Growth and fulfillment is joy; and in summertime you can't hide from it. You are drawn to it by that magical hand that made all beginnings. And you go to the source because you too have a beginning and an origin; because you want to be yourself for a change; because you need a change of scene to refresh yourself; because you know you must let yourself go.

So you join the seasonal exodus of vacationers and leave the din of city and town behind you. You go to the woodlands, to the seashore, to the mountains; you go searching, hunting, fishing.

WHAT ARE YOU aiming at? What do you expect to find? Yourself! Your simple unsophisticated and indigenous self. And you can find yourself and know your identity as well as your firm reality in this solemn hush of sprouting and marching green, in the scent of meadowland, in the lump of earthy freshness, in the enduring certainty of the source.

Here the enhancing language is life itself, eloquent and undentable proof of rootage and fruition. Here you see the visible proof in the patient perserverance of the "mighty oak," which "is just yesterday's little nut that held its ground." Here you learn the beauty of sound in the gleeful singing of birds and bees that never weary of song. Here you find a kinship with tree and leaf, and are humbled to acknowledge the simplicity of your human self, knowing that all your machines still cannot duplicate a living tree, a seed.

That's why you get away from it all: to search for yourself; to hunt yourself; to listen to yourself; to hear the poetry of trees; to see the visible workings of life at its source; to touch the dew of a new day; to feel refreshed, in tune with the universe and not in the clatter of the machine.

IN THE RETREAT of mountain, ocean and hillside, you are brought back to your banished paradise for a reunion. And when you make your acquaintance with the tidal waves of ocean's ebb and flow and the stubborn persistence of hills and fields, you feel buttressed and stronger. You sense life's imperative within your bones and know that you are a living and feeling and knowing part of it, root and all. And as you don't question a bird's reason for singing, you start singing for no reason yourself. And as you don't challenge the strength of a tree's roots in adjusting to anchorage and growth, you feel like growing and adjusting yourself. Because life and laughter is upon you and vanished cares are behind you.

Never mind the fleetingness of the flower, the brevity of the summer, the abruptness of growth. Live in the living reality of a full summer day and feel no regret. Summertime is a time of doing: doing away with daily cares and irksome civilization and doing something with your simple living self to "see into the life of things."

Personable Persuader Wins Government Aid For The Arts

WASHINGTON — Score a small triumph for the Nixon administration, and it is a triumph that could have a long reach. Congress has appropriated for the National Endowment for the Arts $40 million, which is twice the amount for the previous year.

The triumph owes a lot to a personable persuader who has made a strong impression since she arrived on the Washington scene last October. Nancy Hanks, chairman of the endowment, talked to more than 200 members of Senate and House in making the case for the appropriation.

Lobbyists for more materialistic goals have reason to envy that record. Miss Hanks brings very special qualities to her task. She is an attractive woman with intelligence and perception that are evident without being in the least assertive.

THE PRESIDENT took six months to come up with a replacement for Roger L. Stevens, the first chairman, who resigned after five years of guiding the federal government's grant program in the arts. Suspicion grew that he might leave the post vacant. Then the choice fell on Miss Hanks to almost unanimous appproval.

Shortly after her appointment the question arose as to how much to request from Congress in the coming fiscal year. There was a long flap over whether it should be $8 million or $10 million. After all, help for the arts —theater, ballet, music, painting — from Uncle Sam is something pretty radical. An old story in Western Europe where the arts have long been endowed, it is a new venture with us where political suspicion of anything as fancy as ballet and long-haired music run deep.

The decision was finally reached to go for double. And Miss Hanks promptly went to work on a list of Senate and House members who might be subject to persuasion.

THE NATION'S 88 symphony orchestras — 28 major orchestras with budgets over $500,000 and 60 metropolitan orchestras with budgets under $500,000 —have been going steadily in the red. While the endowment obviously cannot underwrite all the deficits, grants of $50,000 each were made to five orchestras for projects considered of outstanding national significance.

The contrast with practices abroad is startling. Austria with a population of 7,500,000 subsidizes music and the theater to the tune of about $35 million a year, and as a consequence the performing arts are a foremost tourist attraction. But Miss Hanks believes we're on the way.

JUST OUT of Duke University with a Phi Beta Kappa key, Miss Hanks came to Washington in 1951 as a member of the staff of the Office of Defense Mobilization. That was when the Korean War was going full blast. She later went to work for Nelson Rockefeller when he was undersecretary of health, education and welfare, and followed him to the White House when President Eisenhower asked Rockefeller to set up a series of foreign policy panels.

Outside government, with the magic of the Rockefeller money in the Rockefeller Brothers Fund in New York, Miss Hanks was executive secretary in charge of naming a series of panels to do studies in a variety of fields. One of them was in the arts. And Miss Hanks herself directed the study that ended with a landmark report, "The Performing Arts: Problems and Prospects."

The report stimulated a lot of activity. One result was formation of the National Council on the Arts, of which Miss Hanks is today chairman.

Miss Hanks is on the way to becoming one of this capital's quiet-spoken movers and shakers.

ART BUCHWALD

The Education Of Ramat Gow In Process Of Free Elections

WASHINGTON — One of the major goals of our American foreign policy is to have countries all over the world hold free elections. As part of this policy, the State Department has been urging politicians to come to the United States and study our political system.

A recent visitor was Ramat Gow of the tiny republic of Nonomura. Ramat Gow met with officials of both parties and received a marvelous insight into how American politics works.

He was also briefed by Starkley Merriweather, of Starkely, Ramsden and Phipps, a public relations company specializing in electing public officials.

"HOW DOES ONE get elected?" Ramat Gow asked.

"Well, first you need money. You have to have campaign funds to spend on billboards, flyers, radio and television."

"I see. And how does one get this money?"

"The best and easiest way," said Merriweather, "is to approach lobbyists representing vested interests in your country who are willing to contribute large sums of money to political candidates."

"AH, BUT IF WE accepted money from people who have vested interests would we not be obligated to protect these people after we were elected?"

"Exactly. That's the whole idea. They're not financing you because they like the cut of your jib."

"Is there no other way of holding elections without asking for money from the vested people?"

"We haven't come up with any," Merriweather said. "The American political system is open to anyone in this country, providing he or she can afford it. You see, Mr. Ramat Gow, the most important thing in a political campaign is to get through to your people that your candidate is the best man for the job. This is done through advertising. We sell our politicians in the United States just like we sell our soap. We offer extra ingredients that brand X doesn't have. Now this takes money. You have to keep hitting the American people over the head before you get through to them."

"THAT'S VERY interesting," Ramat Gow said. "So the man with the most money is the one who is likely to win in United States?"

"I wouldn't go that far. You have to give the candidate charisma."

"How do you do that?"

"By spending money. The old days of a candidate going out and pressing the flesh are just about over. It's the candidate who comes on for a minute during a football game on TV that's going to take all the marbles."

"This is most constructive. I wish to run for the senate of my parliament. What do you suggest I do?"

"WELL, THE FIRST thing you do is hold a big dinner. Invite the heads of the oil companies, the labor unions and the trucking people and make them each cough up $100 a plate."

"What occasion should I say we are holding the dinner for?"

"Your birthday."

"Alas, my birthday is in December."

"Who the hell knows the difference? After you get the money, you can make Ramat Gow a household word."

"Thank you very much, Mr. Merriweather. I have learned more from you in half an hour about the democratic process than I have learned from all the other government officials combined. One more thing. How do you make a TV commercial?"

Right Hand Doesn't Know . . .

A fine example of this appeared recently with disclosure that Internal Revenue Service agents were calling at public libraries to check on who had been taking out books on explosives.

Samuel J. Archibald, of the Washington office of the Freedom of Information Center, pointed out the irony in a letter to the director of IRS' Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division:

"While the Keystone Kops of your gun control division are scurrying around libraries trying to identify patrons who check out books on explosives, another government agency is busily selling an excellent how-to-do-it pamphlet on explosives."

The agency, he went on to say, is the Bureau of Mines. The pamphlet is Information Circular 8405. A simple formula for fuel oil-fertilizer explosive is on page 20. The pamphlet is sold for 40 cents by the Government Printing Office.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A fussy customer in a roadside restaurant took a tentative bite of the piece of pie that had been set before him, grimaced, then snarled at the waiter, "Are you sure this is cherry pie?" "What does it taste like?" snapped the waiter, obviously nettled. "Heaven only knows," the customer shrugged. The waiter had the last word. "If you don't know what it tastes like," he reasoned, "what difference does it make whether it's cherry or not?"

Len Dawson says there's so much pollution in the air these days that people are coughing even when they're not at a concert or a play.

Another Dawson observation: Nothing cures insomnia like a realization it's time to get up.

TROUBLED ENVIRONMENT

Population's The Biggest Threat

More than most of us realize even now, the biggest threat to world environment today and tomorrow is not raw sewage. It's people.

Since we aren't about to kill off half the world's population, it becomes more and more apparent to most conservationists that whether we like it or not we must limit our numbers or have them limited in abhorrent ways.

Most obvious limiting possibilities are starvation and nuclear war. But others are exotic disease, abortion, government regulation and a fatal madness that comes on overcrowded animal communities and that may sometime afflict mankind. Perhaps it already has.

If there is no check, we are assured, world population will double to about 7 billion by the year 2000. Then, with the standing room only sign ablaze on all continents, the United States will house nearly as many people as all Africa does now, and the American dream of unlimited expansion and ever rising standard of living will have become a nightmare.

"We cannot win a war against pollution that does not include as one of its battles the stabilizing of our population," writes Prof. David Van Veck of Middlebury College in a Princeton quarterly called University.

To stabilize a population within 30 years, Prof. Van Vleck figures, the average family must limit itself to two children. To stabilize it at once, families should include no more than one child.

Populations grow by compound interest like a savings account. Thus while it took the people of the world 1600 years to doule beyond the 250 million supposedly alive when Christ was born, they doubled again in about 200 years, and once more a hundred years later in 1930 when the figure was 2 billion. Now the prospect is they will double a fourth time and become four billion during this decade.

Some say that two thirds of the world's people go to bed hungry even now, and that 10,000 to 15,000 die daily of malnutrition. There is little assurance, therefore, that mass starvation on a really vast scale can be put off indefinitely, unless some changes are made.

America, which consumes far more food, metals and fuel per capita than anybody, wouldn't find it easy to inspire other nations to limit their populations until it had brought its own under better control.

Even the promising introduction of super varieties of wheat, rice and corn and the possibility of tapping new food resources in seas already depleted of life and contaminated with oil, chemicals and sewage are no sure fire defenses against the growing menace.

Actually there has been some flattening of the population curve in this and some other countries.

The U.S. birth rate fell from a 1947 peak of 26.6 per thousand — highest since that other postwar year, 1920 — to 17.4 in 1968, which was lower even than in the years of the great depression.

How come? Nobody really knows because numerous factors are involved and because motives in this field are not a matter of public record. But the Pill doubtless helped many parents who decided on smaller families to stick to their resolutions, even though recent reports on its side effects have resulted in a decline in its use.

Education, income level and married women going to work all have had their influence. Recently the young women born during the postwar baby boom started coming on strong.

However the death rate also has declined, from 13 per thousand in 1920 to as low as 9.2 in 1954. Still another cross current is the remarkable recent trend in court and legislature towards legalization of abortion, and the growing acceptance of sterilization operations now being performed on about 100,000 persons a year.

All in all, America has a growth rate of only about 1 per cent. Pretty good, when you think of the 1.8 per cent world figure. But a population growing 1 per cent a year doubles every 70 years.

As populations soar, people on the average certainly will have less room and probably less food. Moreover, they will be gobbling up an ever larger share of the world's resources, about which more later.

Once granted that an ever increasing population is not necessarily an ever increasing blessing, what can be done about it? Something really can be done, as the Irish demonstrated after last century's famines, and as the Japanese have shown since World War II.

Here are some measures that have been tried or that have been suggested by various specialists:

Encourage young people to marry late or not at all.

Make contraceptive information and materials available to any sexually mature person.

Legalize abortion and even make it nearly free.

Abolish tax breaks for parents.

Tax the parents of large families.

Institute a quota system for legal births.

To such a pass has unrestrained fecundity, coupled with the conquest of disease, brought the world.

LONG RANGE FORECAST — Long range predictions of population growth are precarious. The most frequently mentioned world figure for the year 2000 is seven billion, but this chart based on statistics in the International Encyclopedia of the Social Sciences makes it out as 7.5 billion. The U.S. Census Bureau in 1967 projected a high figure of 361 million Americans by 2000, although its best guess was 300 million. It is now 282 million.

EXPO '70 MIGHT END IN BLACK

Unlikely World Exposition At Osaka Has Become Surprisingly Successful

By TEIJI SHIMIZU

OSAKA, Japan (UPI) — Heading now into the last two months of its six months' stand, Expo '70 looks like a money maker. Not everyone thought it would be.

When the government of Prime Minister Eisaku Sato decided to host the 1970 World Exposition, many Japanese thought it would not be a success. Even selection of Osaka for the first world's fair in Asia was considered bad.

Although Osaka is Japan's second largest city (population 3 million), it had never held a show of international scale such as the 1964 Olympic games in Tokyo. But the government went ahead. Construction workers cleared Senri Hills (thousand leagues) of bamboo thickets and built pavilions on 815 acres.

The fair has been so successful since it opened March 15 that well over 30 million people visited it during the first three and a half months.

Expo officials, who had earlier predicted it would be a success if 50 million people attended, now confidently forecast that the number of visitors will total more than 55 million by the time the exposition eloses Sept. 13.

A Japanese bank employee became the 30 millionth visitor to the fair June 23. He was honored with a 10-day trip to Europe plus 200,000 yen ($555) in cash.

If the number of visitors does go beyond the 50 million mark, the Expo Association gains nothing but profits.

The exposition, a $2.9 billion extravaganza, offers something for everybody.

There are 117 pavilions, each built and operated by 77 countries, including the United States and the Soviet Union. Piece de resistance of the U.S. exhibit is a piece of moon rock. The Russians show a variety of spaceships in their towering hammer and sickle pavilion.

For music lovers, Germany's purplish-blue building that looks like a balloon has a special auditorium where visitors sit on the floor and listen to classical and modern record music. The aluminum covered Swiss pavilion is something to see at night when it lights up like a Christmas tree with 35,000 lamps.

The overwhelming number of visitors to the fairyland have been Japanese.

There is no way of keeping track of how many foreign visitors have attended. Among foreign visitors have been Emperor Haile Salassie of Ethiopia, Prince Charles of Great Britain, David Eisenhower and his wife, Julie, Mrs. Imelda R. Marcos, wife of Philippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos, and their three children, Indonesian President and Mrs. Suharto and the Prime Ministers of Canada, Australia and South Korea.

In addition to the moon rock brought back to earth by the Apollo astronauts, the U.S. pavilion displays the uniform worn by Babe Ruth, America's late baseball home run king whose name is well known in Japan.

A lost child center, complete with computers and television cameras and employing 52 hostesses, has restored more than 10,000 children, ranging in age from 2 to 14, to their parents.

Hotel accommodations have not been as short as had been predicted. There are 12 western style hotels in Osaka and they have been able to fill the needs of foreign visitors most of the time.

PROGRAMS IN COLORADO

Ultimate Weapon In Fighting Drugs—The Proper Education

DENVER (UPI) — Colorado educators, fearful of a growing "pill popping" generation that already is evidencing itself as early as the sixth grade in a few instances, are arming themselves with a variety of programs they hope will curb the problem.

Schools throughout Colorado—which ranks 12th among the 50 states in illegal use of drugs—are using everything from ex-drug addicts to movies to try to get youth to decide drugs are not the answer to their growing pains.

In the forefront of officials who have encouraged schools to offer drug education programs has been a lady state senator from suburban Lakewood, Ruth Stockton.

"Schools are the first line of attack in the battle against drugs," Sen. Stockton said in an interview. "They're the best place to get the most of the people."

The Republican, one of only two women in the state Senate, helped guide a $253,000 drug and alcohol bill through the 1970 session of the Colorado legislature. The money will go to the State Departments of Public Health and Education in an effort to launch a program in every school district in the state.

Actually, Colorado even before the turn of the century had a law on its statute books requiring that schools teach about the dangers of drugs, tobacco and alcohol. The law, which some observors say has done little more than gather cobwebs, provides that teachers who do not comply "shall be removed."

"The law is not tremendous in its observance," said Dr. John Lampe, staff physician to the Denver City and County Schools. "It's against the law to spit on the street, too, but there are not many indictments for doing it. The problem is that I can say that I read a section on narcotics to my class and still be in compliance with the law."

The variety of school drug programs being offered is nearly as varied as the number of school districts offering little more than a slide presentation to full-scale efforts covering several grades.

"We can't achieve our ends with texts," Dr. Lampe said. "It's simply not a matter of information. Most kids know that drugs are not good for them. It is no use going through the golden rule to say that they are not.

"But what is in question here is kids' behavior—their values, their acceptance of drugs. That's what we must change."

Kenneth Baker, director of secondary curriculum and instruction for Littleton schools, believes that parents must be one of the targets of any drug education program.

"Drug abuse is not a cause in itself; it is an effect," Baker said. "It is an indictment of the family structure. Therefore, one of the major thrusts of our program is the parent.

"If kids play in an area where snakes bite, it's the parents as well as the kids who have to be made aware of the danger. You've got to impress and sensitize them on the needs of their youngsters.

"We probably have aimed more at parents than other areas, but like anything in education, we must get the support of the parents. Parents are the key. We must have more parent involvement."

Jefferson County has one of the most elaborate drug education programs in the state. Students in the sixth grade begin learning the uses and dangers of drugs. In the program students discuss what drugs are for and are given graphic illustrations of the effects of drugs upon the nervous system. A pharmacist is invited into the classroom to set up a demonstration which shows the effects of glue fumes on a white mouse. Science classes study the physiological effects of drugs.

In the 8th, 10th and 12th grades, there are more discussions, more films, more reading matter. The program expands in the high school to include seminars which use the authority figure—the lawyer, the clergyman and the psychiatrist. Occasionally a former drug user also is asked to speak.

"What we've tried to do is put drug education into regular school curriculums where it would normally come up rather than make a big deal about it," said Robert Weiland, director of special services in the county.

SLOW LIBERALIZATION

Hungary's Economic Road Departs From Soviet Plan

By MARQ de VILLIERS

BUDAPEST (Toronto News Service) — This old capital has many natural advantages which Moscow, among other places, lacks. It has an incomparably better setting, for one thing; the Danube is a lovelier river than the Moskva, and the Buda Hills higher than the hills called Lenin.

Budapest also has incomparably more beautiful women in incomparably shorter skirts, and many cafes from which to reflect in these improvements.

Natural beauty, of course, has nothing to do with the system by which a country is ruled. But Budapest has other advantages, too:

Of all the Soviet bloc countries, Hungary is the one least subject to internal stresses and most confident of its slow liberalization. It is quite a change from the dark years which followed the Soviet suppression of a popular uprising in 1956.

There is a tremendous irony in recent Hungarian history which the Hungarians, a people with a developed taste in irony, appreciate to the full.

First, there is Janos Kadar, the Hungarian party leader, who was installed by Khrushchev and promptly despised by the Hungarians as a Soviet lackey. Now? Kadar is respected, if not liked, and is popularly regarded as the one man capable of preserving the balance between independence and loyalty.

Second, there was the invasion of Czechoslovakia little more than 10 years after Hungary's own recolt. Hungary was the Warsaw Pact's most reluctant participant, since the Hungarians knew that their own economic reform program differed litle from the Czechs'.

And third, two years after the suppression of the Prague Spring, the Czech reforms are dead. Dubcek has been properly humiliated and Brezhnev's doctrine of "limited sovereignty" holds sway in Czechoslovakia. At the same time, the Hungarians are pressing ahead with reforms in some ways more radical than Dubcek's — and have (perhaps reluctantly) Soviet assent.

Kadar's reversal of political fortunes is even more bizarre than Nixon's 1968 comeback — Nixon wasn't installed by invaders (in spite of what the young may think) and is hardly a national hero now.

Of course, this must be kept in perspective: Hungary is no liberal's paradise. Yet, after the aborted revolution of 1956 Kadar was a symbol of the oppressor. In 1968 his re-emergence after several months of self imposed solitude was hailed by almost all Hungarians, since by this time he had become a symbol — the embodiment of the "new economic mechanism," of paced progress, of persuading the Russians that yes means no.

Almost all the Soviet bloc countries have by now introduced economic reforms of one kind or another, even the Soviet Union itself. But there are reforms and reforms.

The Yugoslav model (worker control of local enterprises, stimulus by foreign competition) is too strong for the other centralized economies to stomach.

But Poland, for instance, has introduced flexibility into its planning. Rumania is allowing a freer play for market forces; the Czechs, even now, have decentralized to some degree.

East Germany is the country where reforms are least needed and Bulgaria is a special case — a happy client state whose economy is only just reaching the stage where centralization is beginning to pay off.

All these new economic mechanisms differ, but they all have one thing in common: They are moving away from the old Soviet, rigid, Stalinist model of tightly-centralized tightly-controlled, minutely-planned economies toward (but not to) the freer, more anarchic mechanisms of the laws of supply and demand.

Within the frameowrk of a socialist society, production is to become reflective of demand, and profit is to become the measure of efficiency, salaries, payments and investments.

The Hungarians introduced their reform package all at once (New Year's Day 1968) — quite a different approach from the piecemeal caution of the other bloc countries. Of course, they could afford to do so; their economy wasn't performing quite as dismally as was Czechoslovakia's or the Soviet Union's.

In some respects the Hungarian package deviates substantially from the Marxist-Leninist model which is, officially, dogma throughout eastern Europe.

Take private enterprise, for instance. Some scale private business is not only tolerated but encouraged. Private businessmen in more than 50 fields now can compete on equal terms with state agencies. They can even get state loans. Foreign "monopolists" (for instance Shell and Coca Cola) are sold widely in the country.

Prices? Marxist price theory is a cost theory, which means that retail prices are based on supply, rather than on demand or an interaction of supply and demand as in the Western model. The Hungarians now have explicitly given recognition to consumer demand.

They are also allowing flexible pricing, a shift to "free prices" determined by supply and demand. Only about a quarter of all prices are centrally controlled, and the Hungarians are committed to reducing this quota.

This part of the reform is causing particular anguish in Moscow, where they believe price-setting is a prerogative of the central planners — a horribly difficult job in the Soviet Union, since they are responsible for setting each year some 10 million different prices.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Israel, in spite of an internecine cabinet struggle, followed Egypt and Jordan in accepting the American proposal for a 90-day ceasefire in the Middle East.

President Nixon promised there would be a "military standstill" during the ceasefire which would prevent an Egyptian buildup of artillery and missiles on the Suez Canal front. But Israel's coalition cabinet split over acceptance of the proposal and six Gahal Party members threatened a walkout.

The acceptance statement indicated Israel was prepared to stop fighting "at least on the Egyptian front" — indicating that Arab guerrilla attacks on the Jordanian front still would be answered with force. The guerrillas have not accepted the American proposal.

Israeli fears surrounding acceptance of the plan, which is designed to lead to negotiations on a permanent ceasefire, centers on a possible Egyptian buildup if Israeli planes halt their attacks against missile and artillery concentrations. Israel continued the bombing raids during a week of cabinet meetings devoted to the U.S. proposal.

The rightwing, hawkish Gahal, the second largest party in the Israeli coalition with 26 seats in the Knesset parliament, threatened to quit the government if the majority headed by Premier Golda Meir accepted the America.. peace formula.

Gahal's defection, however, would not be expected to bring down the government.

The Soviet Union underscored its endorsement of Egypt's acceptance of the peace plan with an article in Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, which praised Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and scorned Arab critics of his decision.

The major Palestinian commando organizations and Iraq sharply criticized Nasser. Communist China attacked the U.S. proposal on charges it represented a plot by Washington and Moscow to carve out spheres of influence in the Mideast.

Around The World, Around The Clock

LISBON — Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, Portugal's ruler for 40 years, died at 81 following a heart attack two weeks ago. He died never knowing he had been replaced by Marcello Caetano in 1968 two weeks after he underwent surgery to remove a blood clot near his brain.

CHICAGO — More than 150 persons were arrested and at least 100 others were injured during a six hour battle between police and youths after a rock group refused to play at a free concert in Grant Park.

CAIRO — Egypt suspended the broadcasting privileges of two Palestinian commando groups after they criticized the Egyptian decision to accept the American proposal for a 90-day Mideast ceasefire.

WASHINGTON — A presidential commission recommended the removal of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from involvement in military operations in a proposal to reorganize the Defense Department.

NEW YORK — The Consolidated Edison Co. bought power from as far away as Tennessee to keep electricity flowing in sweltering, smog shrouded New York City. Even with the extra power, Con Ed was forced to cut back 5 per cent of its output.

Luncheon Is Served — For Good Causes

Tasty Way To Raise The Funds

Corte Madera's Women's Improvement Group hoped to install a number of neighborhood improvements. They called Peg Hardy.

St. Mary's College Guild, including many Marin alumni, needed to increase their scholarship fund. They called Peg Hardy.

Novato's Triple C Club needed more funds so the group could continue its various philanthropies. They called Peg Hardy.

And Peg helped them all —and many others like them.

Who is Peg Hardy?

ACTUALLY HER name is Margaret, though she much prefers Peg, and, as you may have guessed, she is one of Mill Valley's most sought-after residents.

It's not merely Peg's natural charm, of which she has plenty. Peg is Bay Area hostess for a national service organization, Luncheon Is Served Inc., which specializes in assisting nonprofit groups with fund-raising projects.

Now in its 25th year, the organization has helped women's groups throughout the nation collect over 15 million dollars for projects ranging from scholarships for youngsters to Christmas parties for senior citizens, from rehabilitation programs for paraplegics to a trip to a music festival for a high school band.

LUNCHEON IS Served has been a going program in San Francisco and on the Peninsula for some time, but really came alive in Marin County only after Peg Hardy took over its leadership a little more than a year ago.

"This is the most rewarding work I can imagine," Peg says. "I don't think of it as my work, but rather as my way of life. We hear so often these days, especially from the young people, how important it is that one's work is meaningful. I guess I'm pretty lucky, because mine is."

Suppose your club or service group has a fund-raising project in mind. You'd call Peg.

From her home office, among towering redwoods in "typically Marin" fashion, high in the hills off the Panoramic Highway, she'd recommend a luncheon or dinner.

YOU SELECT the date. Peg, and Luncheon Is Served, will provide all the food.

Luncheon Is Served's own cooks, Ruth Olson and Marion Zurfluh, also of Mill Valley, do all the preparation. Between courses, Peg entertains the guests with helpful hints on menu planning, nutrition, economical shopping and new recipes. After the meal, she awards food products as door prizes. Sponsors' coupons are also distributed to guests.

Your group has only to provide a place to hold the luncheon, appoint a handful of volunteers to assist with the serving, and sell as many tickets as you can (which Peg also furnishes) at whatever price you choose. Proceeds remain in your club treasury, except for a very small service fee, usually about $25 except for unusually large groups, to be used for your favorite project.

SOUNDS SIMPLE. What's the catch?

"No catch at all really," Peg smiles. "You might consider us the 'public relations arm' of some of the country's biggest food manufacturers. It's actually the manufacturers themselves who provide the food.

"Luncheon Is Served acts as a coordinating service, where the clubs can obtain a complete three-course meal from one source, rather than phoning a dozen or more food suppliers and then filling in the gaps from among their own members."

INVARIABLY, AFTER a luncheon, the clubwomen are pleased with the ease and fun of using the LIS service as compared to prior efforts in which club members have done all preparation.

None of the club members has spent hours in the kitchen, none has driven miles to procure food. Peg even helps with table decorations and her attractively arranged table on which the door prizes are displayed adds a bright and decorative touch to the dining area. Guests often comment on an air of elegance usually missing in less-coordinated efforts.

Wrote Mrs. Lyle Cuykendall of the Corte Madera Women's Improvement Club Inc. after that group had enjoyed Luncheon Is Served hospitality:

"Many of our women expressed their delight for an extremely entertaining day. The food was delicious, and the management of the luncheon was a credit to you and your assistants."

THERE IS sometimes more to it than simply enjoying the meal, Peg admits. Manufacturers on occasion ask the assembled ladies to "taste-test" new products or new recipes or to evaluate new packaging, and give their opinions as to whether the manufacturer should go ahead with his plans.

"Luncheon guests seem to enjoy that most of all," Peg says.

At least once, the collective opinions of several hundred clubwomen who had attended Luncheon Is Served gatherings overruled the experts of one of America's biggest companies, and the prospective product was never introduced to the market. On numerous occasions, the

"Why Did My Silk Dress Split?"

Examination of your silk dress shows that the lengthwise silk warp yarns are very fine, compared with the filling yarns. The constant bending and flexing of the fabric causes the more delicate yarns to break, often before the garment is drycleaned.

The strain from repeated bending and flexing of the garment cannot be prevented. Therefore the fault lies with the manufacturer who should have made the silk fabric with a balanced construction. This would not have permitted the warp yarns to give way and produce the splits. Unfortunately, there is no remedy for this fabric weakness.

women's opinions have resulted in modifications of product or packaging.

"WE ALSO fit right into today's consumer interests," Peg points out. "If a luncheon guest has a complaint about one of our sponsor's products, we make sure it goes directly to the manufacturer where something can be done about it. If she has a question about a product that we can't answer, we'll make sure she gets a satisfactory answer.

"Happily, we find that compliments far outnumber complaints. But we have noticed that this year, more than ever before, our sponsors are really eager to hear what their customers have to say about them and their products."

A group booking a luncheon now would be served a menu similar to the following (menus fluctuate from time to time in consideration of the sponsors' marketing programs):

APPETIZERS including Kraft's Squeez-a-Snak cheese with celery and crackers, Four Fishermen petite fish bits in Kikkoman teriyaki sauce, Swift's sausage bits, Circus pizza chips and regular and dry-roasted nuts, a crisp green salad with choice of four Bernstein's dressings and a Clamato cocktail.

These manufacturers have found that Luncheon Is Served provides not only an effective means for obtaining consumer response and to assure new products are introduced to prospective customers under optimum conditions, it also presents a simplified method for handling the many requests they receive for donated foodstuffs. Many of the sponsors now donate only through LIS.

The summer months of July and August are Peg's rest time, since luncheons are not ordinarily served during the vacation months. (This year, a group of wives did manage to talk big-hearted Peg into entertaining them with a luncheon while their husbands were engaged in a golf tournament on the Fourth of July. As on many occasions, the luncheon was combined with other activities to make a full afternoon of festivities.)

TAKING reservations for the new season starting in September occupies a good deal of Peg's vacation time. The rest she spends in volunteer work, civic affairs, camping and sewing.

A 20-year resident of Marin, she is past president of the Muir Woods Park Improvement Association.

This summer, her "vacation" will include training hostesses to operate new Luncheon Is Served units just opened in San Jose, Sacramento and Fresno.

ALTHOUGH primarily intended as a fund-raising vehicle, the Luncheon Is Servied services are available to any recognized non-profit women's civic or service club that can provide cooking facilities. A Santa Rosa association recently booked a luncheon merely to provide an inexpensive and entertaining social occasion for its members.

Her most memorable luncheon? Peg's hearty laugh indicates that most are truly memorable.

"I suppose the most outstanding would be the outdoor buffet we gave for the San Jose City Panhellenic Women last fall. There were more than 850 guests! But it was worth the effort. The club cleared over $1,500 for their scholarship fund."

MOST LUNCHEONS average 100 to 150 guests. LIS prefers groups to number 80 or more, but will on occasion cater to smaller groups.

"That Panhellenic luncheon really kept us hopping for awhile. I hope we never have another that big," Peg sighs. Then smiles, "No, on second thought, I hope we do."

Any group, whether 850 or less, interested in the services of Luncheon Is Served is invited to contact Peg Hardy at her home at 48 Ashbury Way, Mill Valley, 94941, or to telephone her — although they might find the line busy. Her telephone rings frequently, especially with those busy autumn days of club activities looming on the horizon.

ALWAYS A POPULAR spot at a Luncheon Is Served feast is the hors d'oeuvres table. It provides food processors with a splendid opportunity to subject to the exacting taste test of the guests some of the snack and specialty items that are now pouring onto the market. Here women at the Muir Woods Improvement Club choose from among the goodies.

At Last A History Of West Marin—

Jack Mason Writes Story

By DON KEOWN

"I consider it the biggest and best thing I have ever done in my life," says Jack Mason of Inverness of his newly-published book "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land."

The historian, a retired newspaper man, says his history of West Marin has such significance for him because it plows new ground, chronicling events in an area that previously had not been recorded in book form.

"And to me" he adds, "Point Reyes has become the most important part of Marin County — the section with the greatest potential."

TO SUPPORT that assertion he points to the thousands already visiting the national seashore each day, and to projections which show that those figures are certain to multiply in coming years.

To Mason, "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land" outranks even his current project, a history of early days in the entire county, tentatively entitled "Lords of Marin," which he is writing under Marin County Historical Society auspices.

"Lords of Marin," if it is so-named, will be something of a catch-all, a gathering, with the help of his researcher Helen Van Cleave Park and his archivist Dr. Leo L. Stanley, organizing and editing of available material, a good deal of which has already been published in other sources.

"WE FEEL IT will be a valuable contribution toward the perpetuation of our traditions, and a most needed one," he says.

But to Mason "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land" remains "my own thing, and thus it has a special importance to me. And it fills a real void in our record-keeping."

Mason is a native of West Marin, a member of a family that has lived on Point Reyes for five generations.

HE GRADUATED from the University of California in 1932 and was for 32 years with the Oakland Tribune including service as assistant managing editor.

He and his wife Jean now live in the old Inverness Hotel annex which they remodeled in 1959 for their home. He runs the Station House Coffee Shop in Point Reyes Station, and writes. The Masons have a married daughter, Mrs. Richard (Barbara) Gallagher, and three grandchildren in Point Reyes Station.

Mason, long interested in the preservation of Marin history and landmarks, says "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land" had its beginnings two and a half years ago when Karen Zetterquist, widow of Gustav Zetterquist, one of the last of the Point Reyes Lighthouse keepers, and herself the postmistress on the point, brought to him the original lighthouse log.

MASON FOUND the contents fascinating and working from it authored three articles for the weekly Point Reyes Light for which he regularly writes a column.

Those articles created a stir of interest among West Marin history buffs who began bringing to Mason other records, mementoes and collections.

"The columns unlocked a storehouse of history," Mason says.

HIS OWN investigations also disclosed that very little about West Marin had been put down in writing previously. "To my astonishment," he says, "I could not even find a published picture of James McMillan Shafter (a central figure in the Point Reyes story)."

Mason set about to rectify the void in the chronicles of Marin County. And as he worked on what was to become "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land." its chapters continued to appear under his byline in the Point Reyes Station.

Mason gave strong preference to documented data over personal recollections.

"OLD-TIMERS were very helpful," he says. "But the human memory is notoriously fallible, especially when reaching back through the decades and recalling stories that they heard only second hand. So I went after the written records."

And found them.

Mason believes his book's great contribution to be its clarification of the stories of the Shafter and Howard families who were the dominant influences upon early-day West Marin.

FOR INSTANCE, says Mason, his book puts to rest one of the region's oldest myths — that the Shafters acquired their huge holds out of rapacity and through the use of the old "legal fee racket" by taking over property whose holders were unable to pay the high costs of their services as attorneys.

"I found the pioneer Shafters to be, not scamps, but honorable people," says Mason.

The Shafter-Howard story that wraps up so much of West Marin's history is a story of a fortune accumulated and a fortune lost, of the wealth built up by Judge James McMillan Shafter only to have most of it evaporated by the time of his death. It is a story, too, of some violence and considerable controversy. Mason tells it candidly and with zest, but fairly.

THERE ARE chapters, too, in his book on the "riddle" of Sir Francis Drake's disputed landing, the coastal Miwok Indians, the first white claimants to the land of Point Reyes — James Richard Berry and Rafael Garcia — the murder of Dr. Andrew Randall, the pioneer dairymen the arrival of the tourists, the lighthouse and its personnel, shipwrecks, the 1906 earthquake, bootlegging and rumrunning, the schools, the ranches, the conservationists and ultimately the establishment of the national seashore.

With the dedication of the national seashore by Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson on Sept. 20, 1966, "Point Reyes had finally found the 20th Century," writes Mason.

artifacts and ends with the seashore dedication. The photographs, the author says, came from many sources.

There is also a 10-page index, a section of notes and a bibliography to enhance the book's reference value. The end pages feature maps, one showing Point Reyes historical sites, the other 1960 land ownerships.

The book is dedicated to Helen Van Cleave Park, described by Mason as "a most thorough researcher and a most dedicated historian."

THE BOOK was printed in his Point Reyes Station shop by Don DeWolfe, former editor and publisher of the Point Reyes Light who sold that newspaper in March of this year to Michael Gahagan. Mrs. DeWolfe, says Mason, hand folded 60,000 sheets of paper in assembling the book.

Steve Olmsted of Petaluma, bearer of a name that is familiar to students of Marin history, did the engravings "and a beautiful job of it, I thought."

Nine hundred copies of the book were run off in paperback, priced at $7.50. Another 100 copies in hard-cover, hand-bound by Robert Bruckman of Inverness, are priced at $25 per book.

"WE ARE talking about a 5,000-copy second edition," says Mason. "That would enable us to lower the price somewhat."

Mason says he will be happy if he can "break even" on "Point Reyes — The Solemn Land."

"Anything I might possibly make I will invest in the other history," he says.

"Lords of Marin," if that is to be the title of his Marin County history, is nearing readiness for the publisher, Mason says. Excerpts from it have been running for some time in the Point Reyes Light.

IT WILL BE dedicated to Florence Donnelly, the late Independent-Journal historian whose stories of Marin's early days have long been a special and popular feature of the I-J Marin Magazine. Manuscript she completed prior to her death continue to appear from time to time in this supplement.

Mason has in mind yet a third book on his home county.

"Lords of Marin" will focu

upon the original grantees of the county's ranchos, and upon their immediate successors. He plans to follow that with "Modern Marin," to make his coverage of the county's history complete.

THUS, IN actuality, the history-writing he has undertaken under commission from the county's historical society is a two-volume job.

The authorship of books is not an entirely new experience for Mason. Earlier he wrote "Ben's Auto Stage: A Romantic Footnote to the History of West Marin." It was the story of the stage upon which West Marinites and their visitors relied for many years for service between Point Reyes Station and Inverness, driven and later owned by Dewey Sartoris, then later operated by Ben Pedranti under Peter Scilacci's ownership.

The small book was mostly the story of Ben and Edith Pedranti, and was illustrated with historic photos plus sketches by Kent DeWolfe, the son of the then publisher of the Point Reyes Light.

THAT PREVIOUS small venture into literature did not prepare him, Mason admits, for the initial reaction locally to the appearance of "Point Reyes —The Solemn Land."

"It was almost embarrassing," Mason says. "I discovered just how history-conscious West Marin is. People started calling me on the telephone to talk and ask about the book, and the thing didn't quit ringing. I got a call at 4 o'clock in the morning."

But West Marin's limited population means that Mason will have to look elsewhere for anything approaching "mass" sales of his book

HE IS LOOKING in the direction of the tourists who are coming to Point Reyes and its national seashore in growing numbers.

"If you drove all the way from New York or Kansas to visit the Point Reyes Seashore, might not you want to take back home with you a book about the place and its history?" he asks.

And he hopes the answer is an emphatic "yes!"

REGARDLESS of its sales, Mason has the satisfied feeling that his book has anchored down the facts about West Marin's past that formerly were all too prone to shift like the sands of its beaches. He hopes, too, that he has opened up new avenues that will lead him to yet more information upon Marin's history for the two books now in process, and perhaps for others yet to come. And he hopes, finally, that he has given their just due to the Shafters, the Howards and all the others who came to West Marin and found there the peace and space that has made it a haven not only for them, but for others who have followed, like, for instance, the Jack Masons.

'Just Learning To Dance Isn't Enough Anymore'

So Belrose Studio Also Offers Classes In Acting

It is no longer enough, not if you have professional or semi-professional aspirations, to master dancing alone.

Entertainment today demands a multiplicity of talents.

That is the reasoning behind the decision of David and Marge Belrose to offer training in dramatic acting as well as dance at their establishment.

Thus the full title of their enterprise at 1415 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael, is a long one — Belrose Studio Theater School of Dance and Performing Arts.

DAVID BELROSE, sometimes assisted by his wife, serves as the drama coach.

He has been teaching acting off and on for nine years. Formerly he taught dance classes as well, but Marge Belrose now handles that part of the studio's curriculum. The versatile Belrose is also a published songwriter with two releases of his work on the Warner Brothers and Capitol labels.

THE YOUNG couple opened their studio in San Rafael 15 years ago, moving to Marin for that purpose.

"We were free to go wherever we wanted to go, and we chose Marin simply because we liked the county," they say.

At the outset it was entirely a dancing operation, teaching ballet, jazz, ballroom and tap techniques in the Pierce Building on Second Street. The ballroom dancing has since been dropped from the curriculum.

FROM THE start, however, the Belroses felt a need to incorporate instruction in acting in their program. And their opportunity came when they moved into the former Trinity Lutheran Church building across the street from the San Rafael Public Library.

"We moved in with pews, altar and pulpit still there," Mrs. Belrose says, looking back eight years.

What the Belroses had been seeking was an unused warehouse that would provide them with sufficient space for theatrical classes as well as dancing. "But the ones we looked at just wouldn't do. They were too barn-like."

THE FORMER church, however, provided ample space.

Belrose's 20 to 25 drama students almost all take dancing lessons as well. And the emphasis is upon the "lighter" kinds of acting as preparation for the musicals and the improvisations with which dancers might well find themselves involved in the integrated theater of today.

Some attention, however, is paid to straight drama as well.

MOST OF Belrose's students are girls and young women — "We would like to have more men." Ages run from 8 and 9-year-olds to the middle 20s.

The classes meet for an hour and a half once a week. Those same students generally take another hour or two hours a week of dance instruction — "although some come in every day."

The students perform in a musical each year written by Belrose and thus especially tailored for their talents.

STARTING IN September, the Belroses plan a separate department at the studio devoted specifically to musical comedy training. "It will be for the person who wants all-around instruction in connection with his future aspirations, for personal development or just for fun and as a hobby."

Included will be sufficient ballet, jazz and tap dancing plus chorus singing to equip the students for participation in musical plays.

And, as with all Belrose classes, there will be separate sessions for different age groups.

"WE THINK it is a new idea for a theatrical school, and one that really fills a contemporary need," they say.

The Belroses have at times in the past offered lessons by a professional voice coach, and they plan to re-establish that service.

Giving the Belroses yet a further tie-in with the stage is the fact that their studio theater serves as home base for young Greg Norgaard's Artists Repertory Company.

NORGAARD AND his talented troupe use it in the evenings after the Belrose classes are over and will be opening "Death of a Salesman" there Aug. 14.

The Belroses are enthusiastic about Norgaard's approach to the stage. And they hope that eventually their own theater classes will prove a useful source of talent for Norgaard's polished productions.

Meanwhile dancing continues as the major activity at the studio. Mrs. Belrose's students range from 3-year-olds to men in their late 30s. The Belroses have two children of their own, Dea, 11, and David, 14, and both take lessons. Young David's ambition: "Some day I'm going to have a television show of my own."

IF HE DOES, he'll be well prepared, from tap dancing to enunciating, from ballet to vocalizing.

And he can thank his parents who believe that "just dancing" is no longer enough for the young person eyeing a show business career or even the satisfaction of participation in amateur community programs, revues and productions.

Check Your Insurance Before You Leave

The Travel Pages

By MURRAY J BROWN

NEW YORK (UPI)—The car has been lubricated and checked by the mechanic. Mother and the children are belted in. You've made a final check and locked all the doors and windows in the house and garage.

You are ready to go. But first, a quick review. You have your credit cards and traveler checks; arranged for the care of the lawn and family pets; and informed the postman, milkman, newsboy, police, relatives and friends.

In fact, everyone seems to know of the family vacation plans.

BUT WHAT ABOUT your insurance agent? Did you call him, too?

If not, suggests Myron DuBrain, a senior vice president for Firemen's Fund American Insurance Cos. of San Francisco, get your agent on the telephone right now. He could help save you time and trouble.

"For example," DuBain said in an interview, "if you are traveling by automobile and are protected by the minimum amount of insurance required in your home state, your policy may not be accepted as security under the financial responsibility statutes in another state. Your agent can check and provide, if necessary, additional coverage."

DUBAIN NOTED that if your travel plans include Canada, the problem of being able to demonstrate financial responsibility becomes even greater.

"You must have your liability coverage in order and be able to present proof of insurance upon request," he said. "Although the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Ontario do not require such proof upon entering their borders, a minor accident can result in aggravating delays if you find it difficult to demonstrate financial responsibility."

Other provinces in Canada do require such proof, DuBain said. This usually takes the form of a government-approved card which is available on request from your insurance agent, he said.

DuBAIN WARNED that if you are planning to drive in Mexico, you must see your agent because unless you are properly informed and insured your visit "could turn into a costly nightmare."

"Insurance laws in Mexico are quite unlike those in the United States," he said, "and few U.S. travelers are aware that only insurance companies located in Mexico are recognized by Mexican law."

In addition, he said, contracts of insurance written by non-Mexican companies are not in Some U.S. insurance companies force while driving in Mexico. provide policies with a "Mexican auto endorsement" but these are meaningless, he said.

"AS A MATTER of record, the government of Mexico resents this practice and contends that U.S. companies should not extend coverage in a country where they are not licensed to do business or adjust claims," DuBain said.

He said the U.S. motorist could run into "real trouble" if involved in even a minor accident in Mexico.

DuBain stressed he was not suggesting U.S. motorists cancel auto vacations through Mexico, only that they have their agents purchase insurance from Mexican companies for the duration of their visit.

Here are some other tips from DuBain:

IF YOU ARE planning to travel by rental car, make sure to read the clauses in the agreement concerning insurance coverage. Some have restrictions that might deny coverage under certain circumstances. Your insurance agent can tell you if your own automobile insurance will help if the coverage that comes with the rental car is not adequate.

Check your agent, too, on whether your home-owners policy will protect you against loss or theft of personal belongings while traveling.

No one expects to get ill on vacation but it can happen. It is a good idea to check with your agent, or with your personnel department if you have a company group plan, to see whether your health and accident insurance will be good while traveling, especially overseas. If not, purchase extra insurance so you won't have to use your vacation money if you should have to be hospitalized.

There's Still Room At Yosemite Park

"There's room for you — and a room for you — at Yosemite National Park this summer," advises Charles Davenport who is reservation manager for Yosemite Park and Curry Co., principal concessioner.

"The words been spread around that Yosemite is crowded," he continues. "In part, the word is right. In part, the word is wrong. Some days Yosemite 'looks' crowded.

"However, while the numbers of people in the park during the day have increased in recent years, the numbers of people who stay in the park overnight are down."

Davenport pointed out that there are two ways to add enjoyment to a visit to Yosemite:

"First, stay overnight — there's too much to see at Yosemite, in the valley and in the high country that is now opening up, to whiz in and out in a day. Day visitation — in and out in your car — doesn't give you or Yosemite a chance to know and appreciate each other.

"Secondly, while there are many cars on a given day, all the visitor has to do for a private experience is to park his car and leave the beaten path in any direction. I'd bet that a walk of from 100 to 200 yards in any direction from the road would give a visitor his own spot in Yosemite."

EUROPEANS AND Americans traveling in Europe continue to enjoy a standard of comfort and luxury in train travel that has become a thing of the past for Americans at home. Switzerland is one such country where train transportation remains justly popular with the passengers. Shown on this page are some of the reasons. At upper left, the seating arrangements provide ample space so that the traveler can shift about without annoying passengers near him. And the facing seats provide a natural stimulus for the making of new friends abroad. At upper right, most long-trip trains in Switzerland feature well-stocked bars that offer the finest wines of Europe and provide a relaxed place where passengers can mingle socially. At center left, the Swiss penchant for perfection is reflected in the full-course gourmet meals served in the dining cars. Food and service are equal to that found in the best restaurants of Europe. And bottom left, specially designed ramps at Swiss stations allow cars to be loaded and unloaded easily for quick rail transportation through Alpine tunnels. The cars are leaving a car-carrying train at Airolo.

Gibraltar In Essays And Tales

Reviews Of New Reading

THE ROCK by John Masters; G.P. Putnam's Sons, 383 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

"The Rock" is billed as a novel about Gibraltar, but actually it is a combination of an historical essay and a series of tenuously linked tales used to dramatize the chronology. The result is a gear-tooth meshing of factual events and fictional people.

To minimize the disjointedness of his presentation, Masters has built his tales around the Jewish community of Gibraltar, because they have been a part of the Rock's population since pre-Roman times, regardless of who was in power.

The fictional portion of the book is really a series of tales tied together by their relationship to the history of Gibraltar and by the reappearance of successive generations of the early Jewish inhabitants. This technique is similar to the construction of "The Canterbury Tales" or the "Decameron" where the episodes are related by the circumstances of their telling, not by their content.

The historical essay is a well-researched picture of the changing historical role of Gibraltar from the cave-dwellers through the hegemony of Rome, the Moors and England to the present day.

The combination of fact and fiction serves to constantly remind the reader that the seemingly impersonal "facts" of history have a very personal impact on the lives of the people involved. As obvious as this relationship seems when stated baldly, anyone who has sat through high school and college history classes knows that only the rare teacher conveys the flesh-and-blood sense of the interrelationship between events and people.

The tales themselves are earthy and well-written. While they are not tightly connected to each other they are perceptively illustrative of the historical data, making it clearer and more memorable.

Masters, best known for his novels about British India, is a skilled craftsman, at home with both fact and fancy.

In "The Rock," Masters has separated fact and fiction and then intertwined them, rather than intermingling them more inconspicuously. The result is a history/tale, rather than an historical novel, and because of the skill of the author, it is informative and rewarding for the reader.

Beautiful Writing By Horgan Is Rare Piece Of Literature

Paul Horgan, who won a Pulitzer Prize for his "Great River: the Rio Grande in North American History," treats the Rio Grande Valley again in "The Heroic Triad."

This, however, is not a history book. It is a series of essays on the three societies making up the triad that has inhabited that valley: the Indians (primarily the Pueblos), the Spanish-Mexicans, and the Yankees.

Horgan writes beautifully. And to each of these so-different cultures he brings sympathy and understanding.

The Pueblo Indian, with his stylized pattern of life built upon what to him was religion but what to us is superstition; the Spaniard, daring all "in service of God and king" for a different sort of religion (or superstition); the American, the almost-complete individualist to whom all the continent was his for the taking in the name of "manifest destiny" — each is treated with a depth of feeling that neither damns nor deifies.

Shaking Up Historians

THE POLITICS OF HISTORY by Howard Zinn; Beacon Press, 368 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Howard Zinn, professor of government at Boston University, is a faculty activist.

Because he is an activist, Zinn challenges history itself. The historian, he holds, has an obligation to make history "relevant."

He seeks to do so in "The Politics of History." He uses bits and pieces of history to upset cherished historical traditions, to shake up the historian's own concept of the material with which he deals.

In doing so, he is not above using his personal experiences as a World War II bombardier as a part of history. In fact, this is quite in keeping with his activist role, in which he projects himself into the events he describes and becomes a partisan in what he records.

Whether the result is history is up to the reader to decide. But, like all learned activists, Zinn succeeds in disturbing and causing the reader to think and question, even while he pursues his own hypotheses with sometimes scant regard for the firmness of their bases.

American Prisons As Seen By Four Convicts

AN EYE FOR AN EYE by H. Jack Griswold, Mike Misenheimer, Art Powers and Ed Tromanhauser; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 288 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Norm Howard.

The recent newspaper articles about the infamous conditions at the Con Son prison in South Vietnam could hardly have come as a surprise to the authors of "An Eye for an Eye." What may have given them a wry chuckle is the high dudgeon in which outraged visiting American congressmen marched to the nearest microphones and cameras to tell all.

As Griswold, et. al., tells it, conditions are not so much better in some American prisons over which congressmen presumably have some influence.

"An Eye for an Eye" is a collection of essays by four inmates of Indiana State Prison. Together, they account for more than 50 years behind bars.

It is going to be easy for a lot of people to dismiss a good portion of this material as self-serving rationalization. People who do so will thus be able to sleep well. But for the rest of us, this book raised disturbing questions which are not easily laid to rest.

The authors have approached their situation intelligently, with a good deal of understanding of themselves, the people who run the prisons and of the political caprice which sometimes governs their lives.

There seems to be no question that punishment rather than rehabilitation continues to dominate prison philosophy in America. This is unfortunate since punishment stimulates revenge and thus continues a dreary cycle of crime and punishment that prevents the return of offenders to a useful place in society, results in further crimes against innocent victims and creates a kind of inflationary crime spiral.

The Nixon administration is currently pressuring congress to pass an agglomeration of so-called anti-crime bills. Some of them simply propose drastically lengthening the sentences for some crimes. In "An Eye for an Eye" the authors make a good case for the point of view that this is a waste of everyone's time.

Without forgetting that they are convicted criminals, it is possible to sympathize with the authors and to realize that locking men up in a hopeless, degrading situation ultimately degrades society itself.

Lest one approach this book as a chore, be advised that it is by turns dramatic, witty, sardonic. And it reaches a respectable level of craftsmanship throughout.

For those who attempt to stifle any discussion of penology by saying, "What about the victims of crime," there is an answer of equal sophistication to their retort: "Two wrongs do not make a right."

A Priestly Voice From A Prison

PRISON JOURNALS OF A PRIEST REVOLUTIONARY by Philip Berrigan; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 198 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Paul Brindel.

The author is a Josephite priest and a World War II combat officer, now serving a six-year federal prison sentence for destroying draft board records in Baltimore and Catonsville, Md.

"He is perhaps the first priest confined by the United States government for a political crime against the state," avers the book's editor, Vincent McGee, who transcribed most of the text from taped interviews. The author's elder brother, Daniel, a Jesuit priest, also sentenced to prison as one of the "Catonsville Nine," "went underground" several months ago while at liberty on an appeal bond.

This book poses questions as to "The Establishment" and today's society in general, and Christianity, especially Catholicism, in particular. Even as the fall of the Bastille in 1789 triggered the French revolution, the author asserts that "certainly Vatican II (the Ecumencial Council, 1962-65) is at fault with its emphasis on freedom of conscience."

He continues: "Always in the background has been the long preparation of the ground by the Catholic Worker movement . . . the challenge provided by American young values the Church should champion, put seldom does. Try as it might, the Church cannot entirely kill the Gospel or its Christ. The official Church has lost its fight to maintain control of thought; it must now rely on the indirect repression employed by other bureaucracies."

The author contends that "a man cannot be a Christian without being a revolutionary," but "revolution may be unchristian in certain instances" and that "revolution is today the most feared, and least understood word in our vocabulary." He quotes President John F. Kennedy's warning that "those who oppose peaceful revolution provoke violent revolution, " while admitting "there never has been one in an affluent society."

Paying tribute to Eldridge Cleaver's "Soul on Ice" and to the late Malcolm X, Father Berrigan insists that "when America grows up it will treasure both men who won their humanity in jail." Also, he lauds the late Bishop James A. Pike: "He stood for a questioning and socially relevant Christianity for years."

Thirty-five years ago Sinclair Lewis wrote "It Can't Happen Here!" You finish this Berrigan Manifesto with the uneasy feeling that it can happen unless. . . .

World's Feverish Sore

By DON KEOWN

THE SECOND ARAB AWAKENING by Jon Kimche; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 288 pages, $6.95.

THE MIDNIGHTERS by Rowland Barber; Crown, 304 pages, $5.95.

If there is to be a third — and probably final — world war, the experts tell us it is likely to begin in the Middle East where old and new hates are festering.

And should Americans, unhappily, find themselves critically involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict, it is unlikely that they would be any better prepared for an historical evaluation than they were in the more limited, but still ghastly, struggle in Southeast Asia.

Those Americans with any knowledge at all of the Middle East's past are usually limited to two eras, Biblical times, and the post-World War II period when the Jews re-established a homeland and fought off bitterly hostile neighbors.

The centuries in-between are almost entirely blank. This is especially true of the earlier decades of the 20th Century, prior to and during World War II. For those fateful years in the Middle East, the average American has some vague ideas of a romantic figure called Lawrence of Arabia, of Legionnaires trodding desert sands and doing battle with Arabs, and that is about all.

"The Second Arab Awakening" by Jon Kimche, veteran English newspaper and magazine editor and correspondent and co-author of "Both Sides of the Hill" covering the Palestine war of 1948, is a book designed to help fill in the void.

It is, Kimche tells us, something of a sequel to George Antonius' "The Arab Awakening," published a half-century ago, describing the first stirrings of the Arabs against Turkish domination, and read by very few of us.

With the disintegration of the Ottoman Empire, and armed with authority and privilege bestowed upon her by the Paris Conference of 1919, Great Britain became the dominant power in the Middle East. But English control was always to be precarious. Bubbling beneath that lid were all sorts of Arab aspirations that eventually erupted into full-fledged revolution against western influence and restraints. And in Palestine, the Jewish home state movement, originally under a kind of British sponsorship, ultimately was completed in the face of Anglo opposition.

With Britain no longer the self-anoited policeman for the area, a battle royal developed. International politics and oil brought the two great post-World War II powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, into the arena. France, England and other European states tried desperately to keep their feet inside the door. But the two key countries in deciding the future course of history in the Middle East were not the outside powers, but Egypt and Israel.

Kimche reviews the whole sorry record of the region for the 20th Century — the greedy, opportunistic, erratic exploitive, short-sighted occupation by the imperialists that planted so many of the bitter seeds for today's global distrust of the West. The record, too, of misrule endured by Arabs at the hands of their own inept or corrupt leaders. Kimche obviously regards Gamal Abdel Nasser as one of the worst in a long series of such disasters.

"Egypt remains the natural powerhouse of the Arab world," he writes. "So long as she is not free and healthy, the whole region will suffer. . . .there can be no Middle Eastern peace or progress so long as the Middle East's Egyptian heart remains sick."

Kimche obviously regards the Jewish accomplishments in Israel with admiration and considerable sympathy. But Israel does not escape criticism.

Israel, he says, must abandon the doctrine that its only solution to its predicament is a military one — "an admission of political bankruptcy."

Kimche does see hope for a solution of the crucial refugee problem in the new generation of Israelis and Palestinian Arabs, some of whom, he says, are beginning to ask themselves whether it is really true that their conflicts are as insoluble as they have been told by their leaders and by their backers among the Great Powers. But, he admits, they remain comparatively few.

Kimche has his own suggestion for a settlement — a "federal" formula that would set up a Palestinian Arab state along the West Bank in territory that belonged to Jordan from 1948 until 1967 when it was lost to Israel. This new state would be tied closely economically to its Jewish neighbor. The plan, Kimche says, conforms to the thinking of the late Dag Hammarskjold that "only a purely Palestinian settlement could effectively defuse the Middle Eastern situation," and that outsiders, be they Egyptian, Russian, British, American or French, serve only to complicate and heat up the problems.

Which does not mean that Americans should not sharpen their understanding of the forces involved there. A reading of Kimche's book — a tragic record of missed opportunities — will do that.

He is hard on the Arab leaders — though not on the Arab people — and no doubt will be accused of writing from a pro-Israeli stance. He cannot, however, be charged with favoring his own country or other interventionists with their arrogance and air of "honest hypocrisy." Their responsibilities for today's perils are clearly delineated. And therein may lie another lesson for Americans, to be applied to Southeast Asia, where, just possibly, we might be guilty of an "honest hypocrisy" of our own.

GAMAL ABDEL NASSER
A disaste[illegible]he Arab cause?

"THE MIDNIGHTERS," a realistic, well-written "documentary novel" by Rowland Barber, deals, too, with the Mid-East, but is concerned not with the deepest roots of the strife there, but with the momentous events of 1948 by which Israel was created.

It is based upon the experiences of Marty Ribakoff, the American pilot who became an Israeli hero, and the men who worked and flew with him in airlifting desperately-needed supplies to the beleaguered Jewish forces. Thus it is indeed, as much "documentary" as "novel."

Barber, who was Rocky Graziano's collaborator on "Somebody Up There Likes Me" and the author of "The Night They Raided Minsky's," tells how Ribakoff, the unemployed flyer and cynic, was induced to join "the world's first all-Jewish airline" without any real awareness of what lay ahead. But once in Israel, Ribakoff rediscovered his long dormant "Jewishness." The mercenary becomes the zealot.

Barber's story tells us a number of interesting truths including the part that spiritual fervor played in the Israelis' success — a factor neglected by Kimche. He shows us, too, that hard, war-toughened men can still experience emotion — and be the better for it.

But he also gives us a more subtle and disturbing insight into war's effects: That even as the participant gains in partiotic idealism, he loses in his sensitivity toward other people as individuals. He becomes totally engrossed in the cause or causes, so that the single human being virtually vanishes from his mind.

Thus we have the pilot who participated in the first bombing mission against Cairo learning that one bomb struck a movie theater and hoping, not that there was no children's matinee going on inside, but that it wasn't a William Bendix movie playing. And Ribakoff taking his 6-year-old son along on a mission and allowing him to release upon the enemy one of the bombs that was to turn men below into bits of flesh and splinters of bone.

There is, it seems, always a price the human soul must pay when it is subjected to the dehumanizing trauma of war, no matter how lofty the cause.

Barber's book, for all of that, stands as a deserved tribute to some daring and dedicated men who faced a task that seemed impossible, and performed it none the less. With all of one's misgivings about war of any kind, "The Midnighters" still makes engrossing reading that is revealing in what it tells us about inspired people in a time of ordeal and the keeping of a date with destiny.

TO THEIR believers "sciences," to the skeptics "fads," astrology, palmistry and graphology are three fields very much in vogue right now.

Zolar, self-styled "world's most popular astrologer," combines them all in "Success at Your Fingertips," published by al original paperback. The idea is that through astrological and palmistry forecasts plus handwriting analysis one can evalu- Fawcett as a 95-cent Gold Medate his personality and chart his best route toward a more satisfying life.

This one is strictly for believers.

The Firesign Theater is four talented young men of great imagination and many voices: Peter Bergman, David Ossman, Philip Austin and Philip Proctor.

They have come the closest to an American version of the madcap Goon Show of the BBC of yore, on which Peter Sellers and Spike Milligan got their start. They have been heard on KPFA in Berkeley, and these two LPs are a goldmine of way-out satire in astonishing stereo. The use of sound effects is especially excellent and the pace seldom lets up, with puns and stream-of-consciousness humor abounding.

One of the best sketches is "Temporarily Humboldt County" on the first record, which sums up in a few minutes the entire history of how the white man has done in the American Indian.

"Le Trente-Huit Cunegonde" is about a world of the future in which it is a crime not to be hip and turned-on.

The second disc gets so wild it is well-nigh indescribable.

"The Further Adventures of Nick Danger" is a dig at the current re-birth of interest in old time network radio shows of thirty years ago. You won't believe your eras — (I'd meant to say ears, but eras fits even better and demonstrates the air of the unexpected which prevades the Firesign Theater's creations in sound.)

Like Barbra Streisand, Mabel Mercer, and several other New York thrushes, Miss Nyro has a voice that doesn't nearly meet the usual requisites of beauty of "bel canto" style.

You'll probably either love or hate her and her original tunes which have been dubbed by one critic "tuna fish music." Her voice changes timbre every several notes up the scale and she swoops up into the high ones like an Apollo take-off.

I dug a few of the tunes — "Save the Country" and "Time and Love" especially. You may too but I don't guarantee it.

THE CHICAGO TRANSIT AUTHORITY — Columbia GP 8:

This top-flight rock group from Chicago has changed its name to simply "Chicago" in the many months since release of this album.

Most two-disc sets are such a letdown I really want to plug this one because of the excellence and variety it offers. The brass behind the rock sextet and the jazz influence often reminds one of Blood, Sweat and Tears, certainly on the tune "Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is?" "I'm a Man" is a tremendous blues number and "Someday" effectively uses actual sounds taped during the Chicago Convention hassle.

THELONIOUS SPHERE MONK — "Monk's Blues" — Orchestra arranged and conducted by Oliver Nelson — Columbia CS 9806;

Every Monk LP is an event worth noting and this one, although not the first to balance his angular piano improvisations against a big band, is surely the most successful. Nelson is a masterful arranger and obviously digs Thelonious, because he never covers up his piano with too heavy backing yet adds dynamically to the power and thrust of the music.

Monk favorites like "Rootie Tootie," and "Straight, No Chaser," are featured, as well as some others that were unfamiliar to this Monk fan. The smashing stereo reproduction is the final fillup to this gas of an LP.

GROFE: "The Grand Canyon Suite" — Andre Kostelanetz and His Orchestra — Columbia MS 7425:

COPLAND — "Copland Conducts Copland" — An Outdoor Overture; Our Town; Two Pieces for String Orchestra; Quiet City — London Symphony Orchestra — Columbia MS 7375:

Welcome new stereo version with the stamp of authenticity from the composer himself of four smaller and very American-sounding (if there is such a thing as that) instrumental compositions. Three of them date from around 1940, with the string orchestra pieces being an effort of the 20s.

"Our Town" is of course music from the Thornton Wilder play and film.

"Quiet City" is a brooding and atmospheric little gem which attempts to reflect thought extremely appropriate to this very minute. "The nostalgia and inner distress of a society profoundly aware of its own insecurity."

Schuller has reconstructed and edited a number of Ives compositions for chamber orchestra and produced an important single-disc collection of the amazing American composer's most avant-garde instrumental music. Included in the above album title are the "Sets" Nos. 1, 2, and 3, "Tones Roads" Nos. 1 and 3, and such short but unique pieces as the evocative "From the Steeples and the Mountains," "The Pond," and the rhythmically atonal surprises of "Over the Pavements," a scherzo penned way back in 1906!

SCHUMANN: Variations on a Theme by Clara Wieck; Kreisleriana — Vladimir Horowitz, piano — Columbia MS 7264:

More super-Romantic piano virtuosity by the long-time master of the genre. The 30-minute-length "Kreisleriana" is a fantasy-like spinning of music "composed in fire" according to Schumann's letters. It is the embodiment of Florestan as "Scenes of Childhood" is the embodiment of the introspective Eusibius. Horowitz' powers are as great as ever.

This is one of the finest solo piano albums of the year.

The spectacular pianism of Lewenthal is equalled only by his spectacular impression of himself as the foremost authority on and interpreter of virtuoso piano music of the Romantic era. The odd thing is that he is probably right.

Seems like Lewenthal's "Romantic Revival Series" is coming along at just the right time. It no longer is gauche to profess a love of Tchaikovsky or Schumann, and if you go ape over Rubinstein or Scharwenka, so much the better.

Perhaps I sound sarcastic but don't wish to be; this overheated stuff turns me on as much as anybody, especially on fine equipment with the volume way up there and chords with giant reaches of thirteenths and fourteenths crashing about the room in profusion. First stereo discing of the very exciting Rubinstein concerto.

A seven-inch stereo disc accompanies the album, featuring Lewenthal in a Lenny Bernstein-type entertaining analysis of the music. If you dig this, pick up also on the earlier album Lewenthal recorded performing the Henselt Concerto in F Minor and his own re-working of Liszt's "Totentanz" (Columbia MS 7252).

Life is easier today. . .and more complicated.

A contradiction? Not necessarily. Take lawns for instance. Go back a thousand years, and you see that man never had to worry about cutting them. It wasn't considered fashionable. But hay had to be cut, for feeding the animals. And the scythe involved fewer safety rules than does the modern power mower.

What about a short century ago?

In another tax era, the affluent could merely send his gardener out to complete the task. But with a better distribution of wealth today, virtually every household can afford a good power mower. The trick is not how to get one. But how to use it properly!

TO BEGIN with, read, understand and comply with all the rules in your operator's handbook. You've probably been mowing a lawn for years, but there's a good chance even an old pro can find one or two safety items he's been neglecting.

Here's a 10-question exam prepared by the Outdoor Power Equipment Institute to test your prowess. Grades for each question are indicated in the parentheses. Rate yourself severely; lawn safety is extremely underrated. Only a perfect score indicates a safe mower operator. An 85 to 95 means you're only near perfect — just imperfect enough to seriously hurt yourself or a loved one. Below 85, and you'd better put the mower aside and re-read your owner's manual until you've mastered the technique.

SO, HERE goes — true or false?

1. When your mower runs out of gas after you've been operating it awhile, refill the tank quickly to make sure it will re-start easily. (10)

2. Make sure children and pets are at least five feet away from an operating lawn mower. (15)

3. The latest lawn mowers, especially riding models, are powerful enough to forego the old rule about clearing a field of stones and twigs before mowing. (15)

4. It's best to cut grass while it is wet. (5)

5. It is always better to push instead of pull your mower. (10)

6. Never attempt to unclog your mower while the motor is running. (5)

7. Mow steep slopes sideways with a walk-behind mower. (10)

8. When using a riding mower, mow steep slopes up and down — in a vertical direction. (10)

9. Mowing is a fine American pastime and one of the best ways for a young child to pick up some extra change. (10)

10. If you've turned off the engine, it's safe to work on a mower. (10)

NOW FOR the answers:

1. False. Refueling a hot engine can cause the gasoline to ignite and explode. And always remember to refuel out of doors.

2. False. That's much too close. Make sure they're completely off the field. Children and pets can be seriously hurt by small objects flying from the discharge chute, or by accidentally backing into them if you use a rider mower.

3. False. Pebbles, twigs, etc., when picked up and hurled from the mower's discharge chute, can fly at bullet speeds. It makes no difference whether the machine is new or old, pusher-type or rider.

4. False. Wet grass can cause you to slip and catch your foot under any type of mower.

5. True. If you pull your mower, you can easily slip and pull it over yourself.

6. True. This is one of the most common causes of power mower accidents, when a hand gets caught in a moving blade. When clogging occurs, always shut off motor and discharge gears.

7. True. Up-and-down mowing on grades with a walk-behind power mower can cause the operator to lose control and have the mower slip onto him.

8. True. The rule for steep hill mowing is: With riding mowers — up-and-down; with walk-behind mowers — sideways.

9. False. Power mowing can be a dangerous tool for most youngsters under 16. Never allow small children near a power mower.

10. False. Without the spark-plug wire disconnected, your mower's blade can start like a plane's propeller. One turn of the blade and you're in real trouble.

How'd you make out? Less than 100? Then go back and review that part again. Better be safe than sorry.

And that beautifully trimmed lawn will be reward enough for a job well — and safely — done.

University Pamphlets Revised

Flower gardeners in California will find the University of California's "one-sheet answers" on houseplants and dahlias again available for distribution.

Both are revisions of earlier informational sheets written by the late Harry Morton Butterfield, agriculturist emeritus with the agricultural extension service and associated with the university for nearly 60 years.

Butterfield died in his Berkeley home April 5, 1970.

One of the revised publications is "Growing Dahlias," OSA-8, which covers most of the answers to dahlia production in California, from variety selection, through soil preparation, cultivation, and fertilization to post-bloom care of the plants.

The other revision is "Care of House Plants," OSA-40, which analyzes the important considerations for care, including location in the home, watering, fertilizing, repotting, and pest control. Butterfield's publication also suggests that potted plants need an occasional rest, and tells how to provide this "relaxation period" to best advantage.

The two one-sheet answers are among nearly 100 publications written by the eminent California horticulturist during his long service with the University. Many of them deal with home gardening, flowers, and ornamentals.

The two revised publications and others on gardening and floriculture may be obtained from the public service offices of agricultural extension on the Berkeley and Davis campuses of the university or through the Marin County farm adviser's office.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✔ Don't overlook the ferns when looking for plants that will lend a refreshingly cool touch to your garden. There are numerous varieties, many of which do well in Marin.

✔ And for the hanging baskets on your patio, think in terms of such beauties as the ivy geraniums, fuchsias and tuberous begonias. If you do not have such additions to your outdoor decor, take care of that oversight now.

✔ Remember that fuchsias and camellias appreciate frequent overhead sprinklings during the summer, especially when the weather is unusually warm.

✔ Continue to water the lawn regularly and deeply. If too much water runs off, your ground needs to have that hard, top crust opened up. Nurseries and hardware stores have effective tools for this job.

If You're High On A Windy Hill

Living high on a windy hill, as many Marinites do, can be refreshing, especially when the landscape utilizes plant materials that provide beauty despite this tough environment created by prevailing winds.

It can be rough going for some garden shrubs, but nurserymen offer a long list of plant materials that can take it — whether along the seashore or a windy, sun-baked inland plot.

COTONEASTERS are plants that revel in the rough going. These robust berried shrubs, from the contour-hugging Rockspray Cotoneaster to the graceful, arching Silver Leaf variety, will serve you well in any soil, with a minimum of attention to water.

For windbreak purposes, the Silver Leaf Cotoneaster excels.

The Juniper family offers a large number of beautiful candidates for breezy planting areas. There are groundcover types, medium-to-large growers which spread in attractive manners, and upright, columnar growers.

NURSERIES WILL have a large selection of Junipers for you to choose from.

Flowering shrubs? Rely on Oleanders, whose durability in all sorts of conditions have made these prolific bloomers a California favorite.

Also, Abelia Grandiflora, with its graceful growth and profusion of white flowers is hard to beat.

The compact Oregon Grape and Flax Plant rate consideration, too. The low-growing Oregon Grape variety is an ideal foundation plant and Flax, with its vaselike shape and sword-like fronds, is a stunning accent in the garden.

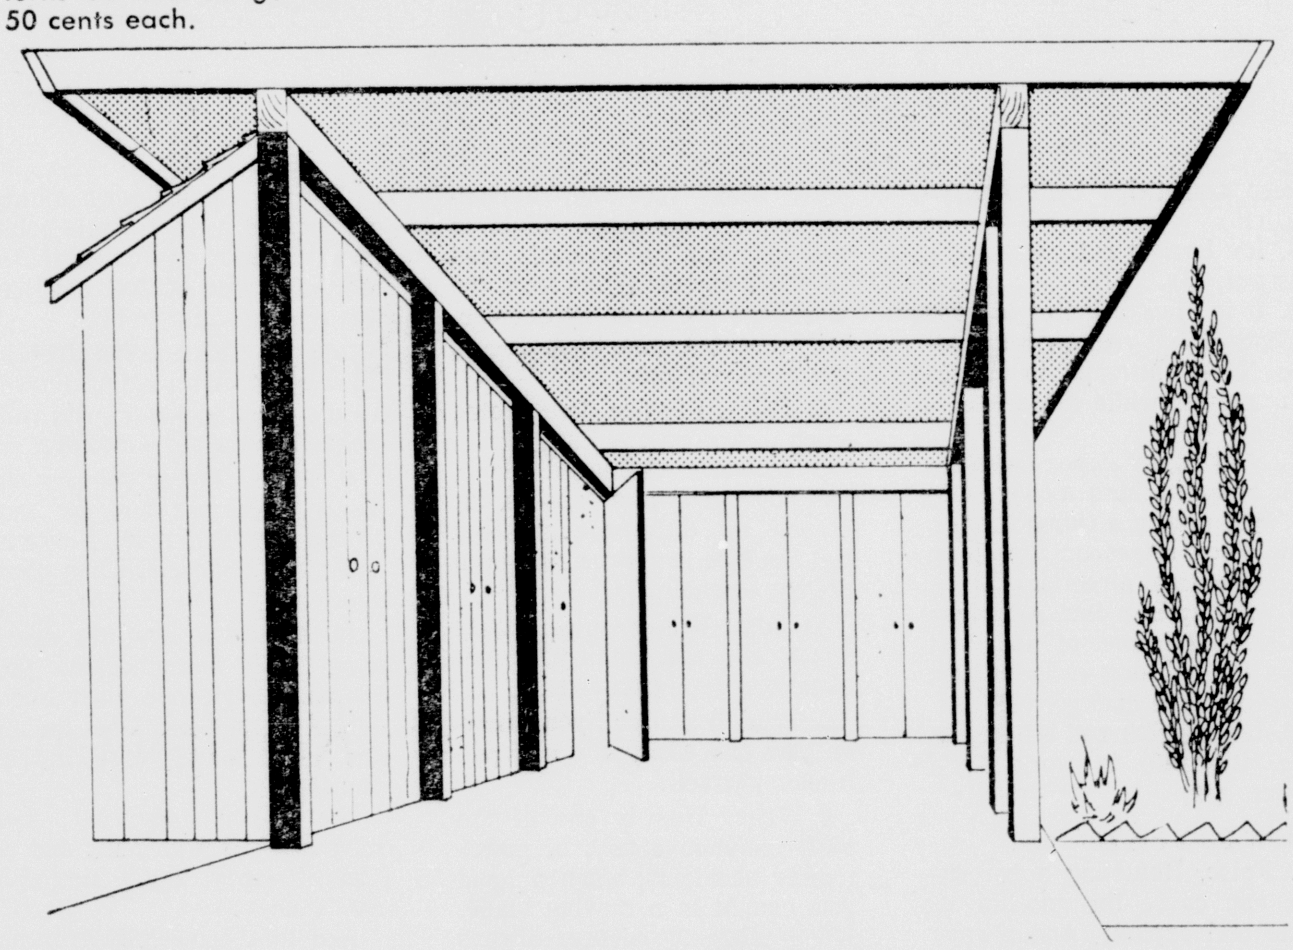
Handyman's Pages

FOR MANY Marinites, their patio is almost as important as their living room. Especially is this true during the summer months now with us. And, thanks to the new, easy-to-mix concrete products now available, anyone can pave a patio with attractive cement squares such as those shown at right. The method is outlined and the necessary patterns provided in Easi-Bild's Pattern No. 591, Pave Your Own Patio, available for 75 cents from the Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510. After you have carried out those directions and constructed a patio, there are also available Easi-Bild patterns that will permit you to build your own outdoor furniture. Terrace Table Pattern No. 326 costs 75 cents. Lawn Chair and Settee Patterns 32 and 39 go for 50 cents each.



THE CARPORT often offers an ideal site for storage. Built-in units will hold mower, wheelbarrow and other large items, and can contain shelves and hooks for smaller implements and supplies. You can build with Douglas fir one-by-fours or wider lumber. Use full-width double doors for easy access.

Build Storage Into The Carport

When building or buying a home, a couple checks out the indoor storage spaces with much care. But many people overlook the need for outdoor storage for garden and sports equipment.

One place that's almost always handy is the carport. If it isn't big enough for built-in storage, try a built-out. It's convenient and it also provides an insulating wall.

A three-foot wide addition, the length of one wall, will house mowers, skis, bikes, even fireplace wood.

Set the framework on concrete footings for a firm foundation and remove enough dirt to allow a "floor" of gravel for drainage. If you prefer, surface the floor with spaced wood decking.

Fancying Up Cement

When doing concrete work, interesting effects can be achieved by dragging a long-handled brush across the surface while it is still fairly wet. It not only gives the concrete a kind of character but makes it less slippery.

The carpeting is no problem for a handyman. Begin by attaching the outer posts and beams to the existing carport. The size and location of doors are important, so plan them for easy access to the items you expect to store.

If you house has wood siding, use matching lumber and paint or stain. It it's brick or stucco, use Douglas fir, cedar or pine and finish it to match the house trim. Slant the roof outward for drainage and cover it to match existing roofing.

Check Roof Drainage Before Rains Start

This isn't the time of year in Marin County when many of us are thinking about roof gutters and downspouts.

But it is exactly the season that we should be thinking along that line.

Now, not when the rains come, is the time for maintenance. And a simple, but faithfully executed routine, can assure you of many years of trouble-free performance from the rain-carrying system atop your roof, according to the Roof Drainage Manufacturers Institute.

A PROPERLY installed gutter should carry away rain as fast as it falls, so there must be enough pitch to properly drain out all the water.

An easy way to check is to run some water through it and watch for innocent looking little puddles that remain. These should be eliminated, because they eventually cause your gutter to rust or corrode, and are excellent breeding places for mosquitos.

To correct the condition, bend the gutter hangers slightly with a pair of pliers. Where this is not effective, the hanger may have to be replaced or repositioned.

WATCH FOR accumulated debris that clogs gutters and downspouts and traps water for long periods of time. A strainer at the point where gutter and downspout meet is often helpful.

Clean out the accumulation at this point several times yearly, most certainly after the last leaf has fallen.

Elbows in the downspout just below the eaves are likely places for leaves and debris to accumulate and clog up the drain. If not too solidly packed in, they often yield to the force of a hose.

Where pinholes and rust have made headway, clean with a wire brush, or scrape and then follow with a whisk broom. Paint the inside with a lead primer, followed by a coat of asphalt.

SMALL PINHOLES can be temporarily sealed with a fiberglass fabric which you can then protect with asphalt paint.

Peeling of gutters indicates that paint was not properly applied, or that galvanized metal was painted too soon after hanging. Ordinary galvanized steel must weather at least six months in order to etch the surface for good paint adhesion. Peeling can virtually be eliminated by specifying that gutters and downspouts be made of a specially treated steel which has been factory attached to grip paint more securely.

Where ordinary galvanized metal is used, try one of the special paints for use on this type of surface.

Factory-finished rain carrying equipment supplies the greatest insurance against unsightly peeling, the institute points out. Most manufacturers of factory painted products guarantee them in writing for a period of years.

Chain Is Useful Thing To Have Around The Yard

NEW YORK (UPI)—Chains play an important role in summer outdoor living by helping insure privacy, security and convenience.

For example, you can shield open patios or decks from wind by building a simple privacy barrier of lengths of fiberglass panels, fastened to wooden or metal posts by short lengths of chains. Panels may also be of painted exterior plywood or heavy-duty canvas.

And for more convenient outdoor cookery, you can build chain-hung tables or shelves from walls or fence rails adjoining your barbecue area.

OTHER EASY and economical ways to use chains to advantage include:

—Keep young children safer on decks and raised porches or terraces by stretching three lengths of chain about a foot apart between posts at least four feet high.

—Make an ever-ready dog run for the family pooch by extending a wire between trees or buildings and fastening a chain to the wire to permit freedom of movement.

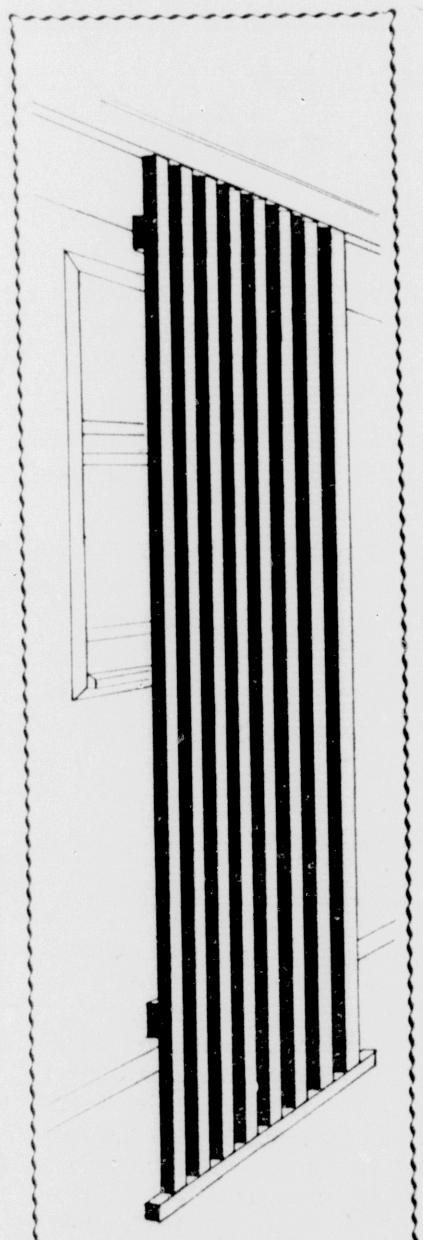
—Protect lawns and flower beds with barriers made by extending a single piece of chain between metal posts about three feet high.

—Protect lawn furniture from theft by securing it with chains to nearby trees or buildings. This same precaution can be taken with bicycles, scooters, lawn mowers and other gardening equipment stored in garages where doors or locks may be vulnerable.

—Define limits of your yard's outdoor parking areas with single-strand chain fence to guide visitors' cars and protect lawns from damage.

—A chain across the street entrance of your driveway will discourage random entrance by trucks or motorists looking for shortcuts. A padlocked chain across your carport will help deter car thieves. Many motorists go a step further—chaining their parked cars to street signs or trees.

—Be sure that hanging container plants or any decorative accessories are equipped with sufficiently strong chain. You can easily do this by weighing pot plants or other material you plan to hang and asking your hardware store for the proper strength chains. All new chains are identified according to their "working load limits."



A WOODEN screen can provide privacy, shut out an ugly view and serve as an attractive addition to your home. A screen such as this one can be built of western pine or Douglas fir two-by-two lumber mounted on a two-by-two-inch base, and braced with horizontal two-by-fours.

Wood Door Will Give Desk Space

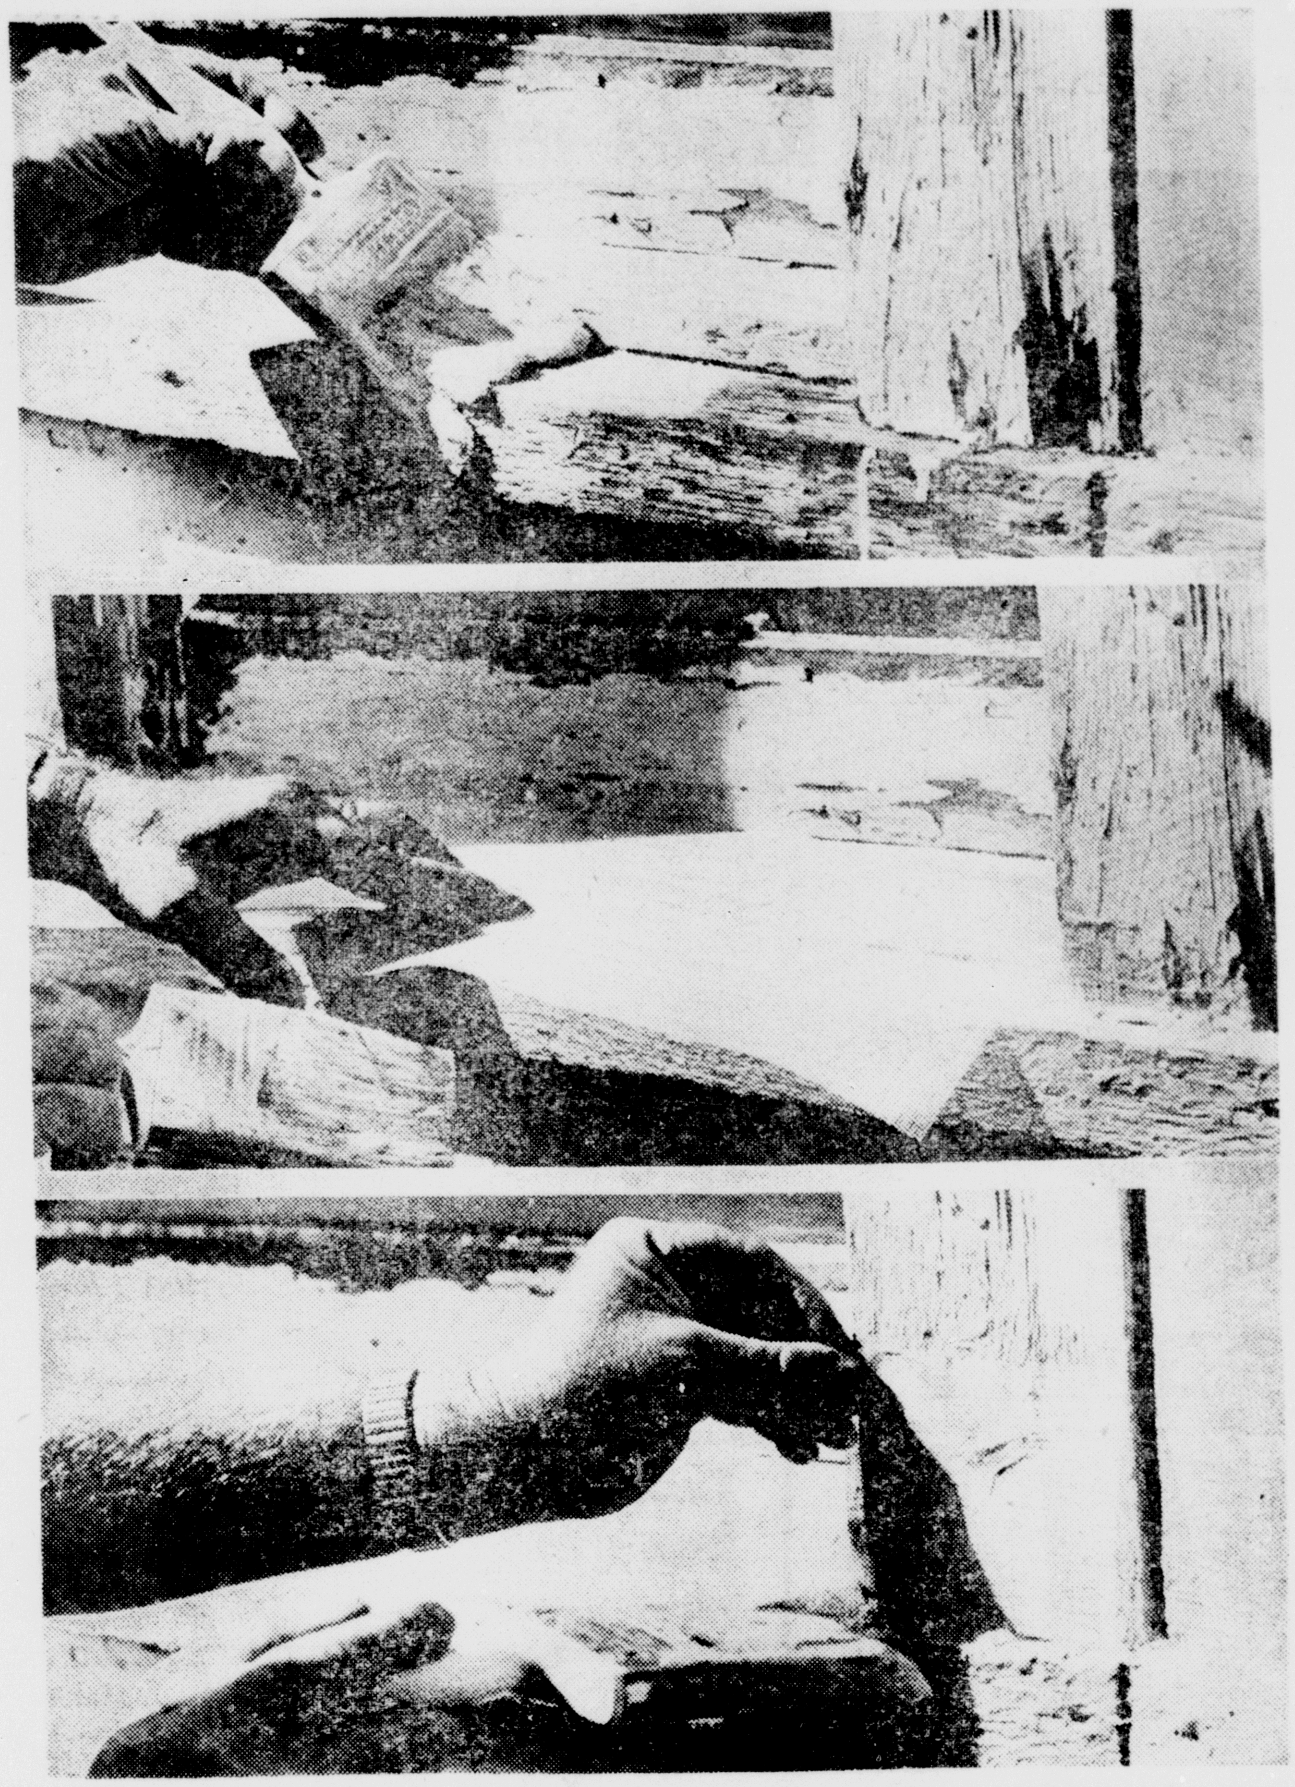
Want to encourage the back-to-schoolers in your family to hit the books? Give them desk space with lots of elbow room.

One very simple method is to buy a ready-made flush wood door, rest it in a horizontal support attached to the wall, and suspend the outer corners on chains attached to either a center ceiling hook, or one on each side if preferred.

Nail a two-by-two-inch piece the same length as the door-desk, and in the same finish, along the wall 30 inches from the floor — or lower for smaller fry. Screw in a heavy hook, or hooks, to a ceiling joist, and attach chains at the outer corners of the desk. The solid door provides a handsome, sturdy working surface.

For the more ambitious handyman, shelving or wood file dividers may be attached to the desk above or below the working surface. If extra strength is needed, you can install diagonal braces, made from two-by-fours, between the baseboard and the outer corners of the desk.

Take care to provide a chair of proper height and encouraging a good posture, to complete a perfect study set-up.



THREE STEPS IN the restoration of weather-worn wood window sills are illustrated in the picture series above. First, the sill is coated with a mastic compound. Then glass fabric cut to size is applied to the surface and face of the sill. Finally, after drying, the entire surface is given another coating of the mastic compound. Badly deteriorated sills are a common problem in older Marin homes, particularly those with a heavy condensation of moisture upon the window glass.

A New Technique That Restores Wood Sills Damaged By Water

Waterproofing and resurfacing of wood window sills is simplified by a new system which utilizes a mastic compound and glass fabric. Even badly deteriorated sills are quickly and inexpensively repaired.

The entire sill is coated with the mastic compound, then glass fabric (previously cut to size and shape) is applied to surface and face of sill, and smoothed into place, while being imbedded into the compound. Butted seams and cracks are also covered.

MASTIC IS LEFT to dry until it becomes tacky.

Following this, the entire surface is recoated with the mastic compound, then smoothed into a new surface, using the inexpensive applicator.

Following this waterproofing and resurfacing procedure, repair should be left to dry, preferably overnight. Renewed sill can be primed and painted according to paint manufacturer's directions. The work can be done from inside the building or from the outside.

SILLS ARE THE most vulnerable spot on any building, as they present a natural gathering place for moisture and condensation. Sills receive more direct sunlight than building walls and must withstand temperature cycles with moisture in direct contact. As a result, paint on sills weathers three times as fast as paint on the rest of the frame and sash.

Paint films rupture quickly, frequently crack and peel, contributing further to the deterioration of sills.

PETER PALMER finds Francine York a surprisingly affectionate hostess at what he thought was to be a square gathering in the "Love and the Wild Party" segment on "Love, American Style," Friday at 10 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

New Faces Join Danny

There will be at least two new regular faces on "The Danny Thomas Show," which comes back in the fall after an absence of several seasons, this time to the ABC network, where, incidentally, the original long-long-run series started life and almost expired in its first season, being rescued by transfer to CBS.

The new faces will be Rosey Grier, former pro football star who has the role of accompanist to night club entertainer Danny Thomas Williams, and Michael Hughes, playing Danny's six-year-old grandson. Time does march on. Back will be such familiars as Marjorie Lord as Mrs. Williams, Angela Cartwright as their teen-aged daughter, Rusty Hamer as an adult son, wonderful Hans Conried as Uncle Toonoose and Sid Melton as the nightclub owner.
